Latest News from the Traveling Elders.

We have before us a compilation of letters received from the Elders, who were sent out last Spring on missions through the States, and Canada. To redeem a promise made by us through the Guardian some time since, and to satisfy our friends abroad relative to repeated inquiries made by them, as to their progress of these Elders, and their different fields of labor, we consider ourselves under obligation to subjoin the following extracts and comments.

The first before us, is a letter from Elder James Wareham, Springfield, Ohio, dated August 19th. Mr. W. says: "I embrace this opportunity to inform you that I am well, and have been ever since I left home. I have nothing of importance to write at present. I have been hunting up some of our brethren, and have found quite a number of them: some in good spirits---others in doubt. I have been preaching in the vicinity of Springfield, and Catawba, but have not baptized any yet; some have expressed a belief in the doctrine, and are on a balance because they possess a considerable amount of property, &c.

Elder Royal S Cutler, writes from Neversink, Sullivan County, New York, under date of the 1st ult.; but does not say anything relative to the progress of the work of God in that region of country.

Elder Isaac Bullock, dates one of his letters, September 2d, at Bolton, Warren County, New York; at which place he received quite a number of subscribers for the Guardian; but said nothing relative to the prospects before him, or the progress made in spreading the word of life, or the Gospel of salvation in that section.

Elder James McGaw, writes from Grimes Co., Texas, under date of the 21 ult., and says:

"After being seperated from you some considerable time, I now write, and state, that I arrived in Texas safely after a month's voyage,—found the Saints in this region generally well; the work appears to be moving slowly, but steadily, and I am still in hopes of performing a good work before I leave this place. I have baptized a few since I returned. I have been preaching principally to the Saints as yet; but expect shortly to start out to different places, where I have been invited, and strongly anticipate to find a number of good and virtuous hearers. I have talked to the Saints about gathering, and with but few exceptions they say, that they will be prepared to leave next Spring."

The following is from the pen of Elder John Murray, Lasalle, Monroe County, Michigan, dated Sept. 6th. Mr. M. says:

"I again embrace the opportunity of writing to you a few lines, to inform you of my welfare, and how the work of the Lord is progressing in this locality. I have been instrumental in the hands of the Lord, of baptizing into the Church eight persons since my last communication to your office, &c., &c."

Elder David James Ross, writes from Yates, Orleans County, New York; his communication is dated Sept. 13th, the purport of which is as follows: "I am well at present. I get full houses; but few receive my testimony in this region."

Elder David Candland, communicates from Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he says, he was warmly received by the Saints. His letter is dated Sept. 23th, and contains the following intelligence:

"My labors here have been of the kind peculiar to preachers of the Latter-day Saints. I would have preferred to be the first one here, but I find that some have been before me in years past, and instead of leaving the way open, it is closed, through some unwise course of theirs. Allow me to say, that it is a difficulty of no easy kind, to warm, revive, and Kindle anew the spark of truth, whose gentle and refulgent rays have been beclouded by acts of ill-repaid confidence and esteem reposed in the Elders. A second cause of trial here, is the constant visits of a STRANGITE ELDER, who, as soon as I have any on the eve of baptism, he, by a smooth and oily tongue upsets them; he is like Alexander the Coppersmith, he does me much harm. He solicited an interview privately, which I declined, and gave for my reasons that as I had replied to him, it would suit me better to have witnesses present, which he accepted. When we met, he promised to renounce the matter if I could show a single error; this I did, and more than one, but he would not renounce, and so I counted him among the liars, where he, like Judas will have his place, &c."

September the 15th, is the date of a second letter received from Elder Cutler, written at the same place as the former, enclosing a list of additional subscribers for the Guardian, and says: That he expects to return home next Spring.

The spirit and sentiment of this letter shows that he is well, and doing well. Those under his care or tuition, would do well not to despise his counsels because of his youth, for we consider him a very exemplary young man, and earnest in the work of truth, to which he is appointed a minister.

Elder James W. Bay, writes from Cleveland, Ohio, under the same date, and gives cheering accounts of that section of country; he says, that several have been added to the Church there of late.

The last accounts from Elder Isaac Bullock, is dated Sept. 18th, Moira, Franklin County, New York; during his stay at Bolton, Warren County, he says: that he baptized five persons—ordained two Elders, and one Deacon,—organized a Branch numbering twelve members, and left them in good spirits. Furthermore he says; that he visited the old broken down Branches—some that fell off, turned from their evil ways and brought forth fruit meet for repentance; therefore he baptized them over again, and left them enjoying the spirit of God, and the fellowship of their new adopted brethren. He further states, that he finds it very difficult to convince some of the eastern Saints the importance of gathering, and assigns as a reason for their reluctance, "Prosperity in things pertaining to this life, and their love for the leeks and onions of Egypt." Query! Have the cares of the world, and the deceitfulness of riches choked the word? We say: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Elder A. D. Boynton, when last heard from, was in the State of Massachusetts, performing a good work.

All the comments we have to offer on the foregoing extracts, are simply, that we are always glad to hear of the advancement of truth and righteousness, through the efforts of the servants of the Most High appointed for that purpose. If those heralds of Salvation have their eye single to the performance of that work to which they have been set apart and sent forth; they will retain the spirit of the Lord—honor their Priesthood, and be a blessing to all the honest they may in their travels come in contact with. TRUTH has a charm, an influence, a power, and a virtue that flows from it; although its spirit may not be discerned by the natural eye, nor felt by a polluted heart, yet, that charm—that influence—that power, and that virtue is felt, when an honest and unprejudiced mind comes in contact with the gentle, but powerful words of its possessor.

The Scripture says: "Be ye clean, ye that bear the vessels of the Lord," also, "let your light (not darkness,) so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven."

Then shall your presence, like suns in their circuit,
Revive and illumine all persons of worth;
And as a reward for the light you exhibit,
The life that's eternal is yours on the earth.

Remember the Poor.

At this inclement season of the year, when frost and cold weather are about to set in, we consider it the duty of all Saints in this section of country to remember the Poor, the Widow, and the Fatherless, and to minister to their necessities, such things as they may stand in need of. In the first place, wood is wanted to warm their hearths, and raise their drooping spirits from under those miasmatic and malarious influences, which of late have made their appearance through the stagnant waters remaining in the swamps and creeks, since the heavy rains we had last Spring. These noxious vapors have produced chills and fever—fever and ague, and intermittent fevers, and we are sorry to say that the poor have not escaped their deleterious effects. Can we consistently ask our Father who is in Heaven, to bless and preserve us, if our ears are deaf to the cry of the widow, and to the moaning of the orphan in their times of distress and want? The Apostle John said on one occasion: "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" "But whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" We say it cannot; and furthermore, the measure we mete out to others, we must expect to receive in return. He, whose compassionate and merciful heart leads him to works of kindness and charity, shall in a future day reap the reward of well doing.

Man should take into consideration the important fact, that no man liveth unto himself, neither dieth unto himself, especially the Saints; because we are all placed here individually, as part of the great whole, bearing that relationship to each other, that the nature of our callings and stations in life, fit us for.

The Bishop says: that he is out of flour, wood, and many other things necessary for to place the poor and the needy in a comfortable situation. Will the Saints let the cries of the destitute ascend into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, while plenty surrounds their domicile circle? Shall the moans of the orphan penetrate through the blue vault of Heaven for bread, while the Saints have it, and to spare? Shall we as a community look upon the widow's cold hearth with careless indifference, while our teams are perhaps wandering on the prairie, and we ourselves loitering from store to store, doing nothing but in some person's way who is perhaps industriously engaged? We say brethren arise, and put on the mantle of charity which is the bond of perfectness and peace.

A religious profession is good as far as it goes; but the practical part, is that which makes every man and woman perfect. "It is not he that says: Lord! Lord!! that will receive the Crown; it is the man that doeth the will of our Father who is in Heaven. To whom do we look for aid when our trouble comes? We answer, to our friends and our God; what our friends cannot do, God will. In the same ratio the poor of the Church looks for help from their friends who have the means, and if they cannot obtain help from them; they will appeal their case to a higher tribunal.

We say that the blessings of the Almighty cannot fail to pour out their rich contents in copious effusion, on the head of him or her, who kindly condescends to visit the widow and the fatherless, and who ministers to them in their distresses. The Saint who is blind to these things, cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was cleansed from his old sins.

From Hon. John M. Burnhisel.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Sept. 28, 1851.

DEAR BROTHER—I arrived here this afternoon from Salt Lake City. Elder Hyde probably set out on his return, about the 15th instant., accompanied by Elder Ezra T. Benson, Jedediah Grant, and others. The good people of the Territory of Utah have done me the honor to elect me their Representative to the 32d Congress of the United States. Should you deem this event worthy of notice in the Guardian, please to say that I am neutral in politics. In haste, I am truly yours,

JOHN M. BERNHISEL.

Meat.

Of late several persons have brought meat to Kanesville, not fit to be used. We caution the citizens to be careful of whom they purchase hereafter, if they place any value upon their own lives. Our intention is not to prevent any person from bringing meat into market; but to save our friends from using that which is certainly injurious to health. In the absence of an inspector, the people must be their own judges.

More Indian Outrage.

The Agent, Major J. E. Barrow's Life Threatened.

On the 10th inst., we received a letter from Major J. E. Barrow, Agent for the Omahas, Ottoe, and Pawnee Indians, dated the previous day at Bellevue, Nebraska Territory. The purport of the letter is as follows:

"I am under the necessity of asking you to get fifty men, and their horses to come down as soon as possible. The Omaha Indians are becoming so impudent and dangerous, that they want chastisement. YOUNG ELK, their Chief, drew his gun on me this morning, and threatened to kill me. This was done in consequence of my threatening to iron him for some of his, and his young men's misdemeanors toward the whites. Some thirty of them loaded their guns, and the Chief told me that I would have to Iron all of them if I attempted it with ELK."

On receipt of the Major's letter the citizens of this place called a mass meeting, and by the voice of that meeting a committee of three were appointed to wait upon Mr. Barrow, to ascertain the real cause, or origin of the difficulty; but before their arrival at Bellevue, the Major's residence, the Indians left on their Fall hunt; consequently no further steps were taken.

We think, that if the Major had the force necessary at his command, that a different state of things would be presented; not only with the Indians, but along the Frontier.

It is high time that the outrageous conduct of the Omaha Indians should be checked; and it is well known, that no Agent, let him be whom he may, can put a savage tribe of Indians under subjection, without the power to accomplish what is undertaken by force. It has been ascertaind beyond doubt, that the young Chief called ELK, is the most depraved Counsellor that traverse the western prairies; he is not only wicked, and a notorious thief himself, but he counsels his young men to act in the same manner.

We do not wish to be understood that we have any private pique, or cherish any malicious or hostile intentions toward ELK, or his associates; but being placed as we are on this Frontier, we have every facility to know just how these matters stand; and knowing, we consider it our duty to give publicity to the facts, so that emigrants, and citizens of the States may know the precarious situation in which their western brethren are placed. Government should station more Forts along the line, and convince the Indians by the rod, if they will not comply to keep the peace upon more amicable terms, that their is sufficient strength in the Government to execute its own business, and defend the rights of its lawful subjects. We sincerely hope and trust, that something will be done soon, to curtail the further violent acts of these savage Marauders.

Books.

We have still on hand at this Office, a supply of the latest edition of Hymn Books, Doctrine and Covenants, and Books of Mormon; also School Books and Stationary, which we are ready to sell cheap for cash only.

Wood! Wood!!

We are still in want of Wood to keep the Printers warm. The market price we will allow for good dry Cord Wood on subscription for the Guardian, or indebteiness to the office for the paper Come on, we are ready! Our Devil says: if fuel for fire is not furnished him quickly, he will quit work.

Some of the Products of Pottawatamie County.

Alvin Nichols who resides a few miles from this town, handed us a few days ago a Squash weighing sixty-four pounds.

John Huntington, a resident of town, presented us with a green Tomato weighing a pound and a half: also a Radish weighing four pounds and fourteen ounces.

Doctor Luke Johnson says: that he has raised this season several Beets, that will weigh fifteen pounds each.

Who can beat these?

Good sense is invariably found connected with good nature.

Emigration.

Within the past few days—since the advent of the present month—we have noticed, with pleasure, such accessions of movers and travelers in our midst, as indicate the commencement of an active Fall emigration to our favored State. From every point around and about us, we also hear of large additions to the population and wealth of Iowa. Every part of the State seems to be rampant with improvement, notwithstanding the discouragements of an unexampled Spring; and all the visible signs indicate that, as a commonwealth, we are progressing with giant strides in the onward march to greatness. Since the bursting of the gilded California gold bubble, which lured thousands from the sober but more certain walks of agricultural and mechanical industry, the superior advantages of a western home are beginning to be more appreciated and sought for by the surplus population of the eastern States; and large numbers of such are flocking to the fertile plains and thriving towns of Iowa. We bid them all a hearty welcome, and beg leave to assure "the rest of mankind" that we have plenty of room for more.—[Iowa Reporter.

Still they Come! Come Hither, and See Us Also!!

The richest soil in the State of Iowa lies adjacent to the Missouri River; and several good judges, who lately visited this section of country, have pronounced it the paradise of this State, for fertility and luxuriance. Emigrants who have a desire to possess good farms, good houses, good water,—pleasant and healthy locations, will please come to Kanesville, and view the surrounding country before you purchase elsewhere. On the record of the land claim Agent, at this place, we noticed lately, hundreds of valuable improvements for sale at a very low figure; these improvements are in good repair with good houses on them, and other appurtenances suitable to make the farmer's home comfortable. The climate here is very healthy also, as a general thing the atmosphere is clear and cool, and very bracing to the human system; these, with many other advantages too numerous to mention, we think cannot fail to be duly appreciated by any and every person who are on the move, in pursuit of a home in the West. Come and see then, all of you may judge for yourselves, whether we are advancing the truth, or not.

The Ottoes and Omahas Vaccinated.

Maj. J. E. Barrow, Agent for the above named Indians was in town a few deysago; and informed us that he had employed Dr. Sikes, of St. Joseph to vaccinate the above tribes, so as to be a preventive against the Small Pox, which is said to have proved very fatal to several tribes of Indians for the last few years. The Major says: that he has undertaken this course upon his own responsibility, but he thinks that Government will liquidate the expenses growing out of this measure, as it must be a great benefit to the Indians in a future day, and also be the means, perhaps of ingrafting in their bosom gratitude toward the Major and his white brethren on this frontier.

Probable Antiquity of Gold Mining in California.

About a mile above the town of Porterfield, or lower crossing of Sutter's Creek, Messrs. Palmer and White, while engaged in mining in a flat, at the depth of five feet from the surface, discovered a rastra or mill, such as is now used for grinding quartz. There is every appearance of this rastra having been used, as a quantity of crushed stone was found in it. Extensive veins of gold bearing quartz and rich ravines have been found in this vicinity, near one which is worked by Mr. Bigelow, this wonder is to be seen.—[St. Louis Union.

Mormonism.

A Correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger, writing from Nauvoo, states that "Mormonism at this day is as different and distinct from anything which the Prophet Smith ever taught or ordained, as Mahometanism is different from Christianity. The sect is already split into seven different bodies, each repudiating the other. These are as follows: "Rigdonites, who are the simon pure of the sect, are scattered throughout the land; Brighamites, usurpers, occupying the Valleys of Utah; Strangites, at Force, Beaver Island, Lake Michigan; Hydites squatters on the unsurveyed public lands in Western Iowa—Kanesville their head-quarters; Cutlerites, settled on Silver Creek, Mills County, Iowa; Brewsterites, at Socorro, New Mexico; Bishopites, at Kirkland, Lake County, Ohio. The Strangites, Brewsterites, and Bishopites, are new lights; the Cutlerites are reformers; and the Hydites are the Whig branch of the usurpers of the Government of the Church after the assassination of Prophet Smith."

We beg leave to differ materially with the Correspondent of the "Philadelphia Ledger," where he repudiates the Brighamites and Hydeites, as being usurpers over the other simon-pures. If the Correspondent of the Ledger would reverse the simon-pures, and give place to Br. Brigham at the head of the Church, and Elder Hyde President of the Twelve Apostles of the last days, he would be a little nigher the truth than he now is.

As to the appellation of Brighamites and Hydeites, we know of no such divisions, neither do they exist, except in the brain of some frenzy old fool, who, perhaps knows no better. Presidents Brigham and Hyde, are brethren in the same cause,—members of the same Church, (the Church of Christ,) and undivided in their feeling, sentiment, and spirit.

Perhaps the Correspondent of the Ledger has made selection of Rigdon, as PRESIDENT of his Church! If so, we have no fault to find; two ingredients of opposite qualities, sometimes form a good compound. So says Chemistry, and no doubt Philosophy would chime in also.

District Court.

This Court has been in session since the 6th inst. Judge Slaon has been very sick, through a severe attack of chills and fever; nevertheless he had made out to attend Court every day but one since its opening. His weakness in consequence of this sickness has delayed business to some extent; but all parties seem satisfied, and we consider that the Judge has done remarkably well under existing circumstances. All parties here now, have had a chance to know that the Judge knows his place, and that he has firmness enough to carry through what he does know, without respect to persons.

A large number of the members of the Bar were present, viz; J. C. Little, Esq., of Kanesville, Prosecuting Attorney, assisted by H. D. Johnson, (late of Indiana,) George P. Styles, of Kanesville, J. L. Sharp, and A. C. Ford, of Sidney, Fremont County, Iowa; General Bassett, of St. Joseph, Mo.; together with several other gentlemen who were admitted at this term of the Court.

Railroad Meeting.

SIDNEY, Sept. 29th, 1851.

Upon a few days notice there assembled at Sidney, (County Seat, of Fremont Co., Iowa,) September 29th, 1851, the largest Public Meeting that has been together on any former occasion at that place.

Upon motion Milton Richards, Esq., was called to the Chair; and J. L. Sharp, appointed Secretary.

Hon. Benjamin Rector, by request stated the object of the meeting to be, to respond to the call for a State Railroad Convention, to assemble at Iowa City, on 15th October next.

A. C. Ford, offered the following Resolution.

Resolved, that this County send twelve Delegates to said Convention.

Upon this Resolution sprung up an animated discussion; in which Messrs. Rector, Ford, Richards, Gastin, Sharp, Blanchard, and Fugate, participated.

The Resolution was adopted; and Messrs. Lingenfelter, M. Richards, Col. Farmer, J. L. Sharp, Fugate, Dr. Blanchard, Mr. Gastin, A. C. Ford, A. J. Singleton, A. A. Bradford, Hon. Benjamin Rector, and Mr. Calvert.

Mr. Rector, offered the following Resolution.

Resolved, that in the opinion of this meeting, that it would be impolitic to fix upon any point upon the Missouri River, until there has been a Topographical Survey of the western borders of our State. Adopted.

Resolved, that the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Guardian, and other Iowa papers friendly to the improvement.

Arrival of the Canada.

HALIFAX, Sept. 30.

The steamer Canada, from Liverpool, with dates to the 20th, arrived this morning at half past 7 o'clock; she brings 86 passengers, 15 for Halifax. Among the passengers is Sir John Harney, Lieut. Governor of this province, who returns in invigorated health.

ENGLAND.—The news is devoid of interest. Much disaster is apprehended from the potato rot in Ireland.

The overland mail from India reached London on the 18th, with advices from Calcutta to the 7th of August. It is stated that the Nigam had agreed to discharge the debt due the Indian government; some of his provinces had been occupied by the troops. A conspiracy to effect the escape of Wisiter had been discovered in Calcutta. Twenty villages around Goodeaugh had been plundered and burned by Eriholas, and it was said by a large party of native troops.

From China we learn that the rebellion was rapidly waning.

In France the government newspaper had been suspended for one month and the editor tried and imprisoned for nine months for an article on the treatment of foreigners by the French government.

France and England are decided in their determination to prevent a rupture between the United States and Spain.

GERMANY.—The treaty with Prussia recently concluded with Havana, it is thought by some will lead to the breaking up of the whole sovereignty.

TURKEY.—The relations between the Sublime Porte and the Pacha of Egypt are assuming a hostile character—the Pacha has increased the armaments of the forts of the coast with a view to resist any attack which may be comtemplated.

Revolution in Tamaulipas.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.

Later intelligence from Texas, advises us of a Revolution having commenced on the Rio Grande, near Lareto. The insurgents assembled in considerable numbers, seized the officers of the Mexican Government, and the funds in the treasury; and marched to join Carabajal and Canales, who were at the head of the Revolutionary government. Troops were concentrating at Monterey—[Mexican troops, of course.]

[The men engaged in this enterprise are mainly from Texas, and the expedition is a marauding one, plunder being the main object.

By the O'Reilley Line.

The steamship Yacht has just arrived from Texas. She brings some additional news in regard the revolution in Tamaulipas. The revolt commenced at Camargo. The Government troops were entrenched in a church, with artillery. The Patriot forces were commanded by Carravajal, who had two companies of Texans with him.

The Mexicans had only two hundred men at Matamoras. The Patriot forces were marching on that city. It is said that the Governor has made a requisition on Matamoras for two thousand men, but that the citizens refused to raise a single man.

Horrible Steamboat Disaster.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.

The steamer Brilliant, Captain Hart, exploded her boilers yesterday, at Bayou Sara, by which it is reported more than one hundred lives lost. No certain information has yet reached us.

BOSTON, Sept. 24. P. M.

Accounts from Cherryfield, Maine, state that the whole wooded country is burning up, there being scarcely a green acre of land along the sea-board; the fire has swept over Mount Hercote destroying several houses. Hancock is suffering consierably; the roads are almost impassable from smoke and flame.

The timber of the Cutter Company has been damaged to the extent of $150.000. At Norway, Maine, Burnett's Hotel and five other buildings were destroyed by fire on Tuesday.

The Santa Fe Mail, under the charge of Griffith H. Williams, reached this place on the 25th inst—left Santa Fe on the 3d.—They met Barnes' at Chapio, Brattieson's at Little Round Mound, the outward Mail at the Arkansas, Thurston's, train at Streeters Pond, and Russell's and Childs' at the boundary line, all getting along well.

Business in Santa Fe is reported very dull, and the prospect of its growing better by no means flattering.

Colonel Summer's command, at latest accounts, was in the Navijoe County, and had lost a large number of their horses, on account of the scarcity of forage.

Married.

Died.

At Council Point, on Wednesday the 8th inst of Congestive fever, Dr. GEORGE COULSON, aged 50 years and 18 days.

Br. Coulson occupied a conspicuous place among the Saints in Pottawattamie,—he was a member of the High Council,—and President of that portion of the High Priests Quorum remaining here. He was a kind father, a good husband, and a faithful brother in the Kingdom of God, and left a wife and family to lament his loss, in connection with many warm friends. We saw him while he lay in his coffin, open to the view of his numerous friends who had gathered from different sections of the country to perform that ceremony that man owes to his fellow-man, and while gazing upon the mortal remains of the departed, our inward thoughts suggested:

That he lay like a warrior taking his rest,
With his martial cloak around him.

In this town on the 2d of October, MIZA LYONIA PRATT, infant son of William D. and Louisana Pratt, aged one year five months and thirteen days.

At Council Bluffs, on the 28th September, 1851. HANNAH FORD, in the 50th year of her age, formerly of Oneida Co., N. Y.

She died, leaving six children to mourn her loss, and in the faith of Latter Day Saints. Her death leaves a blank hard to be filled in the place where she resided. Peace to her ashes.

Fugitive Slave Riot—Two Persons Shot.

A desperate riot occurred at Christiana, Pa., in consequence of an attempt to capture a fugitive from slavery from the State of Maryland, which resulted in the instant death of the owner of the slave, Mr. Edward Gorsuch, the mortal wounding of his son, and the injury of several officers of the law. A telegraphic dispatch from Philadelphia, gives the following particulars of the tragedy:

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—The conductor of the Pennsylvania Railroad has furnished the Philadelphia Inquirer of this morning with these particulars: It appears that Mr. Gorsuch, the owner of two fugitives from Baltimore county, accompanied by his two sons, the U. S. Deputy Marshal from Baltimore, two U. S. officers from this city, (Philadelphia) and several policemen, also from this city, proceeded on Wednesday evening to Christiana, about 21 miles this side of Lancaster, for the purpose of arresting the fugitives. After a consultation between the officers, it was not deemed expedient to make the arrest until Thursday morning. The colored population in the vicinity having been informed of the nature of the visit of these officers to Christiana, held a meeting and asked the opinion of several leading abolitionists as to what course they should pursue. The answer was, as one of the most current reports states, that they should stand their ground. Accordingly about eighty negroes assembled with guns, &c., and secreted themselves in the neighboring woods and cornfields; the signal of attack on the officers was the blowing of a horn. When the officers came upon the party they were surrounded on all sides, and a deadly fire poured upon them by the negroes. At the first fire, Mr. Gorsuch, an elderly gentleman, and the owner of the fugitives, was instantly killed, and one of his sons mortally wounded; another of the party, said to be a U. S. Deputy officer from Baltimore, was also much hurt; a Philadelphia officer was fired at five times and missed. The information to the fugitive slaves, that their master and the officers were after them, is believed to have been given by two negroes from Philadelphia, who dogged the pursuing party to Christiana.

A telegraphic dispatch was received at the office of the Police Marshal, dated at Lancaster, asking that officers might be sent to West Philadelphia, to intercept the murderers, who had fled in the Slow Line. The line arrived at 5, and the dispatch did not reach the police office until quarter past 5, and then gave no description of the parties.

The Marshal telegraphed back for a description, and was answered that Mr. Chas. Brady, agent, would furnish him with one. A number of the Marshal's officers proceeded to West Philadelphia and all the other Western depots, but were too late. Two suspicious looking negroes came down in the 5 o'clock line. Several white men in the garb of "Friends" also came down, who were heard by the agent conversing on the affair. Every effort will be made to arrest the murderers.

We clip from the Deseret News, of August the 13th, the following items:

Proclamation by the Governor.

Whereas, by the sixteenth section of the Act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act to establish a Territorial Government for Utah," approved September 9th, 1850, it is enacted, "That temporarily, and until otherwise provided by law, the Governor of said Territory, may define the judicial districts of said Territory, and assign the judges who may be appointed for said Territory, to the several districts, and also appoint the times and places for holding Courts in the several counties or subdivisions, in each of said judicial districts, by proclamation to be issued by him:"

Now, therefore, I, Brigham Young, Governor of said Territory, in pursuance of the directions, and by virtue of the authority vested in me by the said Act of Congress, do hereby make proclamation, that I have defined the judicial districts of said Territory; assigned the judges appointed for said Territory to the several districts; and have also appointed the times and places for holding Courts in the several counties or subdivisions in each of the said judicial districts, as follows; to wit:

1. The City and County of Great Salt Lake, the County of Tooele, and the adjacent territory east and west, to the boundaries of the Territory, including Bridger's precinct, shall compose the first judicial district.

There shall be semi-annual terms of Court for said district, held at Great Salt Lake City, commencing on the second Tuesday of April and October, to continue each term one week, if necessary, and may adjourn to any other County in said District, if business shall require. The Honorable Lemuel G. Brandebury is assigned to said District, and will hold the Courts therein.

2. The counties of Davis and Weber, and the adjacent territory east, west, and north, to the boundaries of the Territory, shall compose the second judicial district. There shall be semi-annual terms of Court for said district, held at Ogden City, in Weber County, commencing on the second Tuesday of May and December, to continue each term one week, if necessary, and may adjourn to any other County in said District, if business shall require. The Honorable Zerubbabel Snow, is assigned to said District, and will hold the Courts therein.

3. The Counties of Utah, San Pete, and Iron, and the adjacent territory east, west, and south, to the boundaries of the Territory, shall compose the third judicial district. There shall be semi-annual terms of Court for said District, held at Provo City, in Utah County, commencing on the second Tuesday of August and February, to continue each term one week, if necessary, and may adjourn to any other County in said District if business shall require. The Honorable Perry E. Brocchus is assigned to said District, and will hold the Courts therein.

The foregoing judicial districts, assignment of judges, and times and places of holding Courts to continue, and be observed by officers of the Territory, parties interested, and all other persons, until otherwise organized, altered, or modified by the Legislative Assembly at their first or any subsequent session, as is further provided in the said sixteenth section in the Act above referred to.

L. S. Given under my hand, and the Seal of said Territory, at Great Salt Lake City, this eighth day of August, Anno Domini, eighteen hundred and fifty one.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, Governor.

B. D. HARRIS, Secretary.

The Fort Bridger Post Office has been discontinued by the Postmaster General, because it is in-expedient to continue it: those interested will understand that mailed letters for Fort Bridger, will hereafter be delivered at Salt Lake City, Post Office.—[July 31st.

J. Wesley Jones, Esq., Superintendant of the Grand Panorama of the Plains, Salt Lake, and California, has just arrived from California, with his troop of artists, and reports the following items:

Met the U. S. Mail six miles north-east of thousand spring Valley, and sundry trains of emigrants, all in good health.

A company of packers, fourteen in number, were attacked on the 9th day of August, about seven miles nort-east of steeple rocks on the Fort Hall road, about fifty Indians, supposed to be Snakes and half-breeds. The fire came from the willow bushes, and four men fell dead the first charge. The packers were but poorly prepared for fighting, their ammunition being mostly in their packs; eight men were killed, and the remaining six succeeded in making good their escape to trains in the rear and across on the Salt Lake road. The company was styled the Galena company, from Illinois. The names of the killed were as follows:—Nathan Stewart, J. R. Garlinger, John Woods, John Burton, Jordon Underwood, Capt. M. Russel, of Galena, Louis Berry, of Shullsberry, and Chamberlin, of Whitcoak Springs.

About $2000 worth of property was taken, including 12 horses and about $1000 in cash.

Mr. Jones will report in full to the U. S. Indian Agent, who will, no doubt, favor us with the report for our next.

Mr. Jones reports a great excitement in Sacramento City, the day before he left, in consequence of two men robbing a third in the streets of $500. The populace rose en masse, declaring the would demolish the jail and hang the men. The Mayor and Judge Robinson succeeded in allaying the excitement by promising to call a Court immediately, and try the prisoners, and if guilty, to pass a sentence of death by hanging, this being the law enacted by the Legislature, to take effect on the first of July, 1851 on all persons found guilty of Larceny exceeding $50. Society must be in a flourishing condition.

Mr. Jones also informs us that a company of volunteers under Gen. Winn, crossed the mountains into Carson Valley, to hunt Indians. They succeeded in killing an old squaw and a dog, which were too old to run away. The soldiers returned, after drinking the Valley dry of liquor, and kicking up a few rows.

President Orson Hyde, Elder A. Carrington, and Judge Brocchus, arrived in our Valley on Sunday eve, 17th inst. We get no general news from the States, of later dates than before mentioned. The party were robbed by the Pawnees and Omahas, as they believed; or as the Indians would say, swapped shirts with them, neglected to present their blankets in return. They appear to have had a rough and tedious passage, and confirm the strongest reports of the high water on the Western Frontier. About 500 wagons on the route. Our emigration may be expected to commence in the Valley in about two weeks: some merchant trains, perhaps this week.

Messrs. Livingston, Packard, Beach, Waddell, Arnold, and others, left for the States on 31 inst. This company met Mr. Kinkead and others at Echo Kanyon, when Mr. K. faced about for the States, and Mr. Livingston returned for the City, bringing us a large number of papers of the latest dates, Times to the 16th June, from Mr. Kinkead, with compliments, which we warmly return.

The weather continues very warm, night and day. The earth is very dry, and the waters low.

Mr. Holman, Indian Agent, has visited this place and returned to Laramie, to attend the great Council of Indians, with the Government agents, which is to take place September 1st. The sub-agents, and various tribes from this side the Pass, and interpreters, are expected to attend the Council.

Indian Depredations.

Mr. Cornelius Dunham, formerly of Jackson county, but now residing 76 miles N. E. of Kanesville, Pottawatamie Co., informs us that the Indians belonging to the West side of the Missouri are particularly troublesome to the settlers upon this side. The Sioux, Omahas and Ottoes have regularly divided the country into hunting grounds, and established the metes and grounds of each. The Indians visit the white settlers at their pleasure, and demand whatever they want, and if it is not given to them, they generally take it by force. Last January, the Omahas killed and carried off 63 sheep for Mr. Dunham at one time.

The fact is that the lands in that portion of the State are yet mostly unsurveyed, is probably one cause of these Indian interferences. The survey of the land will increase settlement, which will be an important means of increasing security; and will also ensure for the settlers a more perfect claim to the interference of Government, should these Indian depredations be continued.—[Dubuque Tribune.

NEW YORK, 22d Sept.

The advices from Havana, by the Cherokee, are to the 17th. The Spanish Consul has left for Spain. Nearly $70.000 had been subscribed for relief of the widows of those who fell in defence of the Island; the funeral obsequies of the slain were celebrated on the 9th, and crosses were distributed to the soldiers by the Captain General, after which he proceeded to Bahia Honda, to inspect in person the distribution of rewards among the people.

Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad.

The great road which is to connect the Mississippi and the Missouri is shortly to be commenced. The Directors at a meeting at Liberty, on Monday last, determined to break ground at Hannibal early in November.

THE FIRST SNOW OF THE SEASON.—A gentleman from Annapolis, Md., says that snow fell in that region on Sunday morning the 14th, the same report is given by others from other portions of the State.—[St. Louis Union, Sept. 30.

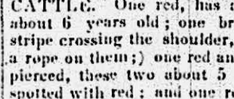
GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.



THE undersigned having been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

References.—Messrs. R. C. Wetmore & Co., N. Y. City; Dr. F. Merryweather, Cinn. Ohio; Messrs. Bacon & Hyde, William North, and Wolf & Hoppe, St. Louis, Mo.; Middleton & Riley, St. Joseph, Mo.; Major L. Bidamon, and William McLennan Esq., Nauvoo, Ill; L. E. Johnson Esq., Keokuk, Iowa; J. C. Hall, Burlington, Iowa.

Terms.—Half cash advanced on all orders, and three per cent commission on all purchases.

Letters of inquiry, or containing orders, must be post paid to receive attention.

All order should specify the kind, and quantity, and quality, of articles; also at what time they will be required. J. E. JOHNSON.

SAVANNAH HOTEL.

IN the beautiful and flourishing town of Savannah, Andrew county, Mo. The subscriber has established himself for the purpose of accommodating travelers, visitors, and friends with entertainment, embracing as good fare as this and other countries can afford. He has newly fitted up the establishment formerly occupied by Mr. James Closby—has a good Livery Stable connected with the house, where persons can be accommodated with conveyances at all times. Horses, buggies and hacks in constant readiness, and on reasonable terms.

He flatters himself that, by strict attention to the wants, and devotion to the comforts and happiness of his guests, he will share a liberal portion of public favor which he solicits. Good fare for both man and animal! Call and try the Savannah Hotel, a little west of the Court House.

THE GOLD REGIONS.
COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.

THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satisfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.

Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrived at Sacramento, this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, whilst on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

For further particulars as to the route, we refer you to the best and most correct maps, and to a directory which will be published soon.

To Oregon, California, Salt Lake Emigrants and the Trading Community generally.
PERRYS & YOUNG

WOULD respectively announce that they are now receiving at their old stand on MAIN STREET, ST. JOSEPH, direct from the Eastern markets, the largest stock of dry goods, groceries; hardware; queensware, &c., ever brought to the West. Comprising French and English broadcloths, of every variety; plain and fancy cassimeres; sattinets; blankets; calicoes; domestics; boots and shoes; hats and caps; knifes and forks; picks and shovels; tea; sugar; coffee; molasses; salt; spun cotton; dye stuffs; rope; castings, &c., &c.

We will have on hand in a few days a large and well assorted stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,

Purchased by one of the proprietors, who by long experience, is well acquainted with the wants of the emigrant.

Your attention is also invited to a large lot of

DRY CLARIFIED SUGAR,

Warranted to keep in any climate.

All persons who make this place their starting point, (and all who act wisely will do so for many reasons,) would find it much to their own interest to give us a call, before purchasing elsewhere, as we feel confident that they can find goods in our stock better suited to their wants and at lower prices than in any other House in Upper Missouri. As all persons procuring outfits, will necessarily remain in town a few days, we invite them to call and look at our goods as it will be a pleasure to us to show them. And they will have the opportunity of judging for themselves. PERRYS & YOUNG.

POETRY.

For the Frontier Guardian.

Lines on the Death of Bishop N. K. Whitney.

BY AMICUS.

Thou art gone to the grave, yet we will not deplore thee,
Though much we could wish, for they stay with us here;
The Savior again with the Saints shall restore thee,
To earth's pure domains with thy kindred friends near.

Thou art gone to the grave, yet we will not deplore thee,
Yet long we'll remember thy firmness and zeal.
When dark clouds of gloom and oppression hung o'er thee,
How much for the Saints thy warm heart could feel.

Thou art gone to the grave, yet we will not deplore thee,
For we know that thy work on the earth is well done,
And deep as thine own; is the love the Saints bore thee,
The bright crown is celestial, thy faith here has won.

Thou art gone to the grave, yet we will not deplore thee,
For thy Spirit now soars in bright mansions above,
With the martyrs and Saints who have gone there before thee,
Pure spirits and angels in the blest realms of Love.

Thou art gone to the grave, yet we will not deplore thee,
Yet sad are the hearts of thy kindred behind,
And warm were the friends from whom death sadly tore thee,
To the poor and oppressed thou wert generous and kind.

Thou art gone to the grave, yet we will not peplore thee;
For now thou art free from earth's sorrows and pain!
Soar above thou pure spirit! to celestial world's soar thee!
And in blest realms of heaven may we meet thee again.

All Thy Works Praise Thee.

W BY MARY HOWITT.

The moonbeams on the billowy deep,
The blue waves rippling on the strand,
The ocean in its peaceful sleep,
The shell that murmurs on the sand,
The cloud that dims the beaming sky,
The bow that on its bosom glows,
The sun that lights the vault on high,
The stars at midnight's calm repose:
These praise the power that arched the sky,
And robed the earth in beauty's dye.

The melody of Nature's choir,
The deep-toned anthems of the sea,
The wind that tunes a viewless lyre,
The zephyr on its pinions free,
The thunder with its thrilling notes,
The peal upon the mountain air,
The lay that through the foliage floats,
Or sinks in dying cadence there:
These all to Thee their voices raise,
A fervent voice of gushing praise.

The day-star, herald of the dawn,
As the dark shadow flit away,
The tint upon the cheek of morn,
The dew-drop gleaming on the spray—
From wild-birds in their wanderings,
From streamlets leaping to the sea,
From all earth's fair and lovely things,
Doth living praise ascend to Thee:
These with their silent tongues proclaim
The varied wonders of Thy name.

Father, Thy hand hath form'd the flower,
And flung it on the verdant lea,
Thou bad'st it ope at summer's hour,
Its hues of beauty speak of Thee.
Thy works all praise Thee: shall not man
Alike attune the grateful hymn?
Shall he not join the lofty strain,
Echoed from heart of seraphim?
We tune to Thee our humble lays,
Thy mercy, goodness, love, we praise.

MISCELLANY.

More "Patriots."

We perceive from our Southern Exchanges, that there is just reason to apprehend that efforts are likely soon to be made, by some of our restless population, to revolutionize one or two of the Mexican States most contiguous to our territory. It is not to be disguised, that there is in the United States a numerous class, who are always ready for any enterprise, however reckless, desperate, and lawless, provided only that it promised excitement, and is likely to pay well. The persons who engage in these enterprises, for the most part, affect to be overwhelmed with patriotic sympathy for the suffering and oppressed subjects or citizens of some foreign government. Many of them, we do not doubt, are honest in these professions, and not from the best motives: but a large number of these patriots are prompted alone by a restless desire for change, a morbid love of excitement, and a hope that in the chances of war they may better their condition. Hence it is entirely immaterial to them, whether it is proposed to revolutionize Cuba, to get up a "pronunciamento" in a Mexican State, to take possession of Central America, or to conquer China.

They are ready for any or all of these enterprises, and do not for a moment stop to enquire whether they are violating the law, and setting at defiance not only their duty to their own but towards foreign governments. Wherever a nation is really oppressed and is resolved upon a manful effort for freedom, they are not only entitled to our sympathy but to such aid as we can legitimately render them. But it is high time for all good citizens to discountenance and frown upon the lawless spirit of aggression which of late so often assumes the garb of patriotism, only as a flimsey disguise for a reckless spirit of adventure and rapine. Unless a stop is speedily put to this pseudo patriotism, we will find ourselves involved in endless wars with foreign nations, and will lose the respect of the whole civilized world. Our true policy is, to attend to our affairs and not to intermeddle in the domestic concerns of other nations, except in those cases where our aid is sought by an oppressed people, and then, only so far as we will be justified by the law of nations and our obligations to other governments. We trust that recent events will impress these truths upon the public mind.—[St. Louis Intell.

FIVE GOOD RULES.—Cold bathing, pure water, plain diet, a clear conscience, and a clean shirt, are indispensible to health and happiness.

A Mississippi Electioneer.

The North Mississippi Union gives the following sketch of a speech delivered at Jacnto, in that State, by D. K. Russell, a candidate for State Auditor. The Memphis Enquirer says it is a capital sketch, though not up to the original:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—I rise—but there's no use of telling you that, you know I am up, as well as I do. I am a modest man—very—but I have never lost a pleayune by it in my life—being a scarce commodity among candidates, I thought I would mention it, for fear if I didn't, you never would hear of it.

Candidates are generally considered as nuisances, but they are not, they are the politest men in the world, shake you by the hand, ask how's your family, what's the prospect for crops, &c., and I am the politest man in the State.

Davy Crockett says the politest man he ever saw, when he asked a man to drink, turned his back, so that he might drink as much as he pleased. I beat that all hollow; I give a man a chance to drink twice if he wishes, for I not only turn around, but shut my eyes. I am not only the politest man but the best electioneerer, you ought to see me shaking hands with the variations, the pump-handle, and pendalum, the crosscut, wiggle; I understand the science perfectly, and if any of the county candidates wish instructions, they must call on me.

Fellow-citizens—I was born—if I had not been, I wouldn't have been a candidate, but I am going to tell you where—'twas not in Mississippi, but 'twas on the right side of the negro line; yet that's no compliment, as the negroes are mostly born on the same side. I started in the world as poor as a church mouse, yet I came honestly by my poverty, for I inherited it, and if I did start poor, no man can't say but that I hold my own remarkably well.

Candidates generally tell you—if you think they are qualified, &c. Now I do not ask your thoughts, I ask your votes. Why there's nothing to think of, except to watch and see that Swan's name is not on your ticket, if so think to scratch it off and put mine on. I am certain that I am competent, for who ought to know better than I do? Nobody. I will allow that Swan is the best auditor in the State, that is, till I am elected—then perhaps it's not proper for me to say anything more, yet as an honest man, I am bound to say that I believe it's a grievous sin to hide anything from fellow-citizens, therefore I say that it is my private opinion publicly expressed, that I'll make the best Auditor ever in the United States.

'Tis not for honor I wish to be Auditor, for in my own county I was offered an office that was all honor—Coroner, which I respectfully declined. The Auditor's office is worth $5,000 a year, and I am in for it like a thousand of brick. To show my goodness of heart, I'll make this offer to my competitor: I am sure of being elected and he will lose something by the canvass; therefore I am willing to divide equally with him, and make these two offers—I'll take the salary, he may have the honor, or he may have the honor, and I'll take the salary. In the way of honors, I receive enough to satisfy me for life. I went to Mexico, eat pork and beans—slept in the rain and mud—and swallowed everything except live Mexicans. When I was ordered to GO, I went. CHARGE, I charged. "And break for the chapparel," you had better believe I beat a quarter nag in doing my duty.

My competitor, Swan, is a bird of golden plumage, who has been swimming for the last four years in the Audior's pond, at $5,000 a year. I am for rotation; I want to rotate him out, and to rotate myself in. There's plenty of room for him to swim outside of that pond—therefore pop in your votes for me—I'll pop him out, and pop myself in.

I am for a division of labor. Swan says he has to work all the time with his nose down upon the public grindstone. Four years must have ground it to a pint. Poor fellow, the public ought not to insist on having the handle of his mug ground clean off. I have a large, full-grown and well-blown nose, red as a beet and tough as sole leather. I rush to the post of duty, I offer it up as a sacrifice, I clap it on the grind-stone. Fellow-citizens, grind away—grind till I holler enuff, and that'll be some time first, for I'll hang like grim death to a dead African.

Time's most out. Well, I like to forgot to tell you my name. It's Daniel, in short, Dan. Not a handsome name, for my parents were poor people, who lived where the quality appropriated all the nice names, therefore they had to take what was left and divide among us—but it's as handsome as I am—R. Russel. Remember every one of you that's not Swan.

I am sure to be elected, so one and all, great and small, short and tall, when you come down to Jackson, after the election—stop at the Auditor's office—the latch string always hangs out—enter without knocking—take off your things, and make yourself at home.

[Dan crawfished out of the stand, bobbing his head like a tip-up, and amid cheers for "Dan." "A D—m Russel," and "Young Davy Crockett."

The "Donaldson and Greer" correspondence, published by the New York Herald, has worked the political destruction of all Gen. Houston's hopes for the Locofoco nomination for the Presidency. Some of the gentlemen whose letters have been published, are publishing "explanations," disclaiming any intention to go for Houston. Among these are Andrews, of Rhode Island; Giddings, of Ohio: and Brittan, of New York.

Andrews kicks at being placed in company with Giddings, and Brittan thus unceremoniously disposes of the hero of San Jacinto:

With these few words, I submit the correspondence to the public with the single remark, that no state of circumstances could induce, humble as I am, to give the least countenance to any scheme or movement for the nomination of such a man as Houston to the Presidency, and that I would not vote for him were he nominated by forty National Democratic Conventions.

P. H. BRITTAN.

The Fillibusters disbanded.

On Friday evening, the Executive Committee, who had in charge the affairs of the expedition destined for the invasion and conquest of Cuba, resolved, that the force which was rendezvoused in New Orleans, comprising some fifteen hundred men, should be disbanded. This determination of those who were supposed to hold "the sinews of war," was communicated early next morning, at the several quarters of the men, and the effect was soon visible in different parts of the city. The young men who had been lured here, from their distant homes, by the extravagant and fallacious statements of the extent of the dissaffection among the inhabitants of Cuba, and the flattering prospects of a triumphal success, which was certain to accompany them as the liberators of the island, were very indignant when they were officially apprised of the abandonment of the enterprise. Their hopes and anticipations had been elevated to an extravagant height, and the bright dreams of conquest and wealth had been sedulously encouraged by the daily intelligence received from correspondents who were on the spot, who had every opportunity of knowing what was going on, and who were of such tried and approved character, that it was impossible for them to be deceived themselves, or to deceive others. We cannot wonder at their credulity. When we review the events of the past month, and cast our eyes over the elaborate and detailed communications from Cuba correspondents, which have been endorsed by the public press, containing the most shameless fabrications, with the most abandoned prostitution of every sense of moral right, we cannot wonder at the tone of excitement to which the public mind has been pitched.

The conviction that they have been the subject of such gross deception, has produced a corresponding re-action among the friends of Cuban emancipation. On Saturday and yesterday, there was no reserve observed, and opinions were freely expressed, by no means complimentary of the designs and management of those who got up, and have thus far conducted this stupendous humbug. The feelings of disappointment and indignation that the failure of this scheme has engendered among some fifteen hundred or two thousand young and adventurous spirits from every section of the Union, will have a powerful influence in discouraging and putting a stop to any similar design that may be attempted for some time to come. We may say with confidence, that no committee, however large in numbers and respectable in character, will be able to induce the people of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Georgia, upon the faith of promises and newspapers representations, to come to New Orleans with the vieiw of embarking for Cuba invasion. They have once been deceived, and if they subject themselves again to the same fate, they must reproach no one but themselves for credulity and fatuity.

Some of the disbanded volunteers are disposed to censure the Committee, and to hold them responsible for the embarrassing position in which they are placed—This is wrong and there is no justice in such a procedure. The object of the organization of the Committee was to subsist the volunteers while here, and to facilitate their departure as soon as possible. We thought at the time, that any one who would undertake such an office, was a wonderfully hoped and sanguine man; but while we doubted his judgement, we gave him credit for honesty of intention. If the Committee have failed in their efforts, they certainly do not merit censure, and much less the violence with which they have been threatened. No one has a right to call them to account except the citizens of this and other places, who have deposited funds in their hands; and to them no doubt they will make a full expose of the manner in which they have discharged their trust. In the meantime we notice that they have not yet deserted the cause, but will make an effort to collect, from our citizens sufficient fands to defray the expenses of the volunteers to their homes. We do not know the precise number of Cuba volunteers at this time in the city—several detachments left on Saturday, and we suppose there must be some five or six hundred remaining, and who are destitute of the means of subsistence or transportation.—[N. O. Bulletin, Sept. 8.

Kossuth is Coming.

John P. Brown, Secretary of Legation at Constantinople, has written to the Mayor of New York, that on the 12th September, Kossuth and all his refugees at Kulatriah, in Asia Minor, will be liberated. He and his associates, with the exception of Count Bathyania and his lady, will at once proceed to the United States in the steamship Mississippi, which vessel has been designated for that purpose. He may, therefore, be expected in the latter part of October.

Keep Good Company.

There is a certain magic or charm in company, for it will assimilate and make you like them, by much conversation with them. If they be good company, it is a great means to make you good, or confirm you in goodness; but if they be bad, it is twenty to one but they will infect or corrupt you. Therefore, be wary and shy in choosing and entertaining, or frequenting any company or companions; be not too hasty in committing yourself to them; stand off a while till you have inquired of some (whom you know to be faithful by experience) what they are; observe what company they keep, be not too hasty to gain acquaintance, but stand off and keep a distance yet a while, till you have observed and learned touching them. Men and women who are greedy of acquaintance, or hasty in it, are oftentimes snared in ill company before they are aware, and entangled so that they cannot easily get loose from it when they would.

If it is mean to dun a man for a small debt, it is great deal meaner to wait to be dunned for a small debt.

From the Millennial Star.

The Irrationality of Schism and Dissent, Or the Errors of Modern Christendom.

BY JAMES F. BELL.

(Concluded from our Last.)

But their errors in these respects are scarcely greater than in their fallacious applications of those scriptures which contain the revelations of by-gone ages.

Although professing an almost idolatrious regard for these writings, it is remarkable that there is not a collection of books in existence concerning the true meaning of which they have so much differed in opinion, or in the application of which they have diverged to such opposite extremes. Indeed novelty of interpretation appears to have become an essential feature in each successive commentary, and a necessary condition to ensure its success. If the scriptures do really abound in difficulties and ambiguity, this fact will but furnish another reason why revelation should continue to flow through a legalised channel of living intelligences, in order that the laws of God and all the minutiæ of interesting and important matters contained therein, should not be destitute of qualified exponents. If the scriptures were written under the influence of the Holy Spirit, it is evident that the same influence and divine agency is necessary for the correct and profitable reading of them. "God is his own interpreter," and as we understand he has spoken to the prophets "in dark speeches," (that is, incomprehensible to the merely human mind) it is obvious that unless our spirits are illuminated by the spirit of the Lord, much of his instructions must remain shrouded in uncertainty. Since the confusion of tongues, language has been subject to endless innovations; and from the days of Moses to the present time, numberless new dialects have been formed; furthermore, there are hardly two persons of any one dialect who invariably adopt the same idiom. Here then is a fruitful source of diversity, and it is no wonder if the translators of the scriptures being destitute of inspiration should fail to give the correct rendering of the original in their own language; it is no doubt in a great measure owing to this, that the present translations contain so many vague and discrepant passages.

Yet, after making all due allowance for these circumstances, there are so many plain and definite passages converted into instruments of theological disputes, in consequence of their gross mis-application, that it may not be amiss to give a few instances with the view of showing how totally unwarrantable have been the conclusions deduced therefrom.

It is maintained by the Roman Church that pure religion, genuine christianity, or the Church as by Christ established was to remain on the earth, uncorrupted, unsubdued to the end of the world; this conclusion they profess to deduce from several passages of scripture, such as the following: "And lo! I am with you alway, even to the end of the world," Matt. xxviii. 20. "Upon this rock will I build my Church, and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it." With regard to the first passage I would say that the words therein contained were addressed to the Apostles only, and certainly if they proved faithful they would realise the fulfilment of the promise; the spirit of their Savior would be with them on earth, in hades or in heaven, and that "to the end of the world." But I have in the course of this article proved that the Church of Rome recognises a God, Priesthood, and Doctrine quite different from those of Christ and his Apostles, and have thereby effected a radical change in that which she admits to be essentially perfect and immutable; hence she is not the Church now if she ever was; consequently it is in vain for her to seek for support in the perversion and misapplication of these passages. Indeed some of her most eminent writers have made such ample concessions, as prove quite fatal to her pretentions both to purity and continuance; some of which I will now quote.

Bellarmine, (a notable Romanist) speaking of the times about the beginning of the 10th century, says: "In the West, and almost all the world over faith failed, and there no fear of God among them: Justice was perished from among men, and violence prevailing against equity governed the nations. Fraud, deceit, and the arts of cozenage were grown universal. All kinds of virtue gave way an useless thing, and wickedness supplied its place. The world seemed to be declining apace towards its evening, and the second coming of the Son of Man to draw near; for love was grown cold, and faith was not found upon earth. All things were in confusion, and the world looked as if it would return to its old chaos. All sorts of fornication were committed with the same freedom as if they had been lawful actions; for men neither blushed at them, nor were punished for them. Nor did the clergy live better than the people, for the Bishops were grown negligent of the duty of their place, &c. In a word, men ran themselves headlong into all vice, and all flesh had corrupted its way."—[Bell. Sacr. L. I. c. 3.

Baronius, another notable Romanist, speaks more particularly. "What was then the face of the Roman Church? how deformed—when whores, no less powerful than vile, bore the chief sway at Rome, and at their pleasure change sees, appointed bishops, and did thrust into St. Peter's see their own gallants, false popes, who would not have been mentioned in the catalogue of the Roman Popes, but only for the distinct recording of so long a succession of times." "Christ was then in a very deep sleep—and which was worse when the Lord was thus asleep there were no disciples to awaken him, being themselves all fast asleep. What kind of Cardinals, Presbyters and Deacons can we think were chosen by those monsters, when nothing is so natural as for every one to propagate his own likeness."—[Annal. tom. 10. Anno 900.

In the 15th century, Nic de Clemanqiis, who lived in that time, wrote a book upon the corrupt state of the Church, in which he says: "there was an universal degeneracy in the Church, from the very head of it to its lowest members."—c. 3.

If, then, their own writings are so explicit upon the point, it is at once utterly useless and grossly wicked to strain and pervert the Savior's words, to enable them to maintain a position so utterly untenable.

As to the second passage, there is no more support for the idea in it than in the first, as I shall clearly prove.

The Church is the body of true believers, the rock is the foundation and Christ the builder. With regard to the rock it makes little difference in the argument whether we interpret it to signify Christ, Peter or Revelation; although there is evident incongruity in confounding the builder with the foundation he builds on, and a manifest weakness in Peter as a foundation, he being part of the building which certainly is something distinct from the foundation. The foundation of Peter's knowledge which constituted him a true member of the Church, was revelation, as it is written, "flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven." Without revelation none can know God, and without the knowledge of God, we have no foundation.

Many by mis-applying St. Paul's words, "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law," and other similar passages, have concluded that no works are necessary. Now it must be borne in mind that where St. Paul speaks of works as unnecessary, he refers to the laws of Moses, and not the Gospel, the works of which are necessary, for it is written "work out your salvation with fear and trembling. Work while it is called to day, for the night cometh when no man can work." "Faith without works is dead being alone." "By works faith is made perfect." "By works a man is justified, and not by faith only." We are to be rewarded according to our works, but if we have all faith and no works, I am afraid we shall have no reward either.

Many have applied the Savior's words, "Suffer little children to come unto me," to prove infant sprinkling, but there is no more support in this passage for the idea of infant sprinkling, than there is for infant ordination. It would indeed be equally as just to conclude the one as the other. We learn from this passage and those in the context, that the Savior took them in his arms, laid his hands upon them and blessed them, but we do not learn that he baptized or ordained them, for this very reason:—there is nothing to learn it from.

As my object is not so much to recapitulate the oft-exploded errors of Apostate Christendom, as to show from reason only their fallacy and weakness, I will forbear giving any further instances, and hasten toward a conclusion. The whole matter may now be summed up in this,—from ignorance and self-interest arises a diversity of doctrines, which are confirmed by custom and popularity, handed down by tradition, and upheld by priestcraft and state policy; hence arise sects and parties—hence proceed schism and dissent—hence come strife, warfare and the clash of arms—and hence the curse of God.

The errors which I have treated upon, though comparatively few, are fundamental ones, being, in fact, the constituent elements of the spiritual darkness of the pseudo religious world. Well may the children whose minds have been illuminated by the spirit of divine truth, exclaim in wonder and astonishment as they contemplate the blindness of their progenitors;—"Surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanities, and things wherein there is no profit." "Darkness hath indeed covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people," insomuch that they have mistaken evil for good, bitter for sweet, and profound nescience for the sublimity of wisdom. Their taste has become so vitiated that the bread of life is rejected as unpalatable; hence, there has been a famine, not for bread, nor for water, but for the word of the Lord—Amos viii. 11. Therefore is the whole head already sick, and the whole heart faint; society is totally unhinged, and the moral atmosphere grossly polluted. Religious institutions have become mere state instruments for the spiritual enslavement of mankind, while temporal governments themselves, though grasping convulsively the sceptre of dominion, and maintaining their influence by the sheer force of arms, are already on the verge of ruin. They have sown the wind, they must reap the whirlwind; they carry in themselves the seeds of dissolution, and sooner or later they must crumble into dust. for the decree of God, and the inevitable fate of human schemes is written and must come to pass:—"They shall become as chaff of the summer threshing floors, and the wind shall carry them away."

But let me not conclude with a picture so dark and cheerless as this, for the Sun of Righteousness and truth is rising,—the door of the sheepfold is again open,—the voice of the good shepherd is again heard calling together his scattered sheep, who have wandered in the cloudy day, the gospel of reconciliation is again preached, great is the army of those who publish it; and under its influence factions must unite, divisions cease, and love and union prevail.

As we have now given a turn to the subject, it may not be unprofitable to devote the remainder of our space to the consideration of union, and an inquiry as to the means by which it can be promoted and sustained.

Union implies, oneness of purpose and concert of action; apart from these it is a mere name and an absolute impossibility. But these cannot exist without unammity of sentiment, and sympathy of feeling. As nothing can be without the conditions of existence, so without unanimity and sympathy there can be neither oneness of purpose nor concert of action. Furthermore, without truth there can be no unanimity. If the purpose be a false or evil one, there will inevitably arise a diversity of opinions concerning it, for error is discrepant, and its effect is to create division, while on the other hand, truth is harmonious and consistent; by it the thoughts and opinions of men, however various can be centered like converging rays in one common focus; hence, truth is indispensible to union. Where truth is recognised there faith is one, and there, in theory at least, is unanimity.

But, as the assent of the mind, and the consent of the will are not necessarily co-incident or simultaneous, and, as the one without the other would fail to produce concert of action, it is evident there is something else required, to accompany truth, and to assist in the subjugation of the will to her benign and holy laws. It must be some agent that can assimilate itself with the spirit of man, and impress thereon the force, value, and dignity of truth, so as to awaken interest, and enlist the sympathies of all ingenuous minds. Such an agent is indeed indispensable to counteract the effects of an erroneous education, and the pernicious influence of evil example. But furthermore, it must be intelligent and all-wise, were it dificient of intelligence, it could not act upon the mind at all, and were it destitute of all wisdom, it would be incapable of adapting its influence to the peculiarities of each mind and circumstance. It must also be omnipresent, unchangeable, and eternal, so that its effects may be universal, uniform, and enduring. Such an agent may with propriety be termed "the spirit of truth," and this spirit is the desideratum we are in search of.

As the spirit will reside only where truth is cherished, and as truth can be preached effectually by those only who know it, and possess this spirit, and since those who possess this spirit must, in the same degree be unanimous in sentiment, feeling and action, it follows that there will be but one priesthood, or authentic channel of instruction; no matter how many departments or degrees there may exist therein; it is, nevertheless one priesthood, one unbroken chain of living intelligences for the instruction and elevation of the human species.

Furthermore, this priesthood, or authentic channel of instruction must proceed from one recognised and acknowledged source, otherwise the whole body will be liable to err in purpose, and mistake its object

Here, then, are the essentials for the promotion of union, viz: truth to inform the mind, an all-wise spirit to influence the will, a priesthood to administer that truth, and a God to direct that priesthood. This God must endure forever, and this priesthood must continue "until we have all come in the unity of the faith," and the spirit of truth is necessary at all times to lead us into the way of "all truth," and to preserve us in the bonds of peace.

Thus, upon the grounds of reason and necessity, we have established the rationality of the gospel plan. Now the nature and object of this plan imply obedience, love, and charity; obedience to those who teach the truth; love to those who practice it, and charity toward those who know it not. Without the observance of these duties, the mere plan with all its powers would be inefficacious. It is the bounden duty, the blessed privilege, and the highest interest of all men to uphold the character and dignity of truth, and they do this most effectually when they reduce it to practice, and thus set an example worthy of imitation. Without obedience there is manifest spirit of dis-union on the part of the refractory; without love the spirit of truth and union is at once banished; and without charity we hinder the progress of truth; but, by the observance of these, the first brings us into possession of the practical benefits of truth, the second upholds and strengthens those who have received it, and the last makes us willing to sacrifice anything and everything, so that our fellow creatures also may obtain and realise it. Here, then, are the elements of union,—one God, one Priesthood, one Spirit, Truth, Obedience, Love, and Charity.

Great and glorious are the charms of union; its power is unlimited; its influence holy, its effects, order and prosperity, Peace, gladness and rejoicing abound where it is known. Happy beyond expression, yea unspeakably joyous are the people where perfect union exists; sorrow and sighing have given place to the sound of music and the voice of melody. Want, misery, disease and death, are swallowed up and forgotten in plenty, comfort, health and life. Their object is single, their feelings one, their sentiments unanimous. They change not their doctrine with the times, for times and eternities are one with them. They have one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, and one Hope of their calling, and are baptized by one Spirit into one Body. Their King is one, and his name one, and they are one with him and each other. Their lineage takes hold on heaven, with whose inhabitants they have relationship, for they are one Family and the children of the same parent.

For the Frontier Guardian.

Haste to Zion.

BY MISS A. Y. L.

Arise, arise, ye faithful Mormons,
March to the land prepared for you;
Let the Babylonish nations
See you will bid them adieu.

CHORUS— Then come away to the land of Zion,
There from tyant laws be free;
Where the Saints of Latter-days,
Have found a home and liberty.

There the faithful are now traveling,
Brigham Young is at their head;
And by the word of inspiration,
Safely home he will us lead.

CHORUS— Then come away to the land of Zion, &c.

See the heralds marching onwards
Bravely, how they clear the way,
And the message that they bring,
Will usher in a brighter day.

CHORUS—For glorious things are spoken of Zion, &c.

Joyfully they bear the tidings,
To the nations that have lain
Long in darkness, but the gospel,
Is restored to them again.

CHORUS—To gather them to the land of Zion, &c.

Then tarry not ye friends of Joseph,
In this dark benighted land,
Or you may be overtaken,
by the judgements nigh at hand.

CHORUS—Then flee! Oh flee to the land of Zion, &c.

See these nations doomed to perish,
Thrones are tottering soon they'll fall;
Still we see the busy world,
Heedless of Jehovah's call.

CHORUS—Then leave thee too, for the land of Zion, &c.

Soon behind we'll leave old Babylon,
Gladly from her shores set sail;
Yes, our country, and our kindred,
Soon we'll bid you all farewell.

CHORUS—For we are bound for the land of Zion, &c.

See the camps of Israel marching,
Onward in a mighty band,
Fearlessly they brave all danger,
For to reach the promised land.

CHORUS—For they'll safely rest in the land of Zion, &c.

Then farwell, Saints, we now must leave you,
For to Zion's happy shore;
But if we prove true and faithful,
There we'll meet to part no more.

CHORUS—Then haste and come to the land of Zion,
There we hope to meet again,
For soon the heralds will bring in,
The glorius Millennial reign.
Then haste and come to the land of Zion.

Conference Minutes.

KANESVILLE, Oct. 6th, 1851.

The Semi-annual Conference of Pottawatamie District of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, convened at the Grove at date.

Present, of the High Council of the Church at this place, George W. Harris, President, James C. Snow, Bishop Baum, B. B. Messenger, Daniel R. Williams, and Harmon Cutler; the remainder were prevented from attendance in consequence of sickness, and Court duties; the District Court being in session at that period.

Bishops present—Jacob G. Bigler, Baum, and Palmer.

Chorister—B. B. Messenger.

James C. Snow, Agent of the Council in Pottawatamie, &c., called the audience to order, when on motion, George W. Harris, was nominated to preside: Carried.

Upon motion of George W. Harris, Daniel Mackintosh was appointed Clerk.

The Choir sung, "Salvation to our God."

Prayer was offered up by James C. Snow.

The Choir sung another Hymn; after which, President Harris motioned to sustain President Brigham Young in his office, as President of the Church: Carried unanimously.

On motion, Heber C. Kimball, and Willard Richards, were sustained as his Counsellors by a unanimous vote.

On motion, Orson Hyde was sustained as President of the Twelve Apostles, by a unanimous vote; and upon the presumption that the Quorum were one in all things, they were all sustained by a unanimous conjunctive vote.

On motion, Joseph Young was sustained as Senior President of the Quorums of Seventies; also his brethren of the first Presidency of these Quorums.

On motion, John Young was sustained as President of the High Priests Quorum, and his two Counsellors in connection with him.

On motion, Orson Hyde was sustained President over the different branches of the Church, this side of the Rocky Mountains.

On motion, W. W. Lane was sustained as Presiding Bishop in the Pottawatamie purchase.

On motion, Jacob G. Bigler and Lorenzo Johnson, were sustained as his Counsellors.

On motion, W. Draper, Sen., was sustained as Patriarch of the Church, in the Pottawatamie purchase.

On motion, George W. Harris was sustained President of the High Council in Pottawatamie.

On seperate motions, the following persons were sustained members of said Council; George Coulson, James C. Snow, C. C. Pendleton, Jonathan Browning, Jacob Bigler, Jacob Baum, B. B. Messenger, Daniel R. Williams, Harmon Cutler, Abel Evans, Henry W. Miller, and E. M. Greene, Clerk.

On motion, James C. Snow was sustained as Agent for the Council, throughout the Pottawatamie purchase.

On motion, it was voted that the Saints throughout the District known as the Pottawatamie purchase, observe Thursday the 9th, inst., as a day of fasting and prayer, and those branches at a distance to whom information could not be communicated prior to that day, should observe Thursday following, and that all, as the custom heretofore has been; take the offerings to their acting Bishops for the benefit of the poor and needy, in their various districts.

President Harris then arose, and called upon Elder James C. Snow, and the Clerk, to pour out their souls to the assembled congregation, so that they might not go empty away. Elder Snow arose, and delivered a timely and suited address relative to the situation of matters and things in this section of country, and the Saints in general which was well received by the audience.

Several principles of doctrine and discipline, was advanced by him, calculated to put the unwary on their guard—to put the sceptic to silence, and to build up the Saints in their most holy faith.

The Clerk followed, and bore testimony to the truth of the principles advanced by Elder Snow.

On motion, the Conference adjourned to meet on the first Sunday of November, at a time and place, to be hereafter specified.

The spirit manifested on this occasion was one of union, interest, and harmony, and the people who had assembled went away rejoicing in the glorious truths of the everlasting Gospel.

DANIEL MACKINTOSH,
Clerk, Pro tem.

For the Frontier Guardian.

KANESVILLE, Oct. 16th, 1851.

MR. EDITOR:—For the last six or eight days, while remaining in your goodly Town, I have occasionally been in the Court Room, where the District Court is now in session—Judge Sloan Presiding, Mr. Green, Clerk, and Mr. McRae, Sheriff.

Several matters of minor importance has been disposed of. The case of Robert and Martha Keys, produced a very great excitement, it being probably the first criminal offence ever tried here; every body, seemed to have something to say, relative to the guilt of the accused.

The Grand Jury had found bills of indictment against them seperatly, and jointly, for Larceny, and receiving and aiding in concealing stolen goods of C. O. Mynster. The prisoners were arraigned and plead "not guilty," and Robert Keys was put upon his trial for Larceny; G. P. Stiles, J. L. Sharp, and Joseph A. Kelting, Attorney for the defence; J. C. Little, Esq., assisted by H. D. Johnson; Prosecuting,

A large number of witnesses were introduced by the Prosecution, occupying some two days in the examination. The evidence on the part of the prosecution being closed.

Mr. Sharp entered a motion to quash the indictment, upon which motion an animated discussion ensued, continued about eight hours. Motion over ruled.

The defence introduced one witness, then closed the testimony in the case.

Mr. Johnson led off in the prosecution, followed by Stiles and Sharp; Mr. Little closing. The Court instructed the Jury at some length, submitting the case to them at about 6 o'clock, P. M.; in a short time they returned a virdict of "not guilty."

You have a new County here, and I was surprised at the general good order that prevailed during the trial of this case, amidst an intense excitement as to the guilt of the accused.

There was no difficulty in getting an impartial and intelligent Jury, as much so as I have seen at any time or place.

The Court observed they were not well versed in etiquette or technicalities of Courts, but would endeavor to give all a fair trial.

The efforts of the Bar in the Prosecution, and defence of this case would compare favorably with anything of the kind I ever witnessed in any Country.

The prisoners took a change of venue to Mills County, where they will be tried two weeks hence. A STRANGER.

Sir John Franklin.

Accounts from the vessels sent out in search of Sir John Franklin, have been received in England. A letter from the surgeon of the expedition, written from Davis straits on the 24th of July, addressed to the admirality, has been received and published. From this letter we learn that the American vessels under command of Lieut. DeHaven left the other searching at Cape Martyrs. Cornwallis Island, on the 13th of September, and proceeded westward. They intended to winter near Cape Martyrs, but they were driven by a gale fifty miles up Wellington channel and then frozen up. Capt. DeHaven told Mr. Kane that the winter was very mild. He was resolved to proceed further in search of the missing seamen. He gave Mr. Kane a memorandum in writing from which we learn that he found towards the close of August 1850, near Port Innis, Wellington Channel, fragments of clothing, preserved meat, and scraps of paper, one of which bears the name of McDonald, medical officer of Franklin's expedition. On the 27th of August, three graves were discovered bearing the names of Braine and J. and R. Haitnell, of the Erebus, one of Franklin's vessels. The date of the latest death was April 3d, 1846.

The American vessels were liberated from the ice, on the 10th of June last. All the officers and men had been afflicted with scrobutic diseases, but none had died.

Thus it appears that the only real evidence yet discovered of the presence of Sir John Franklin in the Arctic sea have been furnished by the American vessels. We hope they have been successful since last heard from in discovering more traces of them and of affording succor to the survivors of the Franklin expedition if there are any.

You should be careful not to intrust another unnecessarily with a secret which it may be a hard matter for him to keep and which may expose him to somebody's displeasure, when it is hereafter discovered that he was the object of your confidence. Your desire for aid, or for sympathy, is not to be indulged by dragging other people in your misfortunes.

The Wise Will Understand!

Counsel! What is it? It is instruction given for directing the judgement or conduct of another. In a Scriptural sense, it is the will of God, or his truth and doctrines concerning the way of Salvation.—[Webster.

Counsel, according to the doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is the still small voice of the spirit of truth whispering through those whom God has appointed and set apart for that purpose.

The effect resulting from rejecting Counsel in the order of Heaven, is plainly portrayed in the case of Israel in the days of some of their wisest rulers. The Lord spoke through one of his servants on this wise: "Because I have called, and ye have refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded; but ye have set at nought my Counsel, and would have none of my reproof. I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh. Then shall you call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me."

We would here ask, for what reason? The answer follows: "They would have none of my reproof; therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own ways, and be filled with their own devices.

From the foregoing passages: Webster, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and the Church anciently agree exactly, relative to the import, or definition of the term Counsel.

Webster advances the idea that Counsel in a Scriptural sense, is "the will of God." Jesus said on a certain occasion: "He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand, &c., &c. On another occasion he said to his disciples: "He that receiveth you, receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me." We wish to argue from these quotations, that whomsoever is sent, or left, in the order of God, as representative, or representatives of another, is to a certain extent clothed with the same plenary powers. Man upon earth, is always acting in one of two spheres; he is either agent for another, or acting as principle for himself. Well then, the High Council in Pottawatamie, is acting agent for the time being for Elder Hyde in his absence, as the Presiding authority of the Church here, &c., &c. This Council have repeatedly advised, in other words counselled the Saints through their traveling agent, Elder James C. Snow; also through their local agents, the Presidents of branches, to refrain from dancing, until the proper period should arrive to indulge in that recreation. Have the Presidents of the different branches taught the Saints the advice of the Council? We feel warranted to say, that they have. Have the Saints obeyed the voice of their Presidents respecting this matter? The majority have,—a few through a selfish disposition to gratify their own will, have not submitted to the will of our Father who is in Heaven; and though it may appear to be but a trifling matter in their estimation, yet, it carries with it to every honest heart a conviction of manifest disobedience on the part of those who indulged in it. The Savior said to his disciples: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." In what light can those members of the Church be viewed, who without any shadow of authority whatever, and at the expense of the counsel given, have wilfully, and unhesitatingly stepped forward in the dance. Do they feel justified in so doing before God, and their brethren? They know their own feelings best, therefore we leave the parties concerned to answer,—for our part we feel justified in saying that no blessing can follow them, without a speedy repentance, and a public acknowledgement before their brethren whom they have offended. They have the right to choose either way; but the way of the transgresser is hard.

Sickness and death have been, and now is, in our midst; the poor, the widow and the fatherless in a measure are yet unprovided for; yet, these perhaps unconscious, and no doubt unconcerned indulged in rejoicing while the majority of their brethren felt to mourn. A beautiful specimen of charity! Oh consistency, thy real value is worth more than rubies! How much better would it have been, first to feed the poor, clothe the naked, visit the distressed, and minister to them, &c., and then after doing these works of charity, wait for the period to arrive, when we could all have the privilege of rejoicing together. We opine it would only be doing that which the law of brotherhood, and christian charity enjoin upon us to do. Ladies and gentlemen, who do not belong to our society, have a right, and are at liberty to do as they please in these matters; but persons who have openly, and before many witnesses professed allegiance to the laws of God, and a promise to adhere to the counsel of his servants, cannot much longer violate these sacred obligations with impunity. The Church at this place, have borne with such characters, till forbearance is no longer a virtue; therefore we hereby caution and forewarn all Saints in this section of country to beware. Do not risk your salvation and exaltation for that which is of no more value to you than a rye straw would be in an extreme case of hunger.

The foregoing is published by the special approval of the High Council of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, at this place during their session on Saturday the 25th inst.

Conundrum.—Why is Kanesville like the best box in a theatre? An answer requested.

Where has It Been?

"A New York mail of the 18th of August, due at our Post Office, on the 24th of that month, was received on the 12th of October. Where has it been? Can any one tell? Where has been its resting places in the tedious 54 days of its transmit from New York to St. Louis.—Mo. Republican.

The foregoing from the Missouri Republican of the 13th inst., shows the disarrangement of mail facilities east. The east is not the only place; our Southern subscribers have been complaining sadly of late about the non-arrival of their papers in anything like time. We have been informed that the Guardian remains in some Post Offices, away down somewhere, (we know where, and they know too,) quite a length of time, before their honors,—the Postmasters will be at the trouble of overhauling the mail.

The reason assigned for the delay is simply that our mail matter is too large for them to attend to it; consequently they either forward it as it comes to them, or lay it under their desk for further consideration. Ay! A very injudicious way we think, nevertheless, it is true! The special mail agent for the Postoffice Department, should pay these gentlemen a visit; if it is an error in judgment they should be corrected,—if laziness is the cause, others should take their place. Oliver Cocks, Esq., Postmaster, Burlington, Iowa, wrote to us sometime since stating that he had forwarded per mail on the 6th of August, a letter addressed to our office enclosing a considerable sum of money, which has not yet come to hand.

The Postmaster at Mount Pleasant, this State, also mailed a letter enclosing funds for this office, about six weeks since, and as yet has not made its appearance.

What can the reason be, that these letters are lost? Where have they gone to? Has some Postmaster been kind enough to pocket that which he well knows is not his own? If he has, the blighting influence of misfortune, will sooner, or later, add to his misery, and we believe that his character will yet appear conspicuous as a thief—a scoundrel, and a low vagabond without a home. Who the party is, we are at a loss to know, at present, but we are confident that they cannot escape unpunished, unless the property stolen is put forthwith in possession of the rightful owner, because the All-Seeing eye of Him who rules on High, takes cognizance of the deeds done by men in the flesh, and from his discriminating glance, and righteous judgments who can escape?

We called upon Mr. Burdick, Postmaster, at this place, to ascertain if a bill came to his office, of letters mailed at Burlington on the 6th of August, and after a careful examination of all bills in his possession, from July to the present date, no such bill, or date could be found. The bills, letters, and money, went somewhere, and we shall try, if possible, to find that where out. Perhaps Mr. Mix, of Dubuque, Special Mail Agent, for the Post Office Department will aid us in this undertaking. Such rascality should not escape unrebuked.

From France.

The September number of the "Etoile Du Deseret," (the Star of Deseret) is before us. It is the Organ of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in France, and is ably edited by the renowned and talented writer Elder John Taylor, in the French language. We truly admire this publication; it presents a neat and clean appearance, the matter its pages contain must be interesting, not only to the French Saints, but to all who are conversant with the language in which it is written.

Although we do not make any pretentions to French erudition, yet we rejoice to learn, that our friend and Brother, Mr. T., in connection with others from Utah, who passed through this place about two years ago, are making such rapid strides favorable to the cause of righteousness in a foreign land. Mr. Taylor was no French Scholar then, but through the providence of our Heavenly Father, and the aid of his Holy Spirit he has been instrumental in winning souls to the obedience of truth, and also to publish to the French people in their own language, the principles of life and Salvation.

The work in France is onward; several well educated gentlemen have joined the rank of the Standard bearers of truth, and contributed for this number of the Star out of the sacred treasures of their heart a rich poetical effusion in their own dialect worthy of the work they so readily espoused.

When talent, genius, and a conscience as clear, and unclouded as the face of the King of Day, is lighted up by the truth, and guided by the spirit of the latter; error, superstition, tradition, bigotry, and prejudice, are as sure to vanish, as the morning dew before the majesty and strength of the rising sun. May the Etoile du Deseret, be to the humble and worthy of the French Republic, what the Star of Bethelem was to wise men of the East; a guide to the place where Salvation is found.

There is every prospect of a grand blow up among the Mormon leaders at and around Kanesville. Our feelings in reference to the suggest the indifference of the matron as to the result of a certain bear fight. Pitch in.—[Iowa Capitol Reporter.

Friend Paul, from whom did you receive your information? Do you remember the stolen Poll Book affair there was a pitching in then, with a vengeance, yes, into the rights of the people, and a pitching out too; but the whole was attended to, as every case of the kind should be to the honor and credit of the State.

We are as near Kanesville as the next man, and up to the present know of no such Blow up as our friend the Reporter alludes to. This circumstance brings to our recollection an anecdote concerning a woman who undertook to traduce the character of her next door neighbor to screen herself from a certain unfavorable epithet likely to rest upon her own character. As fortune and fate would have it both women were tried and the traducer was found guilty of a crime hitherto unknown in the neighborhood, for which she was sentenced to ten years imprisonment.

The Reporter should consider well the maxim; those who live in glass houses should not be the first to throw stones. Time—like the white man, "Be mery unsartin!"

The earth is said to be 7616 miles in diameter, and 24,880 miles round.

A Noble Example--Obedience to the Law.

It affords us pleasure to state, as an evidence of the law-abiding spirit of our citizens, that the several coffee houses in this City were closed by their proprietors yesterday, and that the new Code, prohibiting such establishments in this State, went into operation without the slightest manifestation of hostilities, or any disposition to evade its requirments, on the part of those who feel themselves proscribed by its enactments. The fact is creditable to all concerned—and it is to be hoped that the same sense of propriety will be observed throughout the future operations of the law. Those who expected that the "last day of grace" would be signalized by a "universal spree" were agreeably disappointed — the event being characterized rather by universal quiet than otherwise.

The law being now in full effect, we shall soon know to what extent its provisions will promote the public morals. All good citizens will hope for the best—and if the experiment shall prove successful, the law will become a "fixed fact" in the future policy of the State.—[Burlington Daily Telegraph.

Here is an example coming as it does from a river City, one of the oldest and most respectable in the State, worthy of imitation in every other town and city throughout the State.

The law abiding citizens of Burlington who have thus closed their liquor houses, without coercion, are deserving of all praise. May prosperity follow them into more worthy channels of business. We trust that the time is not far distant when all the money invested and all the time wasted in this unlawful traffic throughout the State, may be otherwise employed.

By this means the law will, peacefully and quietly become a "fixed fact" in the future policy of the State.

No law in the new Code has been so much applauded by good men in other States; it is taken as an evidence of sound morals and good citizenship. Upon this point Iowa stands second only to Maine—the Maine law treats the liquor traffic as a great public evil and places it in the same category with the implements of gambling and counterfeiting, of poisonous food, infectious nuisances, and weapons of war in the hands of an enemy.

Upon this ground the seizure and destruction of liquors in Maine is justifiable—it is considered no waste of the bounties of Providence, but on the contrary that its distruction enriches the State, while it restores to prosperity and happiness, thousands who are made poor and miserable by its use.—[Iowa Republican.

Worthy of Imitation.

Will the citizens of Kanesville remain unconcerned and tolerate Crog Shops, while almost every other town and City in the State, are walking up to the spirit of the law, and making the letter honorable? We hope that every law abiding citizen will take cognizance of the foregoing from the Burlington Telegraph, and the Iowa Republican.

Grog Shops.

The following from the Dubuque Herald, shows that the Liquor Law is carried into effect on the Mississippi side of the State. A few days ago a lawyer stepped into our office and said that nothing could be done in that quarter with transgressors. Wonder if he did not mean this quarter. Perhaps the gentleman had taken a fee to defend some person here, consequently would rather have the Law trampled upon, than to see order and good government prevail. Be that as it may, we say to our friends in the ——— line, keep a sharp look out, there is something coming that you are not aware of. We do not mean to scare you at all; when it is too late, you will say that we told the TRUTH.

State of Iowa vs George Mackey.

Charged with selling liquor without license—verdict guilty—fined fifty dollars, and sentenced to ten days imprisonment.

Mr. Picotte and Party.

This Gentleman and party, en route for Fort Pierre, with the Indian Agent, Col. Norwood, passed through this town on the 23d inst., in good health and spirits.

The Colonel paid us a visit, and said that he left home more particularly for the benefit of his health than anything else; and was glad to say that his hopes so far were fully realized. From the time he left Saint Louis, he stated, that he has been on the mend. We wish the Colonel much success; also the party accompanying him.

Cannon For South Carolina.

A Baltimore paper of the 21 inst. says: The Southern mail arrived, by it we learn that at the Tredegar Foundry, at Richmond, twenty Disunion Cannon are being cast for South Carolina.

Immigration.

We understand from a reliable source that a number of immigrants are on their way from the Mississippi side of the State, to this place, and likely to winter here. Their real object we have not yet ascertained, but presume that they are either to settle in this and the surrounding counties, or to leave for the West in the Spring.

Much corn, hay, and other articles of provender will be wanted by them no doubt; therefore our friends in the country need not fear, for they will find a ready market for their surplus produce.

We anticipate a large emigration to leave this point next Spring consisting of settlers here, and also a goodly number from abroad. Wisdom is justified of her children.

Periodicals.

The October Numbers of the International Magazine, published by Stringer and Townsend, 222 Broadway, New York, and Godey's Lady's Book, published in Philadelphia, Pa., are on our table. They are both excellent works, and richly deserve patronage from all lovers of literature, art, and science.

Delayed.

The lack of editorial in this number of the Guardian arises from the fact, that for several days past, we hourly expected the arrival of President Orson Hyde, and company, from Great Salt Lake City.

A man by the name of Murphy, living near Gallatin, in Missouri, about four weeks since, murdered his wife, by beating her to death.

The health, in, and around Kanesville is improving.

Correspondence for the Guardian.

Halifax, Nova Scotia,
September 22d, 1851.

Brother Hyde:—It is with pleasure that I convey to you my thanks for remembering my request for to send some elders to this City. Permit me to say, that I feel you have acted wisely in the choice you made. Bro's. Candland and Brown are men of God: they are laboring with all their mights to roll on the work; their acts tell that they are men of faith, prayer, and wisdom.

Br. Brown has gone to Pope's Harbor, some seventy miles eastward of Halifax, to labor with some Saints there; he has been gone about three weeks. We have not heard whether he has met with any success or not; at the least, I trust, he will revive in them the spirit of gathering.

Br. Candland is laboring alone in this City, in Dartmouth, on the opposite side of the harbor, or at Preston, six miles from Dartmouth. He has had to labor hard to break down prejudice. He has labored not only with sinners, but also with Saints. He is really a Savior, not a destroyer. This City is a difficult place to make proselytes in. The meetings are pretty well attended, especially on Sabbath evenings. Few oppose these principles.

Br. Candland has nearly rooted up Strangism here; there are several enquiring the way. As a general thing the people are very quiet as regards the matter. It appears as though a deep slumber rested on the people; that they are satisfied to continue in their erroneous opinions; that they will not come to the light for fear that pecuniary loss may follow, and that their good name may be tarnished. Nevertheless, I am of the opinion that this slumber will ere long be disturbed; and that many will find the way of Salvation.

Br. Candland purposes to remain till the end of the year, in this place, and then return. Now Br. Hyde, I feel that there are many in this province, which contains some four hundred thousand inhabitants, Germans, French, and English, that will obey this Gospel. I do not feel to say that all these people should be passed over, without hearing the word of life, because a very few in comparison to the population of this City, may join. This City and a few miles around it, has only heard these things. Let it be then that when Br. David leaves, that a man of experience take charge of the mission to this province, and blow the trump of warning in all the towns and rural districts. If such is done, your name will be lauded forever, for doing one great act of charity to Nova Scotia. I pray you, do not let the fires of Zion burn out, when Brother David leaves.

Newfoundland, Cape Breton, Prince Edward's Island, and Nova Scotia, have only heard a whisper of these things.

Yours truly,
WILLIAM A. SMITH.

Will some of the traveling Elders abroad take notice of the vacancy likely to occur through the absence of Bro's. Candland and Brown, and comply with the earnest request of Br. Smith? We say let one or two good men proceed to that section of country forthwith, and preach the first principles of the doctrine of Christ, and God will bless them. If the people are willing to hear and obey, it will turn out to their own Salvation. If they feel disposed to be refractory, let the Elders exercise a spirit of meekness and patience; by so doing they will save themselves, and all those who hear them. The servants of God owe the world a hearing, if they fulfill their part honorably, and with Godly fear, they may rest assured that he who is at the helm will direct the vessel successfully over every opposing power.

The Saints would do well to remember what the Psalmist David said on a certain occasion, viz: that the Lord hath made all things for himself; yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.

Faith, repentance, &c., has to be preached to this generation; then cometh the judgements for disobedience; the former duty devolves upon the Elders of Israel; the latter upon Israel's God.

Our voice to the Saints is; Gather to the place appointed and be saved!

Squashes.

George Foster, of Lake Branch, has our thanks for two large, and very fine squashes, one for the printer, the other for ourself.

For the Frontier Guardian.

Little Pigeon, Oct. 25, 1851.

Friend Mackintosh:—Having noticed in the last number of the Guardian, an item in relation to the large growth of vegetables. Allow me to give you a brief account of some of the productions of my own Garden. I raised a Tomato Vine this season which was so productive that I had the curiosity to count the tomatos on it, which amounted to the snug little number of two thousand two hundred and sixty tomatos. I have also raised a Squash Vine, which bore one hundred and four squashes, the Vine measured two hundred and forty-two feet in length. I raised one Beet which measured three feet eight inches in length, and weighed seven pounds; and another which measured twenty-three inches in circumference. Also a Carrot which measured twelve inches in circumference, and weighed three pounds and a half; it is twenty-one inches in length. I have also raised some turnips, which I think are hard to beat, one of which measures twenty-five inches in circumference. Also a Radish which measures twelve and a half inches round, and weighs six and a half pounds. My carrots yielded at the rate of one thousand six hundred and eighty bushels to the acre. Now if this is not an indication of a great country, then I am at a loss to know what is.

Respectfully yours,
HENRY A. TERRY.

Consul at Havana Removed.

To the Friends of Education and Virtue.

The following we clip from one of our exchanges; though it is not our production, it contains several wholesome truths. This article shows on its face, that there are several well endowed minds in the world, and like the industrious Bee we should gather from every good flower all the sweet we can.

"Seize upon truth wherever found,
On Christian or on heathen ground;
Amongst our friends, amongst our foes,
The plant's divine where'er it grows."

Triumph of Learning.

Mind constitutes the majesty of man—virtue his true nobility. The tide of the improvement, which is now flowing through the land like another Niagara, is destined to roll on downward to the latest posterity; and it will bear them on its bosom, o r virtues, our vices, our glory or our shame, or whatever else we may transmit as an inheritance. It, then, in a great measure depends upon the present, whether the moth of immortality, of ignorance, and the vampire of luxury, shall prove the overthrow of the republic; or whether knowledge and virtue, like pillars, shall support her against the whirlwind of war, ambition, corruption, and the remorseless tooth of time.

The cynic may smile at the idea, but there is, perhaps, many a germ of genius now in America, destined to rise to the pinnicle of human glory. Go search the records of renown. It is not to colleges alone we are to look for great and good men. The Savior of mankind choose his companions from the fishing boat; and many of the most illustrious characters that ever illuminated the world, rose by the aid of some humble means. Dr. Herschell, who with the eye of a philosopher, searched out and added another world to the solar system, was a fifer boy in the army; Ferguson, the very sun of science, was a poor weaver, and learned to read by hearing his father teach an elder brother. Search the records of our revolution, and the names of Sherman, of Franklin, and many others, may be adduced as evidences of the truth of this position. Active education is ever on the increase; like money, interest becomes compound—doubles, and in the course of years forms a grand national treasury. Give your children fortune, without education, and at least half the number will go down to oblivion, perhaps to ruin. Give them education and they will accumulate fortunes; they will be a fortune to themselves and to their country. It is an inheritance worth more than gold, for it buys true honor—they can never spend nor lose it; and through life it proves a friend—in death, a consolation. Give your children education, and no tyrant will trample over your liberties. Give your children education, and the silver-shod horse of the despot will never trample in ruins the fabric of your freedom.

Two women recently appeared in Little Rock, Ark., dressed in the bloomer costume. They were arrested and fined, and the dress declared "a nuisance."—Jefferson Gazette.

The Sandwich Islands.

Speaking of the annexation of these Islands to the United States, Mr. J. J. Jarvis, who has been for a number of years a resident of Honolulu, where he published a newspaper in English, and Hawaiian says: that the offer is now made to the citizens of the Republic, as a free gift, of the entire Sandwich group, on such terms as Congress may themselves impose. The Islands ask in return simply to receive the rights and protection accorded to American citizens. The area of the group is 6500 square miles capable of supporting tenfold its present population (80,000.) One million dollars worth of American merchandise is annually consumed. Its American permanent population is not far from 1000, possessing valuable sugar and coffee plantations, in which, and other permanent improvements large sums have been expended. The floating American population touching at these Islands annually is not far from 15,000, seamen and voyagers from some 400 vessels.

Emigration.

The emigration into Iowa at this point bids fair to be more numerous this fall than during any previous season. Our ferry is engaged almost constantly in crossing emigrant wagons, and the number seems rather to increase than diminish. On Saturday last, not less than 25 wagons, 100 persons, and 150 horses, besides other stock, crossed here. The emigrants had good teams and vehicles, and seam to be persons of enterprise and means. We yet extend a cordial invitation to those seeking homes in the west, to pitch their tents in central Iowa. The best soil is here awaiting the hand of culture, and emigrants will find a good and well-supplied market, and a population ready to extend to them a kindly welcome.—[Muscatine Enquirer.

The Great Earthquake at Naples.

The Hon. E. Joy Morris, the American Minister to Naples, in a letter addressed to the "Republic," gives a minute account of the terrible earthquake which occurred in the western portion of the Kingdom of Naples on the 14th of July, by which some two thousand five hundred lives were lost, and several towns either totally prostrated or greatly damaged. Mr. Morris says, that previous to the shock a small stream that runs near the City of Mefi, suddenly disappeared, and adds:

"At the first shock Mefi, which contains 10,000 inhabitants, was prostrated in the dust, nothing but a few crumbling walls surviving the general ruin. An unknown number of its inhabitants were buried under the falling mass of fabrics. Up to the present moment, August 20th, 700 dead bodies have been disinterred, and many others are constantly being found. More than 300 persons lie in an adjacent hospital suffering under grievious wounds, while many have been dug out alive from the ruins. Amongst others, a female infant, a year old, after lying buried for two days, was brought out living and unharmed, and restored to its afflicted mother, widowed by the same calamity.

"The shocks and rumbling of the earth still occasionally occurred at the time of writing this letter, and all eyes were turned upon Vesuvius as the safety valve through which the struggling fires might escape, although no local signs were yet apparent.

"The neighboring towns of Atella, Rionero, Barile, and Rapolla are sufferers by the same convulsion. Rionero is a general wreck, not a sound house remaining—more than a hundred persons have here perished, and as many have been maimed or wounded. In Barile the only edifice not entirely destroyed is the orphan asylum, while the discovered dead amount to about one hundred and fifty. In the commune of Bari, the towns of Cerato, Minervino, Spinazzola, Andria, and Trani, were all injured more or less. In Canosa, the ancient Canusium, founded by Diomed, and whose walls once enclosed a circuit of sixteen miles, three hundred and seventy-six houses were thrown down. Attile list report the shocks around Mount Voltare continued, and one half of the city of Venosa, the ancient Venusia, containing six thousand inhabitants, and celebrated as the birth place of Horace, was destroyed. The mountain provinces of the Abruzzi and of Calabria, where the earthquake of 1783 destroyed three hundred cities and buried thirty thousand human beings, have thus far escaped."

The wire of the submarine telegraph, between the English and French coasts, is not yet finished, though it is being made at the rate of a mile and a half per day. It is thus described:

"The line of communication consists of four copper wires of the thickness of an ordinary bell-wire, cased in gutta percha, and twined with a number of hempen strands steeped in a mixture of tar and tallow into a rope of about an inch in diameter. Another strand similarly prepared is wound transversly around this, and finally ten wires of galvanized iron, about a third of an inch thick, are twined round this central core, and form a solid and at the same time flexible casing. The whole, when thus completed, has the appearance of an ordinary 2½ inch metallic cable. The machinery by which this is effected is extremely simple, and the work proceeds, night and day, with the utmost regularity. A huge coil is thus formed in one continuous piece which will finally attain the length of 24 miles. The weight the entire rope when finished, it is estimated will be from 170 to 180 tons. From time to time, as the work proceeds, a galvanic current is passed through the wires, and their conducting power is tested by a galvanometer.

"The starting point on the English coast which has been fixed upon as the most advantageous, on account of the beach and the comparative freedom from the danger of ships anchoring in the immediate vicinity, is the South Foreland. The line will be conducted down a shaft in the cliff, and along a short tunnel, communicating with it at right angles to the beach, where it is proposed to bury it at some considerable depth beneath the shingles, to the lowest level of ebbtide. The spot selected on the French coast, for similar reasons, is situated about four miles south of Calais, near the village of Sangate. The beach at this point consists entirely of sand, and a ridge of sand hills. The line from the south Foreland to Sangate, although not the shortest that could be drawn between the two coasts, is that which presents the fewest chances of accident. The points at the two extremes are those where the low water mark is nearest the high, and the character of the bed of the channel, lying between, as far as can be ascertained by careful soundings, offers no peculiarities likely to affect the integrity of the conducting line.

The Pure in Heart.

The springs of everlasting life are within. There are clear streams gushing up from the depths of the soul, and flowing out to enliven the sphere of outward existence. But like the waters of Siloah, they "go swiftly." You must listen to catch the silvery tones of the little rill as it glides from its mountain home; you may not witness its silent march through the green vale, its course will be seen in the fresh verdure and the opening flowers, its presence will be known by the forms of life, and beauty will gather around it. It is ever thus with the pure. You may not hear the "still small voice," or heed the silent aspiration; but there is a moral influence and a holy power which you will feel. The wilderness is made to smile, flowers of new life and beauty spring up and flourish, while an invisible presence breathes immortal fragrance through the spiritual atmosphere.

Another Revolution in Mexico.

We learn from a gentleman who has recently returned from the Rio Grande, that a revolutionary party has been organized in the departments of Tamaulipas, Nuevo, Leon, and Coahuila, sufficiently powerful, he thinks, to expel the Government troops, and establish an independent government in all the Valley of the Rio Grande, east of the Sierra Madre. Their plans are now so well matured that a decisive blow will probably be struck in a few weeks. A large number of volunteers from Texas have been enlisted, and a large quantity of arms, ammunition, and military stores, have been procured to carry on the war against the central Government. Upwards of two hundred Texan volunteers were encamped near Roma a few weeks since, waiting for orders from Canales and his associates. It is said that Gen. Avalos and the other officers in command of the Mexican forces, are aware that the great mass of the people of those departments are opposed to the central Government, and they have intimated to the leaders of the revolutionary party, that they can offer but a feeble resistance if a respectable military force is brought to operate against them. It is also said that Gen. Avalos has actually removed a portion of his property to Brownsville, in anticipation of the success of the revolutionary party. Carabajal at present is the ostensible commander of the revolutionary forces; but as soon as offensive operations are commenced, it is probable that Canales will take the command in person. The Americans along the Rio Grande are quite confident that this movement will be successful, as the central Government is so destitute of means that it is unable to pay the soldiers now stationed along the frontier, and they are consequently very much dissatisfied. It is believed that a large number of the Government troops will join the standard of Carabajal as soon as it is displayed on the west bank of the Rio Grande. Many of the merchants on this side of the river are willing to aid the revolutionary party, as they have suffered severely from the impositions of the Mexican custom house officers. The trade of Brownsville, Roma, and most of towns on the east bank of the Rio Grande, has lately been almost ruined by the Mexican revenue officers, who have endeavored by the most tyranical impositions to prevent Americans from trading with any of the towns or settlements in the interior.—[Houston Telegraph.

California and Mob Law.

By late arrivals from California, we have reports of some of the most outrageous cases of mob law which have as yet disgraced the history of that country. We have known cases where legislative enactments have proved inadequate to the proper punishment of men for crime, and in such cases, we might favor a proposition for dispensing justice in a summary manner, as has in many instances been done in California. But when a set of men will go so far as to force their ideas of right and wrong upon a court of justice whilst in session, we have no language of condemnation sufficiently strong to apply to them. A case recently occurred in Sacramento, in which which the judge was compelled by the threats of the mob to proceed at once in a case involving life or death, notwithstanding it is clearly shown that the accused was not prepared for trial. Such a condition of society is truly humiliating, and cannot fail to make its baneful influences felt for a long time to come, and in the face of every well directed effort at correction. We know no corrective, however, other than that imposed by a due appreciation, by the majority at least, of those moral obligations which are contemporaneous with the organization of all society. In the absence of this, we have but little efficacy to look for from a wholsome administration of justice. Passion and prejudice assume the judicial throne, and reason and mercy are lost in their blindness and infatuation. For such a morbid condition of society, we can see no immediate civil remedy. Time and circumstances will accomplish all.

The Wonders of California.

Professor Shepherd, in giving an account of his recent exploration of California, portrays the country in the following enthusiastic, almost romantic style:

"I have now explored California for nearly two years. I can truly say it is a land of wonders. There are fresh flowers every month in the year, and winter now wears the bloom of Spring. I have found waterfalls three and four times as high as Niagara; natural bridges, of white marble, far surpassing that of Rockbridge, Va., some thousands of gold-bearing veins, inexhaustible quantities of iron and crome ores, lead, bismuth and quicksilver, most beautiful porcelain clay, and in short, everything that can bless an industrious and enterprising people. In one Valley I found more than 40 springs of over one huudred degrees Fahrenheit. In another Valley sixteen geysers, like the famous one in Iceland. In this famous abode of Vulcan the rocks are so hot that you can stand upon them but a short time even with thick boots on. The silicious rocks are bleeched to snowy whiteness, and brecciated with conglomerate rocks are now actually forming. The roar of geysers at times may be heard a mile or more, and the moment is one of the most intense interest as you approach them."

Pacific Railroad.

We understand that a large number of hands are employed in working on this road, and that the work is progressing finely. President Allen has returned from the East, having succeeded finely in getting machinery and everything necessary for the prosecution and completion of the portion of road now under contract. From the favorable beginning made and the spirit that is now manifested by the counties along the line, we feel confident the work will go on until it reaches the western portion of the State.—[Occidental Messenger.

California Items.

Official returns show that the total amount of gold dust and bullion exported from San Francisco from the 1st of January to August 14, 1851, was $56,638,204; imported during the same period, $2,892,124—excess of exports, $53,746,080.

San Francisco is once more rising rapidly from the ashes of her misfortunes. Every thing like trade is in a flourishing condition. The mining interests have never been in better condition; and the agricultural resources of the State are being developed.

The fire at Sacramento city commenced in the Tehama theatre, and extended to other large buildings. Total damage, as heretofore stated, $30,000.

A case of Lynch law has occurred at Greenwood Valley. The sufferer was a man named Graham, who was hanged two hours after his capture, on a charge of robbery and attempted murder.

The "Vigilance Committee," of San Francisco, continue their labors, at a monthly expence to the members of three thousand five hundred dollars. A letter of the 15th ultimo, says that they had recently handed over to the court of sessions various offenders who had fallen into their custody.

T. B. McManus, the Irish patriot, is doing a thriving commission business in San Francisco.

The southern papers are advocating a political severance of the lower from upper portion of the State.

Journals from various sections teem with marvels in the way of gold discoveries. We take the richest as samples.

At Mormon Island the company realized in a week over $5,000. On the 9th August, in three hours, $1,250 were washed out. The succeeding day four shares were sold for $10,000. The river about the island is rich almost beyond comparison in California.

A company of seven miners, working in the bed of the river three miles below Coloma, took out $6,000 last week, and they have as much ground to work as will keep them engaged all summer.

The South Fork Mining Company, No. 1, near Mormon Island, took out forty pounds of gold on the 13th. The company numbers thirty members. They have three weeks to work only, having agreed to tear the dam down after that period, in order to permit the company above them to work their claim, upon which the water is locked up by the dam below. The expectation is that $40,000 will be taken out in the time agreed upon.

Thee persons went up on Bear river early in July, a short distance below Steep Hollow, where they turned the river and worked twenty one days. Upon dividing their money they had a little over $2,200 each. In the aggregate, $7,607 30.

A very rich stratum of decomposed quartz, of the same kind as that taken from Gold Tunnel, in Nevada, has been found on Bauna Vista Hill, immediately in rear of Judge Walsh's house, at Grass Valley. A panful of this quartz washed out for a prospect, yielded over forty dollars.

One of the richest cayote holes ever discovered in Nevada is that owned and worked by Messrs. Huzzey & Co., west of Cryotteville and near the Lawson Tunnel. The gentleman having taken out as high as two hundred and eighteen dollars in a single panfull of earth; and a few days ago washed out seven hundred dollars in seven consecutive pansfull of earth, they having yielded an average of one hundred dollars to each pan. The hole is kept dry by a large tube, which is hauled up and down upon a windlass worked by a mule. The gold-bearing earth is also hauled up by the same means, there being a great scarcity of water, the party consisting of eight men, are unable to use either tom or sluice. They keep, however, two rockers at work with the water drawn from the hole, each cradle yielding an average of one hundred dollars a day. It is impossible, with the two rockers, to wash per diem one quarter of the earth hauled each day, and it has thus become necessary to pile up the extra earth for washing when the rainy season comes on.

The record has its dark features, however, prominent among which we notice an account of the great ravages of the cholera in Mazatlan.

Emigrants report that a severe shock of an earthquake was felt on the 3d July in the vicinity of the Soda Springs and along Bear River, some two hundred miles west of Salt Lake—a highty volcanic section of the country.

A Mountain in Motion.—We find in our German papers an account of a singular catastrophe, which we translate for the Tribune. About the District of Magyarokarek, in the Southwestern portion of Transylvania; there are two mountains, Venyikes and Gelestaz; The district lies on a slope of the two mountains, which are from eight hundred to one thousand feet high, opposite a kettle-shaped hollow. On the 13th of August, the Gelestaz began to move, and forced the Venyikes, which is four miles from Magyarokarek, so near to that District that it is now scarcely twenty paces distant, and threatens to destroy the whole village. The motion of the mountain continued from midnight on the 13th to noon on the 15th of August, and during which time it occasioned great damage through a space of about one third of a mile in length and nearly a quarter of a mile in breadth. The fields beneath and around the mountain, which in this place was covered with a harvest of uncommon beauty, were precipitated into the depths, and instead of them huge rocks now rise against the sky. No one would know the place. No one knows where was his own field—the two parts of a plowed field, which were torn assunder, are often found at the distance of two miles from each other, with a bottomless abyss between them. The population of the place, numbering about three hundred and eighty souls, are encamped with their little property on a mountain lying within the District and expect the next calamity in a state of great depression. Beneath the torn-up mountain, and even on the very spot, water gushes up on every side, and the ground in the vicinity is so cracked that no living creature can approach it.—N. Y. Tribune.

POETRY.

Hate and Love.

BY GEO. HARTWELL.

I hate the hands that bind me down
To pompous, heartless form;
The studied words, the soulless thought,
All groveling as the worm:
The base deceit, the deaden'd soul,
The hollow-hearted tone;
The careful smile and measured step
All heartless as a stone.

I hate the hand that warmly grasps
When the heart within is cold—
(Mark the earnest gaze and willing tongue!)
Such friendship's bought and sold.
I hate the fiend that will dash the cup
In which hope's Lies-lings glow,
And then will pierce the burden'd heart,
And gaze on the crimson flow.

But I love the man with a feeling soul,
Whose passions are deep and strong;
Whose chords, when touched by a kindred power,
Will vibrate loud and long;
The man whose word is bond and law—
Who ne'er for gold or power
Would kiss the hand that would stab the heart
In adversity's trying hour.

I love the man that will dare to lift
His voice for the struggling poor;
The man that will open his heart, nor close
Against the beggar his door.
Oh! give me a heart that will firmly stand
When the storm begins to lower—
A hand that will never shrink, if grasped
In misfortune's darkest hour.

To an Invalid Girl, on Presenting two Rosebuds.

Friendship, pure as the white rose, brings
These flowers, to soothe the sufferer's rest;
Friendship, true as the moss which clings
Close to the crimson rosebud's breast.

MISCELLANY.

The Prussian Girl.

A TALE OF SILESIA.

During the seven years' war, the exertions of the Prussians in that critical moment to support the failing fortunes of their indefatigable monarch were truly worthy of a luminous character in the records of history: but they were far outdone by the public sacrifices which were voluntarily made by individuals to repel the encroachments of the armies in the year 1806. Each family contributed, in different ways, to the expenses of the war; even the poorest hordes gave in their mite for the general good, though it deprived their families of many a little luxury which they had before been used to.

In one of the romantic vallies of Silesia lived a young girl of surpassing beauty—the pride and delight of her parents—whose only occupation was to attend to their flocks and bear the scant produce of their little farm to a neighboring town. Ella, like the wild flowers, had grown and bloomed in obscurity, adorned and beautified by the unerring hand of nature. She had seen but little of the world until the trump of war sounded over the country, and echoed discordantly amidst the recesses of its solitude; and when in consequence of her inquiries, her father was obliged to tell her the distracted state of her native land, the indignant blush and high heaving of her bosom proclaimed how much she felt for her enterprising sovereign and the brave people who were arrayed to defend his dominions.

"Heaven grant us the victory!" exclaimed she in a patriotic enthusiasm of her soul. "I would, father, that nature had made woman strong enough to fight."

The old man only smiled a reply, and kissed her rosy cheek, bade her keep out of sight of the soldiers.

The caution was scarcely needed—Ellen knew where to find one whom she might gaze upon and be gazed upon for hours, and who, though not dressed out in the trappings of the military, was more to her than all the world besides. She was soon at the mountain's slope watching her herds, and listening to the mellow notes as they flowed from the pipe of Adolphe—a fine featured young man, who sat at her feet gazing tenderly upon her smiling face.

"That hair of yours, Ella," said he laying down the instrument—"I would give the world for one little lock; and he ran his fingers through the glossy tresses as they hung luxuriantly around her finely moulded shoulders.

"The world is not yours to give, Mr. Adolphe," said she archly; "but do you only love me for my curls, which you are always praising?"

"I love you for yourself, dear Ella; but these rich ringlets, which might grace a queen, I almost idolize them, and yet you refuse to bestow upon me one little tress."

"Have I not reason? Were I to give you a lock, I might never see you again; for then you would have your idol by you and I should be forgotten. No, Adolphe, first prove yourself worthy of the gift, and then you shall have not only a tress, but my hand too, if you desire it."

"Tell me how to become worthy of so estimable a gift," exclaimed the enraptured youth, and I will follow the path which you will point out.

"There it is," answered the maiden, pointing towards Breslau, and looking her lover fixedly in the face.

"And what am I to do in Breslau?"

"Join the brave men who are struggling for our liberties, and ten-fold shall be the love of Ella."

A slight blush overspread the face of Adolphe, he bade her farewell, and was soon lost in the recesses of the valley.

There was more courtliness in the last speech of Adolphe than generally falls to the lot of the untutored mountaineers of Silesia, and Ella thought, as he wended his way down the narrow defile, that there was more dignity in the mein than she had ever before observed—she scarcely dare ask herself who he was; for he had been out a short time among the shepherds, and no one knew aught of his birth and profession; but every one loved him for his generosity and nobleness of spirit.

"My hair," said Ella to herself, as the youth vanished from her sight; "I will dress it for his sake; they say it is rich and beautiful. Ah! how freely would I destroy each ample tress and scatter it upon the winds, did not he love to smooth it with his fingers."

Months rolled away, and Ella watched her herds in sadness, for nothing was heard of Adolphe, and the demon of war continued to spread his desolation over the land.

It was proposed to raise a contribution among the inhabitants of the mountain, which should be placed in the general fund, and appropriated to the use of the defenders of the king.

When the father of Ella was called upon for his proportion he had nothing to give, and the noble-hearted girl, then, for the first time, felt the want of wealth.

"Father, let us sell our flocks," said she—"we will be amply repaid in the freedom we shall enjoy; and when peace comes again, I am sure I can get work for you."

"No, my daughter," answered the old man, our country requires no such sacrifice; we must not deprive ourselves of the means of livelihood."

Ella reflected for a long while, and formed a thousand plans for raising a sum of money that was worthy of being given in aid of the patriotic cause; but all her schemes were impracticable, and she wept in solitude for her inability to serve her country.

"Would that these locks were wires of gold!" exclaimed she running her fingers through the tresses as they dallied with the wind; "I might give them for the general good. Can they not be sold? I will go to Breslau and offer them; they may bring but a trifle, yet they are all I have to bestow. But Adolphe—when he returns and beholds me deprived of my greatest beauty—what will he say! Alas! he will turn from me; he will love me no more,—Well, be it so; I will sacrifice even his love in the cause of liberty.

She accordingly proceeded to Breslau, and offered her hair for sale to the first friseur in the city. The loveliness of the young girl, and the novelty of her offer, caused the person to inquire why she robbed herself of such beautiful tresses. On receiving her answer, he was astonished at the extraordinary disinterested patriotism displayed by one so young and interesting.

"I will take the locks, my pretty girl," said he, admiring the softness of their texture, "and turn them into braceletts. Every body will buy them when they know of whose hair they are made."

The delighted girl received the proffered sum, and flew to add it to the general fund. The friseur had predicted right; the story got wind, and ladies and gentlemen of the city flocked to his store to purchase the bracelets marked Ella. Among others, a young man of high rank, hearing the story, endeavored to obtain one of the articles.

The vender had but one left, and he had raised a considerable sum from their sale; he intended to keep that for himself. The officer examined the color and texture of the hair, and when his eyes fell on the name of Ella, a smile of pride and gratitude curled his lip, and he uttered, "it must be she!" He emptied his purse upon the counter, and told the man to take it all for the bracelet, who being dazzled by the sight of so much gold, readily consented. The officer left the shop with the treasure pressed to his lips.

"Ella," said Adolphe, as he sat by the side of the mountain maid, "where are those luxuriant locks that formerly hung around your neck? I went and fought at your bidding, and now I have come to claim my reward."

"Adolphe," answered she, "I became jealous of my hair; your heart became entangled among its thick curls; the more I combed them, the more they webbed around my heart, and so I cut them off. Do you love me without my locks?"

"Love you, Ella? Could I do less than worship you, since you have so nobly married your beauty for the benefit of your country? Look at this bracelet—the hair is yours—the name is yours."

Thus caught, the generous girl thought it useless to deny the facts here recorded.

She confessed it all, and shortly afterwards was the wife of the stranger, Adolphe, Count of Rutland.

What is Law Like.

Law—is like a fire: and those who meddle with it may chance to "burn their fingers."

Law—is like a pocket with a hole in it: and those who therein risk their money are very likely to lose it.

Law—is like a lancet, dangerous in the hands of the ignorant: doubtful in the hands of an adept.

Law—is like a sieve, you may see through it: but you will be considerably reduced before you can get through it.

Law—is to the litigant what the poulterer is to the goose: it plucks, and it draws him; but here the simile ends, for the litigant, unlike the goose, never gets TRUST, although he may be both ROASTED and DISHED.

Law—is like an ignus fatuus, or Jack o'Lantern: those who follow the delusive guide, too often find themselves inextricably involved in a bog or a quagmire.

Law—is like prussic acid, a dangerous remedy, and the smallest dose is generally sufficient.

Law—is like justice, even as copper gilt is like gold, and the comparative worth of the two is about the same.

Law—is like an eel-trap, very easy to get out of.

Law—is like a razor, which requires a "strong back," keenness and an excellent temper: many of those who get once "shaved with ease and expedition," seldom risk a second operation.

Law—is like a flight of rockets: there is a great expense of "powder," the cases are usually well "got up;" the reports are excellent; but, after all, the sticks (q. d. the clients,) are sure to come to the ground.

Law—is like a window of stained glass giving its own peculiar tint and hue to the bright rays of truth which shine through it. —[London Times.

WHAT SHOULD AN EDITOR BE!—This question says the Galena (Ill.) Advertizer, was never better answered than by the late Charles Hammond, celebrated throughout the West as the Editor of the Cincinnati Gazette:

"The legitimate vocation of a newspaper is to circulate useful intelligence, and promulgate just and impartial views of public affairs. An editor should be one in whom confidence could be reposed for soundness of judgement, integrity of purpose, and independence of conduct. He should possess varied knowledge and large experience; and he should feel his station to be rather that of a judge dispensing justice, than that of an advocate making out a case. He should be zealous of the truth, and of that chiefly, and he should feel that to deceive purposly was infamous—to deceive from credulity or inattention, highly reprehensible. He should distinctly comprehend that those who differ from him might be as honest as himself, and as well informed, too, and he should know how to respect while he opposes them."

One hour lost in the morning by lying in bed, will put back all the business of the day.

One hour gained by rising early is worth one month of labor in a year.

One hole in a fence will cost ten times as much as it will to fix it once.

One diseased sheep will spoil a flock.

One drunkard will keep a family poor and miserable.

One wife that is always telling how fine her neighbor dresses, and how little she can get, will look pleasanter if she will talk about something else.

One husband that is penurious or lazy, and deprives his family of necessary comforts, such as neighbors enjoy is not as desirable as he ought to be.

One good newspaper is one good thing in a family.

With the TRUE wife, a husband's faults should be sacred. A women forgets what is due to herself, when she condescends to that refuge of weakness, a female confidant. A wife's bosom should be the tomb of her husband's failings, and his character far more valuable. If this be not the case, she pollutes her marriage vow.

Rules to be Observed in an Editor's Sanctum.

1. Come in at all times—what business has he to be private?
2. Take his papers with perfect freedom—what use can he have for them?
3. If you bring in a long communication, just "to fill up his paper," insist on reading and discussing it. Why should'nt he be glad to spend an hour in listening?
4. If you see his exchanges piled up in an orderly manner on his table, seize and scatter them. What business has he to be particular?
5. If you find his chair vacant at any time, sit in it. Why should he wish to keep his stationery and scissoring from his visitors?

Whoso loveth instruction loveth knowledge, but he that hateth reproof is brutish.

The Religion of Paying Debts.

One of our religious exchanges has the following strong remarks on this subject. They drive the nail to the head and clinch it:

Men may sophisticate as they please—They never can make it right, and all the bankrupt laws of the universe cannot make it right, for them not to pay their debts—There is a sin in this neglect as clear and as deserving church discipline as in stealing or false swearing. He who violates his promise to pay, or withholds the payment of a debt when it is in his power to meet his engagement, ought to be made to feel that in the sight of all honest men he is a swindler. Religion may be a very comfortable cloak under which to hide; but if religion does not make a man "deal justly," it is not worth having.

BLUE MORTAR
St. Joseph, Missouri.

E. H. HAYCRAFT, having purchased the interest of Dr. J. B. HOWARD in the Drug Store of Haycraft & Howard, still continue the Drug business at the old stand where he will be much pleased to see all the former customers of the house.
He wishes it to be distinctly understood that he will sell as cheap as good articles in his line can be sold in Upper Missouri; and if an article is not as represented it may be returned.
As all of his sales are made for cash in hand he can afford to sell very low, and he invites the attention of his customers to this particular fact.
He is the wholesale agent for JOHN BULL'S and S. P. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA. Receiving his supplies directly from the Proprietor's, and can furnish them at St. Louis Wholesale prices, thus saving the expense of freight, and risk in transportation.
The celebrated Mexican Mustang Liniment is also offered by the dozen or gross at the wholesale rates.
Remember the original "Mammoth Blue Mortar," on the West side of Main street.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.
For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.
At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned having been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.
His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.
Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.
References.—Messrs. R. C. Wetmore & Co., N. Y. City; Dr. F. Merryweather, Cinn. Ohio; Messrs. Bacon & Hyde, William North, and Wolf & Hoppe, St. Louis, Mo.; Middleton & Riley, St. Joseph, Mo.; Major L. Bidamon, and William McLennan Esq., Nauvoo, Ill.; L. E. Johnson Esq., Keokuk, Iowa; J. C. Hall, Burlington, Iowa.
Terms.—Half cash advanced on all orders, and three per cent commission on all purchases.
Letters of inquiry, or containing orders, must be post paid to receive attention.
All order should specify the kind, and quantity, and quality, of articles; also at what time they will be required. J. E. JOHNSON.

CLAIMS! CLAIMS!!
IN THE BOYOU COUNTRY.

THE Mormon population of HARRIS GROVE wishing to emigrate in mass to the Salt Lake, next season offer to sell out their interest to this beautiful section of Iowa—consisting of 20 improvements, from 5 to 50 acres fenced and cultivated and from 160 to 320 in claims, well supplied with excellent water and timber, and one of the healthiest countries bordering on the Missouri. Proof—there is not a case of ague or fever in the whole settlement. This grove lies about 20 miles north of Kanesville, and on the direct route from Fort Desmoine to Council Bluffs on the Missouri river. We will sell this fall at cost of improvement. Also a part of the crop on the ground. They will take cattle, store goods and money in exchange.
Do not forget—HARRIS GROVE, where are already a number of other professors of religion settled. Come and see.

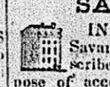
SAVANNAH HOTEL.



IN the beautiful and flourishing town of Savannah, Andrew county, Mo. The subscriber has established himself for the purpose of accommodating travelers, visitors, and friends with entertainment, embracing as good fare as this and other countries can afford. He has newly fitted up the establishment formerly occupied by Mr. James Closby—has a good Livery Stable connected with the house, where persons can be accommodated with conveyances at all times. Horses, buggies and hacks in constant readiness, and on reasonable terms.
He flatters himself that, by strict attention to the wants, and devotion to the comforts and happiness of his guests, he will share a liberal portion of public favor which he solicits. Good fare for both man and animal! Call and try the Savannah Hotel, a little west of the Court House.

THE GOLD REGIONS.
COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.

THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satisfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.
Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrived at Sacramento, this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, whilst on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

PERRYS & YOUNG
WOULD respectively announce that they are now receiving at their old stand on MAIN STREET, ST. JOSEPH, direct from the Eastern markets, the largest stock of dry goods, groceries; hardware; queensware, &c., ever brought to the West. Comprising French and English broadcloths, of every variety; plain and fancy cassimeres; sattinets; blankets; calicoes; domestics; boots and shoes; hats and caps; knives and forks; picks and shovels; tea; sugar; coffee; molasses; salt; spun cotton; dye stuffs; rope; castings, &c., &c.
We will have on hand in a few days a large and well assorted stock of
READY MADE CLOTHING,
Purchased by one of the proprietors, who by long experience, is well acquainted with the wants of the emigrant.
Your attention is also invited to a large lot of
DRY CLARIFIED SUGAR,
Warranted to keep in any climate.
All persons who make this place their starting point, (and all who act wisely will do so for many reasons,) would find it much to their own interest to give us a call, before purchasing elsewhere, as we feel confident that they can find goods in our stock better suited to their wants and at lower prices than in any other House in Upper Missouri. As all persons procuring outfits, will necessarily remain in town a few days, we invite them to call and look at our goods as it will be a pleasure to us to show them. And they will have the opportunity of judging for themselves. PERRYS & YOUNG.

SIXTH GENERAL EPISTLE

Of the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, from Great Salt Lake Valley, to the Saints Scattered Throughout the Earth. Greeting:—

BELOVED BRETHREN:—When the Savior was upon the Earth, and his disciples questioned him concerning the sign of his coming, referring to the Latter-days, Jesus answered them on this wise: There shall arise false Christs and false Prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; saying, Lo here! and Lo there! so that if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect: Go not after them, neither believe them; for as the light of the morning cometh out of the East and shineth even unto the West; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

Many of the signs and wonders, and false Christs and false Prophets referred to, have already been exhibited insomuch that many have declared the day when the Son of man would make his appearance; and many have believed on their testimony and been disappointed; while those who have been filled with the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of hands, having repented of their sins, and received remission thereof by baptism in water, have been watching the gradual progress of the work of the Lord, in this last dispensation, which has been like the light of the morning, as it first gildes the Eastern horizon, and continues to grow brighter and brighter, and spread farther and farther from the East even unto the West, and so will continue until the whole Horizon is illuminated with the clear effulgence of the noonday Sun; and the Son of Righteousness shall make his appearance in the midst of his people, according to his own declarations.

The first light of the morning in this age, and the time referred to by the Savior, was the Angel who had the everlasting Gospel, which was to be preached to all people, preaching and ministering to Joseph Smith Jr., and commanding Joseph to preach and administer to others even as he had received of the Angel; and the light continued to shine and spread as others believe on the testimony of Joseph; for they repented of their sins; were baptized by him, and he having received the Holy Priesthood from the angels, coferred the same Priesthood on the believers; and they in turn went forth proclaiming the same Gospel, administering the same ordinances, calling on all the faithful to gather themselves together, to the upbuilding of Zion, until the light has already been seen in the four quarters of the Earth, and is fast being reflected over every nation and people; and this the Gospel, the plan of salvation, is the true light that must shine from the East to the West; that is to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, on the earth, before the end will come; and the faithful, the Saints, must be gathered together in holy places, and build Temples, and do all necessary works to open up the way of life and Salvation, to the dead as well as the living, before they can complete the work which is given them to do in this dispensation and probation.

When the Saints in Zion are sowing and reaping, and building, according to counsel, they are causing the light to shine, as emphatically, as though they were abroad in foreign nations, preaching and baptizing for remission of sins All things needful to be done, are but parts of the great whole, which must all be accomplished before men will be prepared to be restored back again into the presence of the Father; and while we again have the pleasing privilege of communicating with our friends scattered among the nations, we know not how we can with more interest, and render our Epistle more useful, than by devoting a portion to a continuation of the history of things as they do and have existed since our last letter; which is only a reflection of that light which eventually must illuminate the world; for the works of the righteous, like gold and silver and precious stones, will remain when time is swallowed up in eternity.

The Railway from this City to the mountain, was surveyed early in the season, and partly graded; and a considerable share of the timber and rails are on the ground. When the harvest approached, the work was suspended for want of laborers, but will be resumed as early as possible. The walls of the basement story of the Seventies Hall, are in progress, and the walls of the Tithing Barn are completed; also the walls of the Joiners and Paint Shop, and plaining and slitting Machine, one hundred and forty by forty-five feet on the Temple Block, preparatory to building a Temple; though all the Public Works have been hindered for the lack of lumber, materials, and laborers, and the lack has been occasioned by a majority of the brethren's neglect to pay their tithing, both at home and abroad. It mattereth not where the Saints reside, in relation to this principle; it is their duty to devote one tenth of their property, when they come into the Church, and afterwards one tenth of their income, for the support of the Public Works; for the building of Temples and other necessary purposes; and if they do not tithe themselves, they have no claim to the blessings, and endowments that will flow to the faithful through that medium.

A tithe of the tithing due from the Saints, promptly paid, would have enabled us to enclose the Temple Block, as we had anticipated, preparatory to commencing the Temple another season; but for lack of means, the plat remains open, and the commencement of the Building must continue to be suspended. It is time that the Saints understood, and it is the duty of all Elders and officers, and especially the Bishops, to instruct the Saints, that the paying of their tithing is a prominent portion of the labor which is allotted to them by which they are to secure a future residence in the Heaven they are seeking after. To be prepared for a Celestial Heaven they want the blessings of a Terrestial Temple, builded to the name of Israel's God, and without these blessings they cannot be prepared for the greatest glory: and should any one succeed in passing through the Temple and receive all the blessings and endowments offered to any; that person never having tithed for the building of the Temple, or other public good, would have to hear the words of Jesus, enter in at the door, and he that entereth not in at the door but climeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber; and the House of the Lord is the door to those who help build it, but those who have the opportunity and do it not, the words of the Savior remain true, if they enter therein; and from henceforth the living may not expect the blessings of the Temple unless they help build it. Your tithing we value not, only as it affects your saivation, and the salvation of the dead.

The Council House is completed. The Tithing Store House is in progress of finishing, and will be ready to be occupied the coming winter, for the several purposes designed, instead of a Joiner's shop as hitherto. The foundation of a Tabernacle, on Temple Block, one hundred and twenty-six by sixty-four feet, is nearly completed, and we expect the building will be completed this Fall. The Deseret Pottery is in successful operation, some good light yellow ware was drawn from the Kiln June 27th, and white ware is soon expected. It is anticipated that the Valley materials for making crockery and China ware, will be equal to any other place; and that the Pottery will soon be able to supply this market. Good Potters are wanted. A Carding Machine is in operation and doing extensive business in this Valley; also one in Utah, and others in progress.

There are four grain and five saw mills in operation, or nearly completed in Great Salt Lake County; also two grain and two saw mills in Weber County; one grain and two saw mills in Davis County; two grain and three saw mills in Utah County; One grain and two saw mills in San Pete County; one grain and one saw mill in Iron County; and one saw mill in Tooele County: and an increasing desire and exertion to promote domestic manufactures prevails throughout the Territory.

We have visited the various counties and settlements generally, this season; and found the Saints industrious and prosperous, extending their farming operations as far as possible, and preparing food for the brethren who are coming hither. The harvest will be abundant for all who will have occasion to eat thereof, though many fields have suffered by the drouth; the mountain streams having been unusually low this season, and help scarce at the time, most needed for irrigation. Harvesters are much wanted, and more thrashing machines, and labor saving machinery of all kinds, could be used to great advantage in our midst.

A High Council was organized at Manti, San Pete County, April 30th, Isaac Morley is Patriarch of that Stake of Zion. Chalk, stone coal, salt, and iron ore, abound in the region of Iron County; also a substance resembling white clay which answers a good purpose, as a substitute for soap. We decided on locations for settlements on Salt Creek, in Jewab Valley, and Corn Creek, in Parowan Valley, between this and Iron county; and companies will leave immediately after Conference, to form those settlements.

The birth day of the Nation, July 4th, was celebrated by the citizens of this Valley, in a most patriotic manner, on the banks of the Great Salt Lake, abont twenty-four miles from the City, attended with every expression of joy and gladness, that could flow from the hearts of a free and virtuous people.

The 24th of July was celebrated as the Anniversary of the entrance of the Pioneers into the Valley of the mountains, and in this, much interest was added over former celebrations, by the appearance of the Pioneers in the procession, each carrying the tools, or emblems of tools, utensils, and implements used by them on their route, and after their arrival, even to sheaves of grain the products of their labor. The remembrance of this day is sweet to the Saints, as was the passover to ancient Israel; and the demonstrations of gratitude and thanksgiving on the Anniversary were pure, virtuous, holy, and without alloy.

Several depredations have been committed by the Indians during the Summer, mostly in Toocle Valley, where it is computed that more than five thousand dollars worth of cattle and horses have been stolen, and mostly killed or destroyed. So great was the destruction of property, that annihilation of the settlement seemed inevitable, unless the savages were met and resisted; which resulted in the death of one white man and a few Indians, which produced a cessation of thefts for a season. Some minor thefts have been committed in other settlements; though, in general, the Indians about the settlements, have neither the disposition or courage to fight the settlers.

A band of Indians, living on the muddy, between Iron County and San Diego, appear more hostile of late, and no doubt killed Br. Isaac Brown, when on his return from California last Fall. The Indians on St. Mary's River, have committed many depredations on travelers the past year; and as is supposed, killed eight emmigrants about one hundred and fifty miles north of this, a few weeks since; and the California Mail, which was expected heare ten days since (Sept. 4) has not been heard from.

Elder Orson Hyde arrived in the Valley, on the 17th of August, direct from Kanesville, accompanied by Elder Carrington and a few others, all of whom were robbed and plundered by the Pawnee Indians. During the great amount of emigration from sea to sea, through the mountains, the Indians have received some insults and abuses which they are sure to resent, and the Saints and others who may have occasion to pass through these tribes referred to, will do well to be prepared to act on the defensive.

Doctor John M. Bernhisel, and the Hon. A. W. Babbitt, returned to this place on the 19th of July, accompanied by several officers of the United States Governn ent for the Territory of Utah, which was chartered last September, and the General Government having now received this Territory unto their postering care. The citizens will be relieved of many burdens, hard to be borne by them in a new country, to which they were compelled to immigrate, while destitute of many of the comforts of life. Dr. Bernhisel, was appointed by the President of the United States, Special Agent, to expend an appropriation of five thousand dollars, granted by Congress for the purchase of a Library for Utah; which appropriation he expended by selecting books in the eastern cities, during the past winter, and the Library is now on the way to this place. Many gentlemen in the States, through the solicitation of the Doctor, have donated books, magazines, pamphlets, maps, and papers, which will add greatly to the value and interest of the Utah Library, and elicits our warmest thanks. Dr. Bernhisel was unanimously elected delegate to Congress by the Territory, on the 4th of August, and on the 1st of September, left in the Mail Coach for Washington City; the same day that a commencement was made to lay the foundation of a State House, on Union Square, in this City, towards the erection of which Congress has appropriated twenty thousand dollars.

The Valley is well supplied with a general assortment of merchandize at the present time; but the exportation of cash having been far greater than the importation, the past year, it is to be feared that many articles will remain unsold, which might be used to advantage were the circulating medium suited to foreign markets in the possession of those who would like to purchase. Shingles are now extensively manufactured, and would be very extensively used, could nails be procured, but it is not supposed that one half, and probably not one fourth enough of shingle nails will be brought this season, to supply the market; and the present prospect is that many buildings will have to be delayed, before another market season, for lack of assorted nails. If a company of brethren could be formed in England, Wales, Sweden, or any other country, to come and make Iron from the ore, (magnetic ore of the best quality) and machinery for rolling, slitting, and cutting nails, and drawing off wire; it would be one of the greatest auxiliaries, for advancement in building up the Vallies of the Mountains; and the Presiding Elders in those countries are instructed to examine this subject and forward such a company with the least possible delay.

School Houses have been erected in the Wards generally, and Schools have been in operation the present season. The Parent School has been suspended a few weeks, for lack of a commodious room; but a house is in progress of erection, for its accommodation, and the School will be resumed the coming winter. A portion of the wall around the University Land is completed, and a portion has been delayed for want of laborers, a difficulty we often meet with, and which might be avoided, if a few score of thousands of the Saints who are abroad, would rise up in the name of Israel's God and come home, and help us to do what is required at our hands, and it is as much the duty of the Saints to gather, as it is for sinners to repent and be baptised for the remission of their sins, and every Saint who does not come home, when he has an opportunity, will be afflicted by the Devil. And why? If you will stay on the enemy's ground, after you have had a chance to escape, that enemy will claim and exercise power over you; while your faith will fail, because you have been disobedient to the counsel to gather yourselves with the faithful, unto holy places, where the Holy One of Israel presides in the midst of his people, and where the power of Satan is destroyed, broken, or brought in subjection; therefore, if you shall tarry, after a way has been made for your escape, and lose your life, or the lives of your household, or your property, whose fault will it be? And whose loss? You must bear it.

Seth M. Blair, Esq., and President Joseph Young are each preparing mills and presses in our City, for the purpose of extracting the juice of the beet, of which many have been raised this season; and although we wish them success, and anticipate that they will do much to abate the scarcity of saccharine matter, for culinary purposes; yet we know of no one in our midst who is sufficiently versed in refining the beet juice to make a perfect article of sugar; but we expect this lack of information will be soon overcome by their experience; and also by the early arrival, next season, of a company of manufacturers from France, as we are informed by letter from Elder Taylor. We are also informed from the same source, that a large company of Woolen Manufacturers, will come at the same time, from the same country, bringing all the necessary machinery, and the best of sheep, all of which are much needed here; and we hope that nothing will interfere to hinder the arrival of those companies against our next Beet and Wool crop. A small Woolen Factory is already in progress of erection in our Valley, and there are many sheep here, but thousands more are wanted.

Experiments at tanning hides, and making leather, have, as yet, been very limited in the Valley. Much leather is needed in this country, and many thousands of the best hides have rotted or been wasted, for want of sufficient help to erect tanneries, and convart those hides into leather. There are plenty of materials containing tanning to prosecute the business to advantage, and prevent the necessity of heavy importations, at an enormous expense; and if some of the brethering who are tanners, would come home and attend to their calling here, they would receive the blessing of many souls. Some attempts are now making at this business, but more help is wanted. Brethren, the harvest here is great, but the laborers few.

We have made arrangements, during the past year, with a gentleman in Wisconsin to come hither for the purpose of manufacturing paper. Report says that he is on the way, and we hope to see him here this Fall.

Books, papers, and every medium of intelligence through the press, are unusually high at this place, owing, in a great degree, to the heavy transport, which will be remedied to a great extent, when the rags in the Valley can be converted into paper. A large Printing Press has recently arrived, and all necessary materials for a respectable newspaper, and a small Book Bindery, all of which, will probably, be brought in requisition the coming winter.

The Warm Bath-House has been open to visitors through the season. Excellent salt is made by boiling 3 to 1 of the Lake water. Good lime is burned in Red Bute Kanyon. Plaster of Paris is dug within two miles of the City, and is much used at the Pottery, and for finishing houses. The Saleratus from the Lake four miles east of Independence Rock, is much used in the Valley, and the Saints will do well to bring what they can when they come; and the borax from the Lake, west of Independence Rock would be much used by our mechanics, if they could get it.

The Church Pasture on the north of the City is fenced; and the farm for the benefit of the poor on the West of Jordan, is nearly surrounded by a ditch. Many houses and other buildings have been erected in the city and country, this season, and many more would be if materials and laborers could be procured.

Ogden, Provo, Manti and Parowan cities have organized under their respective charters, and are governed by municipal law. The nights have been warmer than usual the past three months; winds more frequent and stronger than common in the Valley; and there was a frost on the low lands on the night of the 28th of August.

The United States mail leaves, Great Salt Lake City and Independence, Missouri, on the first of each month, exchanging at Fort Laramie. Also the mail leaves Sacramento and this place on the first of each month; and a mail is exchanged between this and Dallas in Oregon once in two months. We have a weekly mail from hence to San Pete, and a semi-weekly from hence to Brownsville. A Postoffice is established at Parowan, Iron County, but no mail route is yet established between Payson and Parowan; though at the next session of Congress we anticipate the establishment of a post route from hence to San Diego, passing through Parowan, which ronte will be passable at all seasons of the year.

A Post Office is established at Honolula, Oahu, Sandwich Islands, and letters post paid to San Francisco, will be forwarded every opportunity. A letter from Elder Hiram Clark, President of the Sandwich Mission, dated Honolula, January 27, contains our latest intelligence from those Islands. Elders Clark, and Whittle, were stationed at Oahu; Elders H. W. Bigler, and Thos. Morris, at Molokai; Elders John Dixon and Wm. Farrer, at Ranai; Elders Hawkins & Blackwell at Hawaii; and Elders Cannon & Keeler at Maui; having entered on their respective labors about the 20th of December. There are many whites on those Islands, but they have little regard for gospel privileges. The Natives generally can read and write, and are under the influence of Missionaries, whose policy it is to keep the natives in subjection to their theories by personal influence, and by means of the Press, which issues a weekly paper. Three or four editions of the Bible have been issued in native Sandwich, which in the end will prove a blessing to that people. No special and direct communications have been received concerning Elder Addison Pratt, and the Mission at Society Isles; since his return thence or from the other Missions, in and about the Pacific, though report says the work is very prosperous in Australia, and other places in that region.

By the Star of July 1st, we learn, there were 42 Conferences composed of 642 branches of the Church in the British Isles, and 3874 Elders and Priests, and more than 32,000 members, and the gospel is continuing to spread, and believers to multiply faster than ever. Near 1000 have emigrated the past season, and 50 were baptized on board the ship Olympus, on its passage from Liverpool to New Orleans; Elder Wm. Howel, Presiding. Elder Wm. Burton, of this city, died at Edinburgh, last March. This is the third death among the American Elders while on the British Isles. Elder Flanigan died at Birmingham at a previous date, and Elder Barnes some years since; and the fourth of all that have died on Foreign Missions in this dispensation. Elder Hanks died at sea, on his passage to the Society Isles, in the year 1843. The London Conference numbers over 3000, and is receiving more than 100 per month by baptism.

In Italy the work is gradually progressing under the Presidency of Elder Lorenzo Snow, and the deep rooted tradition of ages, is beginning to give place to sober reflection and the light of truth. Elder Snow is translating (if not already completed,) the Book of Mormon into the Italian language. The Waldenses are beginning to look after the truth, and Switzerland is becoming glad in the hope of Eternal Life. Elder John Taylor is in France, preaching and translating the Book of Mormon into French, though probably the translation is complete, before this, and the prospect is flattering in that country. Elder Erastus Snow, continues his labors in Denmark, and has translated the Book of Mormon into the Danish language, so that, that most important of all Books, to this generation, may now be read by the greater portion of the inhabitants of the earth, in some language with which they are familiar. Much opposition has been manifested towards the Gospel in Denmark, and adjacent countries; yet the truth has triumphed and will prevail, and Satan will continue to oppose, and fight, until he is bound; and that opposition is good to prove the faith and integrity of the Saints; and that is one reason why it is necessary there should be a Devil, even to prove men, and make manifest who the righteous are. Miracles are wrought, the sick are healed, the lame leap, the poor have the gospel preached to them, and God is with his saints. The gospel has recently gone from Germany to Iceland.

At no time since the proclamation of the gospel in this age, has the Church been in a more prosperous state, than at the present. At no time have the saints been more ready to follow counsel, and do those things which are required of them, and God is blessing them on account of their obedience; and yet there is room for improvement, for advancement in every thing that is good; and that man who does the best he knows how today, should so continue to live in the exercise of faith and intelligence, which will produce good works, that he shall know more, and be ready to carry that knowledge into practice, so as to better and more useful to-morrow; and so on, from day to day, till he is prepared to enter into the presence of the Father. If men would be great in goodness, they must be intelligent, for no man can do good unless he knows how; therefor seek after knowledge, all knowledge, and especially that which is from above, which is wisdom to to direct in all things, and if you find anything that God does not know, you need not learn that thing; but strive to know what God knows, and use that knowledge as God uses it, and then you will be like him; will see as you are seen, and know as you are known; and have charity, love one another, and do each other good continually, and for ever, even as for yourselves.

But if a man have all knowledge, and does not use it for good, it will prove a curse instead of a blessing, as it did to Lucifer, the Son of the Morning. If a sinner is advised to repent, and be baptized for remission of his sins, and does it not, it will prove to his condemnation instead of a blessing, and he cannot receive the laying on of the hands of the Elders for the reception of the Holy Ghost. If a Saint who has received the Holy Ghost, is counselled to gather with the Saints, to come home, and he neglects to come, he has no further claim to the blessings promised unto the faithful, who obey all the commandments; his light becomes darkness, and remaining in this state, where God is he cannot come; for the ordinances in the house of the Lord, in Zion, and her Stakes, are as necessary for a full salvation, as baptism is for a a partial salvation; and the voice of the good Shepherd is to all Saints, even to the ends of the earth; "gather yourselves together, come home; and more especially to the Saints in Pottawatamie, the United States, Canada, and the British Isles; come home! come home!!"

O ye Ssints in the United States, will you listen to the voice of the good Shepherd? Will you gather? Will you be obedient to the heavenly commandments? Many of you have been looking for, and expecting too much; you have been expecting the time would come, when you could journey across the mountians in your fine carriages, your good wagons, and have all the comforts of life that heart could wish; but your expectations are vain, and if you wait for those things you will never come, you will leave your carcases to rot in the midst of the Gentiles, and your faith and hope will depart from you.

How long shall it be said in truth "the children of this world are wiser in their generation, than the children of light." Some of the children of the world, have crossed the mountains, and plains, from Missouri to California, with a pack on their back, to worship their God—gold Some have performed the same journey with a wheel-barrow, some have accomplished the same with a pack on a cow. Some of the Saints, now in our midst, come hither with wagons or carts made of wood, without a particle of iron, hooping their wheels with hickory, or raw hide, or ropes, and had as good and safe a journey as any in the camps, with their well wrought iron wagons; and can you not do the same? Yes, if you have the same desire, the same faith. Families might start from Missouri river, with cows, hand-carts, wheel-barrows, with little flour, and no unnecessaries, and come to this place quicker, and with less fatigue, than by following the heavy trains, with their cumbrous herds, which they are often obliged to drive miles to feed Do you not like this method of travelling? Do you think salvation costs too much? If so, it is not worth having. Sisters, 50 and 60 years old have drove ox teams to this valley, and are alive and well yet; true they could have come much easier by walking alone, than by driving a team, but by driving the oxen, they helped others here; and cannot you come the easier way?

There is grain and provisions enough in the Valleys for you to come to, and you need not bring more than enough to sustain you 100 days, to ensure you a supply for the future: and let those who are coming with teams and have the means, bring nails, glass, paints, oils, wire No. 9, osage, or ornamental and other choice seeds, and such articles as are most needed in a new country, to exchange with the brethren here for bread: and start earlier than usual, even as soon as teams can possibly be supported on the prairie, so as to avoid the spring rains and floods, and be here to assist in harvest.

Dispense with all useless rubbish on the journey, and provide young stock of the best quality, so far as you are able to bring any; and silver instead of gold, for change is scarce, and silver will be more useful. The funds for the emigration of the poor use continually increasing, by the exertion of the Saints in the valley; and it is the duty of Saints in the States, and other places to add to those funds according to their ability. President Orson Hyde will return to Kanesville this Fall, and make preparation to remove his family to this place the ensuing season. Elders Ezra T. Benson, and Jedediah M Grant, will repair to Kanesville, immediately after Conference, and superintend the emigration the coming season. They are sent expressly to push the Saints to the Valley.

Elder Woodruff will remain at this place at present; also Elder Geo. A. Smith, unless circumstances shall occasion his return to Iron County. Nothing definite has been heard of Elders Parley P. Pratt, Amasa Lyman, and Charles C. Rich, since they passed Little Salt Lake last spring; though the papers report their arrival in California with 140 wagons, and it is supposed that Elder Pratt is pursuing his mission on the islands and coasts of the Pacific: and that Elders Lyman and Rich, are marking a settlement in California, between this and San Diego, and gathering the Saints thereto, and that they will appoint missions to the Elders, as the Spirit shall direct. They are also instructed to extend settlements toward Iron County, at every desirable point, with as little delay as possible. Elder Orson Pratt is on the way from the States; and about 500 wagons, mostly of the Saints who are emigrating to this place; but they started too late, were hindered by heavy rains and floods, and it will be very late before the last camp will arrive.

By recent communication of President F. D. Richards, of England, we learn that the prospect of immediate emigration of the European brethren to San Diego, as we had anticipated, is in no wise flattering, there being no regular shipping from England to that port; therefore, Elder Richards will continue to ship the Saints by way of New Orleans to Kanesville, as hitherto, only be particular to start them earlier in the season, so that they can be at Pottawatamie in season to build their hand-carts, and walk or ride over the mountains as they may have means, before snow falls. Many of the English brethren and sisters think it a trifle to walk 15 or 20 miles to hear preaching on the Sabbath, and return home at evening, and then stand at their labor the remainder of the week; and can they not walk 20 miles per day, for 50 days, for the sake of getting to their Father's house; to the home of the Saints, in the Valley of the mountains? Some may have teams, some cows, they can kill buffalo, and other game by the route, and when weary, rest a day, if the Sabbaths are not long enough; and can not they fare as well as ancient Israel, when journeying towards Canaan? They were traveling 40 years, but the Saints can walk from Kanesville, here, in twice 40 days, and harm no one. Now is the time for the Saints to come, except such, as are counselled to tarry, and preach, and the like, and they who can come will never find a better time. If some of the Saints would bring shepherd dogs, they would be of great use in the Valley: shepherds are needed here.

Elder Richards will also appropriate so much of the emigrating fund in his possession, as may be necessary to forward two ship loads of the Saints to Kanesville, where they should be, in April, ready to prepare for their journey over the mountains. Let your selection be made in wisdom, having regard to those who are faithful, and have borne the burdens in the heat of the day; and also in some measure to their professions or trades, according to our need of the various mechanic arts, as we have suggested, and your information of circumstances here shall prompt: committing them to the care of agents, wise men, who will receipt for all moneys, and will take receipts before landing, of every individual, of the amount he has been helped by the funds, with a promise to refund the same as soon as he can procure the means; and let each company remain together until they arrive at this place, when it shall be told them what to do.

Start no more Saints on account of the Poor Fund, than you forward means, by the Agents in charge, to see their respective companies safe through to the Valley. And let no funds go into the hands of those who are helped, but let all moneys expended be paid out by the Agents, for passage, provision, and such things as are indispensible; taking receipts of all, in the harbor of New Orleans, and also at Kanesville; and let all those receipts, funds on hand vested in oxen, cows, or other property in the hands of the Agents, or in use of the company, be reported at our office immediately on arrival. It is expected that every person assisted by the Fund, for the emigration of the poor, will help themselves to the utmost of their ability; and not one bring stores of merchandize, to the expense of another's tarrying behind. No! let him who has chests of goods, or money, pay his own passage, and let those be helped, who cannot help themselves, or, but in part; and many can furnish every necessary thing but their passage money, and many, a portion of that. If those assisted by the Poor Fund expect to ride in carriages and wagons over the mountains, the number you can forward will be very small; but if they have faith to walk through, a few teams loaded with flour, will make a multitude comfortable, and many can be removed at little cost. The funds now on hand amount to more than $13,000 raised almost entirely in the Valley; and if the Saints in England and other places, shall be as diligent the coming year, in donating to the Fund, as have the Saints here, a great ingathering may be expected to follow.

The Semi-annual Conference of the Church, commenced at the Bowery in this city, Sunday, Sept. 7th, at 10 A. M., and continued from day to day, till Wednesday the 10th inst., when it adjourned to the 6th of October, next, to meet at the same place. President Brigham Young presided during the Conference, which was composed of a vast assembly of the Saints, from all the settlements; and the various proceedings were marked with strong feelings, in preachings, teachings, testimonies, and in sustaining all the general authorities of the Church, as they were last April, except Lewis Abbott, deceased, and Elisha H. Groves, removed to Iron County, and William Snow, and Winslow Farr, were appointed to fill the vacancies in the High Council, Nathaniel H. Felt and John Banks were appointed Presiding Travelling Bishops, to travel in the Church and among the branches, counselling the Bishops, and seeing they are faithful in their calling, in gathering, tithing, and causing it to be forwarded to the general office, in keeping correct accounts: and they settle with the several Bishops, from time to time, and report the same to the Presiding Bishop.

E. T. Benson, and Jedediah M. Grant were appointed Agents to gather the poor, and President Orson Hyde's, Agency was continued. Elders Samuel W. Richards, Willard Snow, Abram O. Smoot, Dorr P. Curtis, and Vinson Shirtliff, were appointed missions to the British Isles, and Daniel Carn, to Germany. President John Young, received a mission to Ohio, to preach the gospel, and gather the Saints, and Elder John L. Dunyon to preach the gospel in the States. The Conference voted to observe the words of wisdom, and particularly to dispense with the use of tea, coffee, snuff, and tobacco, and in this thing, as well as many others, what is good for the Saints in the mountains, is good for Saints in other places, and if all who profess to be Saints would appropriate the funds, lavished on luxuries, and articles unwise to use, to the benefit of the Public Works, we would soon see another "Temple of the Lord."

The Conference also voted to commence anew the tithings and consecrations; and that within 30 days, each Saint should make a consecration of one tenth of his property, and one tenth of his interest or income ever after, and that all who will not thus tithe themselves be cut off from the Church.

A fire is kindled in the earth, and who shall quench it? A light is shining, and who shall extinguish it? The nations of the earth are fearing and trembling; the fire burns, and the light dazzles, but they know not what to make of it. God has set his hand to restore Israel, and save the remnants of Ephraim, but they know it not. The oldest and most powerful governments are shaken to their centre, and kings know not the cause. The way is fast preparing for the introduction of the Gospel into China, Japan, and other nations, which for ages have sat in darkness, and stood aloof from celestial science, and foreign intercourse; and it is the business of the Twelve Apostles, to fill every open door, and push to the right and left, with the horns of Joseph, until every heart shall feel; and blow the trump of salvation, till every ear shall ring with the glorious intelligence, that there is a God in the heavens, who guides the destinies of all men, and who would that all men should come to the knowledge of a crucified Savior, and be saved.

Brethren pray for us! Sisters pray for us! Be humble, prayerful, watchful, diligent, and persevering, in every good word and work, and in the end you shall overcome all evil, and sit down with us in our Father's kingdom. Elders of Israel lift up your voices like trumpets, open your mouths wide, and proclaim salvation to all the meek of the earth, and you shall bring many souls to Zion.

It is our wish to see all the members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, at the General Conference in this city, on the 6th of April, 1853. And we hope the brethren will be able arrange the affairs of their various missions, in such a manner, that no injury will be sustained by the Saints, while they shall spend a little season with us in council. And we pray God, the Eternal Father, to bless the Saints, throughout the earth, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Pacific Railroad.

An important notice to the Stockholders appears in one of our advertising columns this morning. There are doubtless, some stockholders included in the list of non-payers who are so from forgetfulness, and they will of course at once pay up their instalments. The road is going on prosperously. An additional number of hands will soon be placed upon it, and we should be sory to see any of the stockholders permanently withholding the instalments which are called for. It ought not to be one.—[Mo. Republican.

Pay the Printer.

Our friends and patrons who know themselves to be indebted to this office, are respectfully requested to settle the same with as little delay as consistent.

The Indians have relieved us of more than five hundred dollars on our trip. This, with our other expenses on the journey, leaves a vacancy for our outstandings. This loss we met with in the service of the Church, to keep up a proper communication between the Saints here and in the Valley; and with some propriety we might ask the public to make it good to us. But as we have tried our best to fulfil our calling, as the Presiding Elder of the Church here for the last few years without being a public charge, we will not burthen our friends now; and if they will pay us what is our due, and still do their duty in subscribing for the Guardian, we shall not feel this loss to be more than we are able to bear, however unwilling.

Home Again.

Here we are at the table as usual, driving ahead the quill. We had a very good journey home. Came to the Missouri River in thirty-nine and a half days from the Valley. Crops excellent in Utah. Melons rather better and larger than usual. Ripe peaches two and a half years from the stone. We saw them, handled them, and smelt them. Two choice ones were given to us by Governor Young, but they being the first fruits, we considered them almost too sacred to eat, and gave them to some of our best friends.

Brother Lorenzo Young took us into his garden, and showed us some dozen peach trees, low but strong, as if nature had peculiarly ordered their growth to resist the strong winds that sometimes blow in that country, and sustain, at the same time, their precious fruit. The above trees hung full of the richest and fairest peaches that we most ever saw. Truly, it was a pleasing and gratifying sight. Grape, apple, and pear trees were flourishing in the same Garden. Industry and enterprize can truly develope nature's richest and choicest gifts. The Valley may be made a paradise, and its inhabitants enjoy the luxuries of a rich and retired country.

We lost four excellent mules stolen by the Cheyennes at the South Platte. If ever a poor fellow felt miserably independant, we did on that occasion. No animals to feed, guard, or drive. Our wagon and baggage on the bank;—grub, frying pan, and Coffee pot sung abroad, and not an animal to move the portable kitchen. But we borrowed, and so we came home.

Reminiscence.

It is now about five years since the Presidency of the Church in this region has mostly rested upon us. At the beginning of the term, this was an Indian country,—under Indian control and dominion, and the laws of the State were not extended over us. We, therefore, of necessity had to be a law unto ourselves: and the white inhabitants being mostly of our own people, placed much responsibility upon us, not only in relation to the spiritual affairs of the Church, but also in relation to judicial and executive affairs. The Presidency of the whole Church, at the beginning of the settlement on this Frontier, were situated temporarily, with the main body, on the west side of the River, and their personal labors greatly devoted to exploring the Western country, and searching out a location for the future, and we hoped, final settlement of the Church.

In our responsible trust, we were assisted by the co-ordinate, zealous and efficient labors of Elders G. A. Smith, and E. T. Benson, until the Spring of '49, at which period they with their families, removed to the Valley of the Great Salt Lake. Since then, our labors and responsibilities have been much augmented.

After our settlement began here, this like most other newly settled countries where the force and power of law cannot be so readily directed or brought to bear against offenders as in older countries, was sought to be made the home of thieves and counterfeiters. To repel the invasion of these wolves in sheep's clothing, and to root out and exclude from our Territory this class of beings, gave us great trouble, labor, and anxiety. We were resolved to clear the County of them or die in the attempt. We succeeded in this to a very great extent, if not entirely.

A thief, a counterfeiter, or any person who wishes to live dishonestly, who disrepects good and wholsome laws, whether of human or divine origin, can have but a small place in our confidence, esteem, or affections. We have been under the necessity of adopting strong measures in some instances to preserve order in the absence of Constitutional laws; yet it has been our aim to maintain a conscience void of offence, and to secure the greater good to the greater number.

In consequence of our political views and course at the time of the Statutes of the State were extend over us, quite a storm arose; but it was only wind and the effects of a little "western thunder." The elements were soon hushed when the calm breeze of truth swept over the land. We were true and faithful to our friends and no less so to our enemies. The result has been, victory inscribed on our banner, peace and honor in our land, and nought but good will remaining in our heart towards friends and foes. We did not like the idea of being banished, burned up, or driven over the Missouri River by force, for the crime of thinking or acting for ourselves when our thoughts led us to violate no law of the Country. But we freely forgive all who made such threats against us in those exciting times; and if they reform, we would gladly see them enjoy all the happiness in this life and also in that which is to come, which truth and honor can award to their most zealous votaries.

We have been charged by outsiders with having and using too much influence and power, and some have been jealous and envious because of it. But we feel in no way beholden or indebted to such persons for our influence or power, be it much or little, for they have never contributed to help us gain it. If what little influence we may possess be the fruit of our own toil, labor and perseverance, it is ours. We have a moral and legal claim to it; and if such men would go to with their mights and earn influence for themselves, they would contribute more to their own honor, to the cause of humanity and general interest of the public than by attempting to restrict or destroy ours

Since the laws of the State have been extended over us, have we violated them, or suffered them to be violated, knowingly, in any case where our influence could prevent it? We challenge our bitterest enemies to take the candle of the law and follow our track where they please, and if they can find us in transgression, we object not to suffer the penalty. Or if any person, Jew or Gentile, can say in truth that the drift and tide of our influence have not been to suppress and restrain disobedience to the laws of the State, and to maintain them inviolate, we will suffer the disgrace of a transgressor, and ask none to pity us; and before we suffer it to run in any other channel we hope to be gathered with our fathers and sleep in the arms of our Mother, Earth, until the trump of God shall bid us awake. If any man can put our influence to a better use than we ourself, we would gladly resign it to him if it were in our power.

The County can pay her debts—she is not embarrassed. Our political organization has not been dishonored or disgraced, though some of our Locofoco friends seemed to think that cannibals were as worthy and capable to manage such an organization as we. We have also been as sparing and prudent of the wood and timber on the public lands as the nature of the circumstances would permit.

We are now called to leave our present field of labor and remove, with our family, to the Valley of the Great Salt Lake, in the Spring; and there to engage in the same business of printing that we have been engaged in here. We expect to publish a paper there to be called "THE MOUNTAIN STANDARD." Its exact size and form have not been fully decided upon; but it will probably be larger than the Guardian. We shall continue the publication of this paper until we remove, unless we shall sell out sooner. In the event of doing so, the paper will be continued to subscribers as usual. Whether we sell out or not, no one need be in doubt about subscribing or about continuing their subscription. Therefore, in the event of our selling out, we shall make arrangements for the paper to be continued to all paying subscribers.

Our friends need fear no "Blow ups" among the Mormon authorities in Pottawatamie as some knowing ones predict But a general emigration from this place to the Valley is counselled and expected in the Spring. Elders E. T. Benson and J. M. Grant, are sent from the Valley to assist us in this labor and will be the active and acting counsellors to the people, while we give our time more particularly to the settling up of our business and arranging our private affairs, preparatory to the removal in the Spring.

If any man has been presumptive enough to write to his friends here that he is to have our press, we cannot be responsible for it. The statement is incorrect. If men here have made up that report without authority they have injured their friend. Elders Ezra T. Benson and Jedediah M. Grant are expected to return to the Valley in the Spring; and it is according to the instruction which we have received, to place such a man to preside over the few members that may remain in Pottawatamie as we may consider the most advisable.

Pottowatamie County For Sale.

The valuable claims and improvements of that portion of this County owned and occupied by the Mormon population are for sale.

Remember that Kanesville is a valuable point. It is and destined to be the outfitting post on the western Frontier for Oregon, Salt Lake, and California emigrants. The soil is productive, and a home market for every thing that can be produced from the soil.

The Mormons are about to make a general move from this place in the Spring; and now is the time for speculation and investment, for all such as wish to increase their wealth. It is the best point for producing, in all the West, and the best market on the Frontier. Now is the time for purchasers:—Strike while the "Iron is hot" and secure a fortune while you can.

Horses, Mules, Oxen, Cows, &c., for Crossing the Plains.

Having had much experience in traveling across the plains by performing the trip four times, and having observed diligently the kind of animals that endure and perform the journey best, and that are the best adapted for the kind of service required, we propose to purchase and keep on hand, as early in the Spring as necessary, horses, mules, oxen, cows, and as many wagons as we can procure, that are suitable for the trip. Thus emigrants may avail themselves of the experience of a competent judge who will purchase and keep on hand for the accommodation of emigrants the above articles, together with provisions, &c., &c.

Such as may wish to avail themselves of this opportunity, will please forward their orders in due season to facilitate their intended journey; accompanying which, drafts on responsible houses, or certificates of deposite to the amount of the desired purchase as nearly as a calculation can be reasonably made, must invariably attend such application to insure attention.

The property will be furnished as low as can be purchased in the country, with the addition of the expense and trouble of purchasing and driving. We have no hesitation in assuring all who may wish to purchase the foregoing property, that we will furnish it cheaper, at this place, than they can purchase themselves, and of a more suitable quality for crossing the plains.

Certificates of deposite with Beach, Eddy, Jamison & Co., of St. Louis, are just the same as cash in hand with us; or with any responsible banking house between this place and New Orleans, or between this place and the City of Boston.

To prevent theft and forgery, these drafts or certificates of deposite will receive a private mark when endorsed by us, and this mark will be forwarded by letter forthwith to the house that issued them; and should a draft or certificate be presented without this private mark, the house may know that such bill or draft has been purloined and our endorsement counterfeited thereon.

Those who purchase and forward drafts, or send us certificates of deposite, should inform the house that issues them, concerning this private mark, which they are to receive by letter from us before they cash their paper.

All letters or orders addressed to Orson Hyde, Editor of the Frontier Guardian, Kanesville, Iowa, will receive due attention.

Hon. A. W. Babbitt.

This gentleman and family from Utah Territory, arrived in this town, on Wednesday afternoon, the 12th inst., in the midst of a bitter snow storm. We learn that Mr. B. is sorely afflicted with boils.

Things to be Remembered in Crossing the Plains.

A trip across the plains is calculated to try any and every person to the very core. The good and bad qualities of the heart are most clearly and conspicuously developed. Having crossed the plains four times within the last eighteen months, with men of different temperaments, and dispositions, we have had a very good chance to become acquainted with human nature in all its varied windings in journeying over these dreary and desolate regions: and a word from us, touching some principles and circumstances may not be unacceptable to our readers.

In the first place then, the sin of killing more game on the route than is needed, should not pass unrebuked. Some men, anxious to immortalize their name, will shoot down the Buffalo for the mere sport of the operation, when they already have more meat than they can use. The Almighty has not created valuable animals, and placed them in those sections that are not adapted to other products, for the accommodation of the weary traveler and the roaming savage, to be made the sport of folly and the cruel waste of thoughtless and unprincipled men. The Mormon creed says: "Who to him that sheddeth blood or wasteth flesh when he hath no need," and every good and feeling man must say, Amen, to it. He who kills when he needs not, may not be able to kill when he does need!

Emigrants and travelers are often compelled to leave animals by the way that are weary and worn down: But when they leave them, they do not relinquish their claim to them. They reluctantly abandon them because they cannot take them along. It is generally considered that animals thus found on the plains, belong to those who find them. This is a mistake. It is a custom that can only claim selfishness, bordering upon dishonesty, for its author. Animals thus found, should be taken up, if able to travel, and driven along to some settlement, and if the owner comes within reasonable time, let him have his animal or animals by paying a moderate compensation for the trouble. This is doing as one would like to be done to.

There is a Fort near the head of Grand Island, and another some three hundred miles West of it, called "Fort Laramie." These military stations are placed there, not only to keep the Indians at peace one with the other; but to protect the emigrants from Indian molestations, and to afford relief to actual sufferers. Of necessity, there is more or less stock kept at these posts, and in their vicinity and neighborhood for the use of the garrisons, &c., &c. This stock is all branded with the Capitals U. S., signifying that they belong to the UNITED STATES. We are thus particular, as some foreigners who cross the plains may not know what this brand means. No emigrant should take up this stock or interfere with it on the plains, unless it has manifestly strayed from the post, and it is in your power to drive it nearer to its home than when you found it. By taking it into your charge, you become responsible for it; whereas, if you let it alone, you incur no responsibility; and if this stock is found at some distance from the Forts, the presumption is that it has been taken there by soldiers for some purposes of labor. Let this entirely alone will be the safer plan. We are thus cautious and particular upon this subject, because a yoke of oxen of this kind was taken up somewhere in the Black Hills by a man in Elder Orson Pratt's Company. We met them on "Muddy," about ten miles West of Bridger, and they informed us that they had a yoke of Government cattle, and wished to send them back. We were in no condition to take them. These cattle will probably be returned in the Spring, or a yoke equally good sent from here to replace them. Individuals, and especially Captains of trains, should be very particular respecting these things.

Another evil, merits attention here: A certain gentleman, not a member of our Church, joined Mr. Thomas S. Williams' train last Summer with some two or three loads of Liquor. This liquor was sold, in part, at Fort Laramie, contrary to the laws and regulations at that Post. His property was seized and about to be confiscated for the offence; but by some plausible explanation, was allowed to pass. Thus a Mormon train got the credit or disgrace of doing that which they did not do. But Mormons should be careful as to whom they admit in their trains; and allow no one to violate any law or regulation of a Military Post established in an Indian Country for their safety and protection. It is ungrateful, besides dishonorable, selfish, and low. Let no Mormon train, henceforth, suffer any such irregularities in their midst, either by their own men or by strangers. But do all in your power to sustain, respect, and honor the laws of the nation; and particularly those that are ordained and enacted for our good and safety while crossing the plains. "Submit yourselves to the powers that be, and keep every ordinance of man for Lord's sake!"

In traveling over the plains, let every man do as he would like to be done unto: and when he gets to the place of his destination, he can look back and fancy that he hears all his associates say that he has done right; and with a peaceful conscience, a light and cheerful heart, he goes about his task, thanking and praising his Savior and his God.

It should be the study of every one also while crossing the plains of life, to so order his course, that when his setting sun sheds his last ray upon fainting and sinking nature, he may hear the consoling notes of the invisible spirit whispering in his Ear: Dying mortal, rest in hope!

Corn and Hay.

Corn and good prairie hay received on old debts at this office if delivered soon; and also for the Guardian. Who will not subscribe now? Cash will not be refused either.

Bring your Hay, Corn, and Cash,
For the Guardian clears the trash,
And error truly goes to smash
Most gloriously.

Shot.

Mr. James Monroe, Agent for Reese & Co., was shot by Howard Egan, near Bear River in September last, while on his way to Salt Lake with a train of Goods.

The cause of the difficulty was this:—While Egan was at the mines in California, Monroe took unwarrantable liberties with his (Egan's) wife, by which Egan received an unwelcome accession to his family. After the deed was executed, Egan returned to the City, told what he had done and gave himself up to be dealt with by the officers of the law. About this time we left for home.

It is again reported that Daniel Webster is seriously ill at Montreal. The complaint is an affection of the throat.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
Sept. 21, 1851.

TO ALL THE SAINTS IN POTTAWATAMIE,

Beloved Brethren: We send unto you our beloved brethren, Ezra T. Benson and Jedediah M Grant, for the special purpose of counselling and assisting you to come to this place, and we desire you to give heed to their counsel in all things and come to this place with them next season; and fail not.

Come all ye officers in the Church, and all ye officers in the State or county. There is no more time for Saints to hesitate what course they will pursue. We have been calling to the Saints in Pottawatamie ever since we left them to come away; but there has continually been an opposing spirit, whispering, as it were—Stay another year, and get a better fit-out, until many who had means to come conveniently have nothing left to come with, even as a former Prophet said, "if a man will not gather when he has the chance, he will be afflicted with the Devil," his property will go to waste, his family fall by sickness, and destruction and misery will be on his path; even so has it been with some of you, and so on will it be with more of you, if you do not hearken to this call and come away.

What are you waiting for? Have you any good excuse for not coming? No! you have all of you, unitedly, a far better chance than we had when we started as Pioneers to find this place; you have better teams and more of them. You have as good food and more of it; you have as much natural strength as we have had to come; our women and children have walked here, and been blessed in walking here, and barefoot, too, only as they could occasionally get a skin from the Indians to make a moccasin, and can you not do the same? You can. And we say again, come home! And if you can get one good wagon and team to five families, and five teams to 100 souls; or no teams at all, more than cows and calves to your handcarts, you can come here with greater comfort and safety than the Pioneers come here who had nothing to come to; while you will have every thing; and here is the place for all the Saints to get their fit-out for Zion, even from all nations, therefore we say again, Arise and Come home.

Elder Hyde will return to your place, with Brs. Benson and Grant, and act in his calling as usual; but you must not dep end too much on him, for he has his private affairs to settle and prepare to bring on his family, and come with you; and we have sent Brs. Benson and Grant to bless you, and counsel you and relieve Br. Hyde. Therefore we wish you to evacuate Pottawatamie, and the States, and next fall be with us all ye Saints of the Most High, and it shall be well with you if you will keep all the commandments.

Oh ye Saints, give not your heritage to reproach, neither sell your improvements in Pottawatamie to strangers for nothing. No! rather sell your improvements for their value or give them into the hands of those you shall be counselled to, for the benefit of the poor Saints who are coming after as consecration, for the benefit of the poor.

It is a day of sacrifice, and those who are ready to sacrifice and do their duty, and come home, they may save being burnt. How long will the Saints in St. Louis, remain where they are? Arise and come with the Saints of Pottawatamie, and you shall be blessed.

We remain your brethren in the New Covenant,
BRIGHAM YOUNG.
HEBER C. KIMBALL.
WILLARD RICHARDS.

The foregoing article from the Presidency is a strong one, and should be listened to by every one who believes the truth, and who has any respect for the authorities of this Church. It has been our constant aim to forward the emigration to the Valley as fast as possible; but there have been some that wished to go to Texas, and some that wished to go to Jackson county, Mo., and some have said one thing, and some have said another. There has been a spirit more or less disinclined to go to the west. Large storehouses have been erected here contrary to counsel, and calculations made for mercantile speculations, the work of years, and the fanciful notion held out that all other merchants in the county would be broken down by the mammoth capital amassed by the operation of machinery acting upon the same principle that a man can hoist himself by pulling at his boot straps. But this, like the fog and smoke, is vanished away; and the emigration will now be urged without this delusive hope of vain speculatition. Read the foregoing article, and act according to its dictates. Cease to murmur or repine, and do the best and all you can, and you will be prospered, and the hand of Providence will work for your good.

Indian Agency.

We are happy to hear that Major J. E. Barrow, the present incumbant of the above post is doing all in his power to straighten up matters on the Frontier and to keep things regular among the Indians. We bid him God speed, at his post, in maintaining order by enforcing the laws of the United States, and bringing to punishment white or red Indians who may be guilty of offences. If any help is needed to effect this, we know of at least one that is ready. There are some irregularities among the Indians which we have been made to smart under, and we shall not be slow to lend our aid to correct these or similar offences among that people. We shall make no presents to "Young Elk," the Omaha Chief, because his tribe violated the pledge he made, by stealing four horses from Capt. Walton's train which we know of, besides other violations of the covenant which we believe them guilty of.

If, for any seeming want of attention to the duties of his office, under circumstances with which we may not have been fully conversant, we have censured the Major, it has not been through any design to operate against the public good, or to gratify any personal antipathy, for we never had any against him. Since our return, and becoming acquainted with "matters and things," we feel it a duty and an agreeable one too, to say that we believe Major Barrow is doing his duty, and all that he can, to maintain good order and regulations on this Frontier.

Much excitement had been occasioned at Panama, by the murder of a Mexican young lady, by an Englishman on the way to a fandago. He was immediately attacked by the natives, but rescued by the Governor.

Indian Treaty.

The late treaty at Laramie, concluded by Col. Mitchell between several tribes of Indians and the Government, we fear, will be of very little use. The Government, unquestionably, had a good and charitable design towards the red men, wishing to secure protection to emigrants by maintaining friendly relations with the various tribes on the Plains.

To effect this, many presents have been made to them which ought to induce them to be quiet, and to allow the traveler to pass unmolested in his person and property. But it is not the case.

The posts of Laramie and Kearney, are provided only with a few Infantry. This is not the kind of service, in our opinion, which is required for the security of emigrants and travelers across the plains. The Indians are nimble on foot, and being mostly provided with the fleetest horses, they can commit their thefts and robberies, and fly beyond the reach or successful pursuit of Infantry, with all the ease that a steamer can outstrip a flat-boat. Mounted Riflemen is the kind of service which is wanted at those posts, and to range about over the plains

Treaties are very good; but powder and lead are the only effectual treaties that can secure the white man and his property from the rapacity of that people. Feed the wolf with the best of fresh meat and be very kind to him, and you may almost hope to tame him and change his nature: but when he gets hungry, he cares not what you have done for him; he will kill the first unprotected animal that he can overpower. Just so with the Indian. It is hard to change his nature and disposition. In some cases they may be true, yet, they are not to be trusted.

We suffered some little by the Pawnees on our late trip westward, and also by the Chyennes on our return. They stole two span of mules from us on Monday night, October 20th, while encamped at the upper crossing of the South Platte Mr. Hunt lost a very fine mule and a snag bay mare at the same time. The night was extremely cold and dark, and the guard was rather remiss; yet the night was severe, and the Indians took the advantage and stole our animals. We visited their camp the next day about five miles from our encampment in search of them, but we could not find them. The chief said the Pawnees had stolen them, and that they stole from them the night previous thirty horses. But Capt. Wharton, Commandant at Fort Kearney, told us that there were no Pawnees above at all.

We therefore say to all emigrants and travelers across the Plains—put no confidence in the fidelity of the Indians, notwithstanding existing treaties; but keep loaded rifles between your property and them; and then your animals may be secure, and yourselves not left on the Plains with wagon and baggage and not an animal to place before it as we were after our four mules were stolen. Through the kindness of a friend more fortunate than we, we obtained the use of animals to haul us home.

Blasphemy and Obscenity!

On Sunday week, our streets were the theatre of the lowest specimens of human depravity which the citizens of this upper country, we presume, ever witnessed. We did not see it, neither hear it: and it would have tended to the credit of the place, and more so to the performers, if no one had seen or heard them. From the description given us, it would seem that the crater of "tophet" had opened and let out all the sons of Bacchus for noon. They were some of our would be, genteel folks of the town. They have made no apology for their grossly obscene and vulgar language, coupled with the most horrid and revolting blasphemy that men well could utter.

Do we wish to persecute them? No! but we wish all good citizens to summon up their virtuous and insulted dignity, the burning influence of which should cause such reckless offenders against the laws of decency, to call for the shades of forgetfulness and the gloom of darkness to hide them from the face of sterling integrity and moral worth. They are spots in your feasts of charity, and should no longer feast with you. We are sorry to say these things; but we must do our duty; and if men will have no respect for themselves, neither for the town, for the State, nor for the United States; and what is worse than all,—none for the delicate feelings of the fair; they ought to be spurned from all decent and civil society, and frowned upon by parents, by sons and by daughters, until they will learn that they cannot mortify and crucify the fine feelings of the citizens of a whole town with impunity. They have immortalized their names, and gained a most unenviable notoriety. But if these men wish to redeem themselves, let them go and complain of themselves before the magistrate, pay a pretty heavy fine to support schools, and this kind of an apology with correct life afterwards may gradually restore to respect again.

Well may the honorable and respectable Gentiles of the place, be ashamed of some of the members of their own church. Like the Bloomer Costume, they can hardly become popular.

Return.

The officers appointed by the Executive for the Territory of Utah, have left that Country, and are returning to Washington, because they consider that Governor Young and the people did not receive them with the respect and honor due to men of their rank as branches of the American Government. It is our opinion that if they had remained a little longer, all differences might have been amicably adjusted.

False.

The statement that has been the rounds of the papers, that we would not allow Judge Brocchus to fire a salute on the Fourth of July last while crossing the plains, but would allow him to fire when he arrived in the Valley, is unqualifiedly false. Judge Brocchus knows that such a statement is as false as mortal can fabricate. Many others, both Jews and Gentiles who were with us on the Fourth, also know that it is false, wicked, and malicious. The Cannon was fired on the Fourth, and a glorious celebration we had also. Some hundreds of people were present. The Cannon was never in our charge, and we had no control over it whatever. The Judge asked us for some powder for the purpose; he not having any at hand; and we had only a small quantity of choice rifle powder which we wished to reserve to kill game. The Judge said he would replace it at one of the Forts, and we let him have it to load the orator of the day: and he spoke eloquently on the plains; and was followed by the lower notes of his Honor, the Judge, and our own.

The above is all we know about the celebration of the Fourth of July last; and Judge Brocchus has said nothing to the contrary of this, neither will he or any one else, if they regard the truth.

How True the Adage.

"Man is known by the company he keeps;" and not only man, but woman also "Men do not gather grapes from thorns, nor figs from thistles." A virtuous and good man makes not the brambles of the vicious and unprincipled the place of spending his leisure hours. He turns his attention to honorable business—he devotes his leisure time to the acquisition of useful knowledge, enriching and adorning his mind, until it becomes beautiful enough to attract around it, and to gather under its influence thousands who hunger and thirst after knowledge; and he waters them with the dew of heaven, and feeds them on bread celestial. He holds the keys of the secret avenues of intelligence and honor. The storehouse of wisdom pays his drafts at sight. He receives, not to shine alone; but to throw his radiance, like the sun, and bring out to view a thousand bright constellations to land his fame and to extend his glory. Oh! improving and intelligent man! Who art thou, and what art thou? A God, germinating and bursting into light and power! "Be ye perfect, even as your father in heaven is perfect."

Woman, where is she to be found? or where should she be found? Walking in the counsel of the ungodly, standing in the way of sinners or sitting in the seat of the scornful? No! but with the virtuous and good. Having formed a character for excellence, and established a reputation for virtue, she seeks her society among those, who, like the mirror, reflect her own image. An unspotted reputation is her defence against the tongue of envy and slander, while charity and inteligence are the bulwark of her security and honor. She hazards not her reputation by making persons of doubtful caste her companions—she avoids those places, and shuns those appearances that might authorize suspicion to attach itself to her. In bold relief, she stands on the pedestal of true merit, and waves the white flag of perfection in triumph over her foes, on whose folds is inscribed, in letters of living light, bordered with a modest tinge of the crimson blush. Immortality is the wreath that environs my brow.

Man and woman being thus redeemed from the darkness and imperfections of the world, and exalted to the sublime regions of pure intelligence, may enjoy an eternal union where the wounds of sin and the sting of remorse can annoy their peace no more, and where the clouds of error shall no longer obstruct the bright visions of hope that spontaneously spring up in their heart. Oh man, and woman! this is thy state and condition, after this corruptible has put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality. Reader, the gospel has power to effect this for thee if thou wilt listen to and obey its voice. It has power to redeem and restore to thee all thy friends, whether living or dead, destroy death and him that holds the power of it, with all the sad consequences that have emanated from the foe.

Horrid! Awful!!

A certain man, not a hundred years ago was inducted, by a kindred spirit, to go among the Mormons on a grand speculating tour, to sell them the power and art of setting the world on fire. But the Mormons had not faith, and consequently did not purchase, and the result was, that the fire King became a pensioner and pauper upon the charity and bounty of the Mormons, who paid his passage from the Salt Lake to the States. Now, the fire remaining and burning so hotly in his bones, (not being able to sell it for millions,) he thinks he shall be able to burn up the community by the fire of slander and disappointed hope of a fat living from that source. So look out for the lava, all ye unbelieving race; for the crater is bound to burst; and then woe to them who would not buy the infernal fire machine. If men will not allow their bread to stop their mouths, the hot poker of truth may sometimes be applied with success.

Revised Code.

We have hastily glanced through this work, and consider it a good one; and a decided improvement upon the old system. If the meaning of some portions had been a little more clearly expressed, it would probably have been more satisfactory to the mass than now. Every business man and citizen ought to have the laws of his State. These laws should be simplified and adapted, not only to the comprehension of the common people, but to that also of the Juvenile mind, and introduced into our common schools as a Class Book. A common School education ought to embrace, at least, a good knowledge of the Statute laws of the State in which the Scholar is educated. Then, when he goes out into the field of active usefulness, he knows his rights; and knowing, dare assert and maintain them.

Recovered Property.

Captain Wharton, Commandant at Fort Kearney, recovered, a short time since, some fifteen or twenty horses and mules. Also a quantity of blankets, knives, and other articles, stolen and robbed from emigrants and travelers by the Pawnee Indians. Our blankets were recovered, but so dirty and filthy that a white man would not want them, and the Captain gave them to his interpreter. We recovered none of our property taken by the Pawnees. The Judge's valuable grey horse was recovered, but in a very reduced condition—hardly worth bringing home.

Captain Wharton seems to be on hand to do every thing up in a proper manner; appears kind and gentlemanly to travelers, and was very courteous to us, particularly to some two or three persons in our Company who had no cash to procure provisions to last them to the States. He reminded us of the Mormon Bishops, handing over to the needy and destitute. Every person should be particularly cautious to violate no ordinance or regulations of these posts that are established for the protection and security of all who travel over the plains.

Law.

In consequence of the press of other business which occupies our entire attention almost, we shall be under the necessity of declining the transaction of any legal business from abroad. Our friends will please govern themselves accordingly.

Wanted.

A good New Milch or winter's cow, for which cash, and a liberal price will be given. Enquire at this office: Also a lad about fourteen years of age who can make himself generally useful among stock and about a house, may find a home and reasonable encouragement by enquiring at this office. None but a faithful, energetic, well trained lad need apply.

For the Frontier Guardian.

IN CAMP, DEVENPORT, IOWA,
October, 19th, 1851.

DEAR SIR:—In accordance with my promise of writing to you occasionally, I pen this hasty scroll.

Here we are on the banks of the Father of waters, and in view of the bustling, thriving town, from whence starts the newly projected Rail Road, to Council Bluffs; the bare talk of which is bringing a tremendous amount of emigrants on or near the proposed routes. Half the eastern world appear pouring into Iowa. Her advantages and resources scarcely yet are beginning to be known and her soil is unsurpassed by any State in the Union. The soil is not only adapted to grazing and stock raising, but the choicest fruits, and almost every species of grain and culinary roots are abundantly produced.

Myself and Company (four of us,) attended the State Rail Road Convention, at Iowa City, on the 15th, and had the honor of representing Pottawatamie County, in said Convention. Great interest is felt in this part of the State, in respect to this road—an outlet for the vast amount of produce, Grain, &c., which might realize to the inland farmer, a revenue which at present is not within his reach.

The crops of every kind, but especially corn, are very light; we shall have ten bushels there to one here on the same amount of ground.

The great mass of emigrants coming in, and the general failure of crops, will make high prices for most kinds of vegetables, grain, Pork, and Beef.

I have seen no other part of the country that will campare in soil, or beauty of scenery, to Pottawatamie and those upper counties.

Our Company at present are all well, and wish to be remembered to you.

AMICUS.

Progress of the Latter-day Saints in Italy --Letter from Elder Jabez Woodard.

ITALY, August 1st, 1851.

DEAR PRESIDENT SNOW:—A tract of forty-six pages has been issued against us in Switzerland, and a plentiful supply has arrived here; there is the Spaulding story and nothing else, except the common cant of sectarianism, and some quotations from "the Voice of Joseph," and "the only way way to be saved," for which I am very glad. I am happy to say that we now muster thirty-one members; I feel courage in the thought that you have taken the Presidency of the Indian empire; and if there be royal blood within my veins, it will roll with renewed vigor through every fibre of my frame, that with stimulated energies I may carry out your counsel; and if I know what honor and friendship, and gratitude require at my hands, you shall be in Italy at the same time you are in India, or elsewhere. I confess that when I found you laid upon me the solemn charge to gather Israel from among these nations, I felt the weight of the office, and at the same time new courage and new patience; my eyes are not closed to the difficulties of the situation, but I know where my strength lies. I feel as though I must fast and pray for every one of these kingdoms seperately, and I see that I must pass through many strange scenes, but by the help of the Lord I hope to overcome.

I strive to acquire a knowledge of languages and customs, laws and regulations, and other things necessary among these nations. If it were possible I could wish to disburden your mind of all future anxieties concerning this mission.

I know by my own experience something of what you must have felt since the moment you were named for the President of such a stupendous undertaking. What thoughts have oft crowded your mind from morning to midnight! What weariness by land and sea! And now a still loftier enterprize engages your attention, or at least one which gives a wider sphere of action. But what can I say that will leave you at rest concerning Italy? Perhaps, now you are absent, it would ill become me to boast of my goodness, still I may hope that I advance a little; and if ever a firm resolve has taken possession of my soul, it is now engraven there and registered in heaven; that by the grace of God; I am determined to tread all things beneath my feet that would militate against the accomplishment of the glorious work in which I am engaged. Yes; I would like to conquer but not for myself alone. I would render unto you that which is due from myself, and make thousands more to feel that which they owe.

The great thought which now occupies my mind is to put the leaven to work, as you say; but I do not yet see things open extensively, and I still stick to these vallies and mountains; I cast many longing looks and anxious reflections however towards other localities. Turin does not present any opening, but towards the Mediterranean it seems that amid the goings and comings of commerce, some of the seeds might travel far.

Elder Toronto joins with myself in love to you and all the Saints.

Yours affectionately,

JABEZ WOODWARD.

Affairs in New Mexico.

There is evidently great excitement in Santa Fe, growing out of events which have recently transpired there, of a very melancholy character. The last Santa Fe Gazette is filled with articles upon the subject of the murder of William C. Skinner, Esq., and Mr Burtneit, in Bernalillo County. At this distance from the scene of action, we cannot determine who is to blame, but we cannot without a compliance with the request to publish the proceedings of a meeting of the people at Santa Fe, on this subject. These proceedings severely censure the course of the Governor, and will call for investigation.—[Missouri Republican.

It is an extraordinary fact, stated on authority, that there is at the present time more of an Irish population in the United States of America than in Ireland it self. —[Louisville Courier.

The Swiss Mission--Letter from Elder T. B. H. Stenhouse.

CHEZ MONS. DUPRAZ, A LA SERVETTE,
492 GENEVE, August 26th, 1851.

DEAR PRESIDENT SNOW:—Knowing your continued anxiety and interest over these nations, I take a few minutes before retiring to rest, to say how we have been, and how we are.

Since I wrote you, I paid a visit to Signor Reta, the translator; he was happy to see me—inquired after your health, and sent his compliments. I expect a visit from him in a day or two. I hope to make a more intimate acquaintance with him. I have had a violent cold which confined me to bed two days. I think I suffered more than in all my little afflictions put together: After being restored sister Stenhouse was taken badly, much the same as myself, but much worse. We are now, thank the Lord, better. In the midst of all, we have done our best. Elder Roulet brought an intelligent man to see us, who was connected with the Church, where the lecture was delivered against us. We had several interesting conversations with him, at length on Friday night last, I baptized him. Yesterday we held our Sunday meeting, at which he was confirmed; we prayed, read, talked, and felt well. To-night he has brought his daughter to have some conversation. She is gone home to reflect.

To-day, I have received a very interesting letter from the brother I baptized at Lausanne. He says his wife wants to be baptized; and several others feel interested in the history of the Church by reading our publications. I feel as if the Lord had commenced to work among the people. I get on with the language pretty well. I hope when you pass through we will be thrilled by your own voice in this language.

Accept our united love, as ever yours, very affectionately.

T. B. H. STENHOUSE.

BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS.—In the issue of land warrants for services in the war of 1812. Florida war, &c., the Pension office have thus far only reached claims filed about the the first week of last January, while many cases filed in November and December remain unacted on. We cannot imagine the cause of delay, except upon the ground that the number of claims filed have largely exceeded the calculation of the Commissioner of Pensions. A mistaken idea pervades the minds of the recipients of this bounty land, that the warrants can be located upon any government land. Such is not the case. An act of Congress provides they shall be located only upon lands subject to private entry on the 3d of March last. This fact together with the prevailing impression that Congress will reduce the price of public lasds, will no doubt prevent them from selling for any more than what they now bring in the market,—[St, Louis Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.

The President has issued his proclamation against any citizen who may be found forming an expedition for the invasion of Mexico; it is issued on information that some Texans have organized and crossed the Frontier.

Affairs in Santa Fe.

Private letters from Santa Fe received in this city by the last mail, speak of a very excited state of affairs there, in which direct censure is cast upon the Governor for his course of action. We have already published they roceedings of a public meeting at Santa Fe, in which these charges are preferred in strong language, and it is hardly worth while to occupy our columns with correspondence on the subject. It is certain, we think, that Governor Calhoun, who went into office in very favorable auspices. has succeeded in alienating from him the large body of Americans in the Territory. How this has been brought about is not so apparent, although causes are assigned which may, in that country, have their weight. As yet, no one has stepped forward in defence of the Governor, but this, we presume, will be done; and until he is heard there ought to be a suspension of public opinion. The office of Governor of New Mexico is, necessarily, a very unpleasant one, because the mass of the population are so unlike our own citizens, as to make it almost impossible that they should get along quietly together.

The Natives have none of the qualities of American citizens, and it will be a long while before they can assimilate to them, unless particular means are taken for this purpose. We are sorry to see, therefore, anything like an array of one race of citizens against the other, or any direct appeal made to religious prejudices—which is alleged to have been done.

The General Government will, we have no doubt, institute a thorough inquiry into all matters of complaint from New Mexico, and we shall then see to wham censure properly attaches.—[Mo. Republican

M. Cabet (editor of the Popular Tribune, the organ of the Icarian community at Nauvoo,) Louis Blanc, and Pierre Leroux, have issued a prospectus for a Democratic organ of the Democracy in France to be published in Paris. Its aim is to bring about a peaceful revolution in 1852, and save France from the reign of Absolutism and Tyrany.

The Postmaster General, through the Washington papers, requests correspondents writing to their friends on the Pacific coast, not to secure their letters with sealing wax. In passing through the tropics, it invariably occurs that the wax becomes melted, so as to destroy all semblance of a seal, and, in many cases, adheres so closely to the letter under it as to cause injury or destruction to the address in separating the two.

CHINESE IN PERU.—Recent accounts from Peru, mention that a new article of merchandise has made its appearance in Caliao, and Lima, in the shape of three huudred Chinese, who were lately landed and sold by the captain or owners of vessels, at the rate of $107 per head, under engagement that they should be free after the expiration of three years. It has now become all the fashion at Lima, particularly, we believe, to have Chinese servants.

Original Thinking.

The principle by which mind acts on mind is mysterious and inexplicable. The fact is obvious, that the world is ruled by mental power. There are intellectual as well as physical forces. A strong mind, when encountering a weaker, will as naturally move it, as a strong force in the material world will overcome a weaker. It is an old adage, passed into an unquestioned axiom, that "knowledge is power." This is but a partial and imperfect expression of a great truth. Knowledge is not power, to accomplish good unless wielded by an intelligent agent, who knows how to use and apply it. A man may have stuffed into his head all the contents of the Bodlean library, and his memory may be the treasure house of all the facts in science; and yet comparatively a weak man; who may pass through the world, and die without permanently influencing or changing the course of any individual. A mere acquaintance with facts, however extensive, does not give power. It is the comprehension of principles, and the ability to apply them in the varied circumstances in which he may be placed, which makes a strong man intellectual. Now a principle cannot be apprehended, much less can it be comprehended, without thought. We may confidently assert, then, that mental power is generated by hard thinking only; and he alone possesses it who has been accustomed to bring the powers of his understanding to bear with such intensity of heat upon the subjects submitted to their action, as either to dissipate them in thin air, if they are intrinsically worthless, or to fuse them and remould them into thoughts better suited to his purpose. Such a man will be strong in himself, his power over others irresistable. Sibi ipsi stat. While resisting or modifying all influences, however mighty and sweeping, coming in upon him from abroad, he sends out a strong and modifying influence over the excited elements raging around him. He is himself an original source of influence. He stands firmly fixed upon the adamantine rock of his own clear convictions, against which the turbulent waves of human opinion dash harmlessly, and break, and foam, and retire. But from this immovable stand he utters a voice which the elements hear and obey. Such a man, with respect to other men, is neither planetary nor reflective, but mixed and self-luminous. He pours a light abroad from the living fountains of his own intelligence. Who does not envy power like this! It is the only true power worth desiring or possessing. What true dignity and sublimity encircles the brow of the mighty ruler of mind! Olympian jove, shaking the material heavens and earth with his nod, and hurling his thunders upon the aghast and discomfited giants, does not "with half that kindling majesty dilate our strong conception," as a simple man, with no outward ensigns of authority, swaying to and fro a vast multitude of intelligent minds by the breath of his lofty eloquence, and demolishing the citadels of error by the might of his irresistible logic.—[Prof. G. W. Eaton:

Earnestness is the main element in the impressiveness of public speaking. It carries conviction to the minds of the hearers with a power that nothing else can give. Its absence is an irreparable defect. Sincerity is not enough; desire to be useful is not enough. Man must have that ardent impulse, which, breaking through every barrier, attests to the world their sincerity, by urging those to the most devoted efforts in the diffusion of truth, They must be distinguished by peculiar energy; they must have moral power to compel respectful attention. The whole soul must be thrown into the work sympathetically. So spake Paul, Peter, Luther, Knox, Whitfield, Wesley.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.
For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.
At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned havin been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

CLAIMS! CLAIMS!!
IN THE BOYOU COUNTRY.

THE Mormon population of HARRIS GROVE wishing to emigrate in mass to the Salt Lake, next season offer to sell out their interest to this beautiful section of Iowa—consisting of 20 improvements, from 5 to 50 acres fenced and cultivated and from 160 to 320 in claims, well supplied with excellent water and timber, and one of the healthiest countries bordering on the Missouri. Proof—there is not a case of ague or fever in the whole settlement. This grove lies about 20 miles north of Kanesville, and on the direct route from Fort Desmoine to Council Bluffs on the Missouri river. We will sell this fall at cost of improvement. Also a part of the crop on the ground. They will take cattle, store goods and money in exchange.

Do not forget—HARRIS GROVE, where are already a number of other professors of religion settled. Come and see.

SAVANNAH HOTEL.

IN the beautiful and flourishing town of Savannah, Andrew county, Mo. The subscriber has established himself for the purpose of accommodating travelers, visitors, and friends with entertainment, embracing as good fare as this and other countries can afford. He has newly fitted up the establishment formerly occupied by Mr. James Closby—has a good Livery Stable connected with the house, where persons can be accommodated with conveyances at all times. Horses, buggies and hacks in constant readiness, and on reasonable terms.

He flatters himself that, by strict attention to the wants, and devotion to the comforts and happiness of his guests, he will share a liberal portion of public favor which he solicits. Good fare for both man and animal! Call and try the Savannah Hotel, a little west of the Court House.

THE GOLD REGIONS.
COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.

THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satisfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.
Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrived at Sacramento, this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, while on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

For further particulars as to the route, we refer you to the best and most correct maps, and to a directory which will be published soon.

PERRYS & YOUNG

WOULD respectively announce that they are now receiving at their old stand on MAIN STREET, ST. JOSEPH, direct from the Eastern markets, the largest stock of dry goods, groceries; hardware; queensware, &c., ever brought to the West. Comprising French and English broadcloths, of every variety; plain and fancy cassimeres; sattinets; blankets; calicoes; domestics; boots and shoes; hats and caps; knifes and forks; picks and shovels; tea; sugar; coffee; molasses; salt; spun cotton; dye stuffs; rope; castings, &c., &c.

We will have on hand in a few days a large and well assorted stock of
READY MADE CLOTHING,
Purchased by one of the proprietors, who by long experience, is well acquainted with the wants of the emigrant.

Your attention is also invited to a large lot of
DRY CLARIFIED SUGAR,
Warranted to keep in any climate.

All persons who make this place their starting point, (and all who act wisely will do so for many reasons,) would find it much to their own interest to give us a call, before purchasing elsewhere, as we feel confident that they can find goods in our stock better suited to their wants and at lower prices than in any other House in Upper Missouri. As all persons procuring outfits, will necessarily remain a few days, we invite them to call and look at our goods as it will be a pleasure to us to show them. And they will have the opportunity of judging for themselves. PERRYS & YOUNG.

Legitimate Authority.

BY ELDER JOHN HYDE.

Legitimate authority to teach and administer the principles of truth, will be felt and regarded, when closely and carefully considered, as one of the greatest blessings that could be conferred on humanity. To point out a few of the reasons that make the truth of this proposition manifest, is the object of the following essay.

Looking upon men, they are found to possess affections, that they may love and hate; faculties that they may ponder and cogitate; bodies, by the medium of which these affections and faculties may attain developement by action; and by action, if divinely directed, realize perfection and happiness.

Some men of enlightened minds, but without legitimate authority, have endeavored to ascertain principles, by which they have thought, if men would be regulated, happiness might be attained. Other men, of minds equally enlightened and cultivated, have disputed the correctness of such principles, and denied their efficiency to produce the desired result. Other men, of genius equally acute, and with minds equally enlighten, have not only disputed the correctness of such principles, but have utterly denied the right or authority of any man or number of men, to set up their principles or opinions as a standard by whose decisions to require, or by whose penalties to enforce obedience. The absence of legitimate authority to teach and administer the principles of truth has, therefore, been most painfully felt and irrefragably proved.

Men without "legitimate authority" have originated and multiplied rules, plans, and systems by which, if possible, to secure human happiness. Thus, in heathen countries we see men and women performing ceremonies the most abject and degrading, and observing rites the most cruel and inhuman. In Roman Catholic countries we find them believing doctrines the most unreasonable and atrocious, and perpetrating persecutions the most ruthless and barbarous. In Protestant countries we find them engaged in strifes, splits, and divisions the most childish and ridiculous, terminating oftentimes in alienations, hatreds, and persecutions.

Such ceremonies, rites, doctrines, strifes, and persecutions we find taught, defended, and enforced by men of genius the most acute, intellect the most comprehensive, and eloquence the most captivating. Such are the means by which men without legitimate authority have endeavored to secure human happiness; and with what success, let the history of the oppressed bodies and enslaved minds of men declare!—a history whose horrors, blood and groans creation utters and re-echoes in tones of terrible woe!—a history whose detail is a bitter and burning demonstration of the curse that an authority that is not legitimate must ever inflict!

Questions as to authority now deeply agitate the minds of men, and stir their souls to the centre, awakening new powers of thought, suggesting dark principles of action, combining new elements of change, and arousing fierce spirits revolution; the result of whose disastrous operations will ere long baptize earth's bosom with the blood of her slaughtered sons!

Men without legitimate authority and divine direction form a thousand different opinions as to what principles are true and right; and in carrying out and acting upon their various and conflicting notions, form a thousand coteries and sects; and in all this are truly sincere. So far from being satisfied with either their opinions or systems, they are perpetually engaged in correcting and changing their opinions, and remodelling and reforming their systems. The most perfect bewilderment and Babylon is the sad and sorrowful result. Sincere men, collapsed with confusion so relentless, invent and put into operation various plans and "evangelical alliances," by which, if possible, to harmonize those jarring elements, and confusion worse confounded in the sickening issue!

Sincere men, it may be, have been oftentimes charmed by the spell that the eloquence of theologians and preachers has thrown around their feelings; but returning reflection brings with it the returning consciousness of the panic that the iron of uncertainty has lodged in their souls. They may be told of gifted preachers, of profound commentaries and beautiful churches, but in the anguish of their spirits, thirsting after truth, they sigh for the blessings that can only flow from the lips of men having "legitimate authority" to teach in certainty what the children of men must do "to be saved."

Action, as before proved, can alone give developement and perfection to the affections and faculties,—can alone secure happiness. But while men are uncertain as to the truthfulness of their principles, they can never be hearty and decided in action;—while men are compelled to spend their time in endeavors to ascertain what principles are true, the time for action is being wasted; and the inevitable result, human experience being the judge, is uneasiness and unhappiness. Groaning humanity, whether knowing it or not, utters its sigh and its prayer for the restoration and establishment of a "legitimate authority" to teach and administer principles of truth, that men's lives might be lives of action, and consequently lives of happiness

How shall such authority be restored? who are the men to wield its power—expound its principles—administer its ordinances—and enforce its penalties? God is alone the fountain of power and the source of authority; with Him it therefore remains to make choice of the men, whom it may please Him to invest with this authority. To him it belongs to enjoin, through such men, what shall be practiced, and prohibit what shall be avoided, to decide what shall be objects men's affections shall love, and what shall be the subjects by which their faculties shall be engaged and absorbed, this "legitimate authority" God in times past conferred upon men approved by himself; either by direct revelation, or by the ministration of angels—these men were known by the name of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, Pastors, and Teachers—men whose knowledge being certain, their lives were lives of godlike, noble, and ceaseless action: consequently, they realized great perfection and happiness—these men had to discharge high duties, and without high endowments they could not have done so. By such Apostles, Prophets, Pasters, and Teachers alone, could "Saints be perfected, the work of the ministry done, and the body of Christ edified and baptized by one Spirit into one body;" take away from these "Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, and Teachers, their legitimate authority" to teach and administer the principles of truth and the work of perfecting the Saints, &c., they could not have done. It is admitted that such "legitimate authority" is not now among men; without it the Apostles, &c., could not have done their work; therefore, without the same qualification now, the same work cannot be done: take from the Apostles, &c., their "legitimate authority," and you reduce them to the imbecilel evel of ancient rabbies, whether pharisee, sadducee, or essenee, or to the still lower level of modern doctors of a thousand discordant notions, and hardly pronounceable names.

Jewish apostacy was demonstrated in the days of our Lord by its numerous sects; all admit this, if sectarianism gave the brand of apostacy to the Jews. Much more so in relation to modern christianity! Sectarian christianity thy name, thy nature is Babylon, and the curse of confusion is upon thee. To withdraw from the church of apostles, prophets, &c., was to withdraw from "legitimate authority," to draw back to perdition. Sectarians are continually withdrawing from the "authority" of each of their sects without apprehension or fear How clearly this fact manifests the great destinction and difference existing between the Church of Christ and modern sects. If a sovereign was as unlike a sterling coin as modern sectarianism is unlike the Church of Christ, no man of common sense would be imposed upon by a counterfeit so glaring.

As, therefore, the absence of "legitimate authority" to teach and administer gospel laws and ordinances, has filled the earth with divisions and confusion, so the restoration of "legitimate authority" can alone restore the Church of Christ, and exhibit to the world that "Oneness" for which our Lord prayed; then, and not till then, will it learn and admit "that the Father sent the Son."

Sincere men look with distress upon the multiplying sects and divisions around, and feeling the absence of the kingdom and Church of Jesus, pray "thy kingdom come," a kingdom in which there are no Michaelists, Raphaelites, Gabrielites, Peterites, or Paulites. Will God ever answer their prayer, and restore apostles, prophets, pastors, and teachers, invested with "legitimate authority" to teach and administer the gospel—the everlasting gospel? Yes, oh, yes! He will answer the anguishing prayer, and in the last days, according to the prediction of prophets and seers, raise up a kingdom never to be removed; that will break in pieces all other systems; become from a little despised stone a mountain, and fill the whole earth. What if that "little stone" and kingdom "be the Church of Latter-day Saints!" How very like the Church of Christ she is in principles, officers, ordinances, and blessings! and how altogether unlike the churches of sectarianism the uncharitable "little stone," threatening "to break in pieces all other systems!" and no marvel for systems divided against each other must soon devour and demolish each other and come to nought—such are the words of him who "spake as man never spake."

One fact is very striking, that whenever God invested men with "legitimate authority," such men were ever regarded as "troublers in Israel," fools, traitors, and impostors, they were harrassed, hunted, stoned, crucified, and burned;—men "of whom the world was not worthy!" Blood of ancient apostles and prophets — of Joseph Smith, Hyram Smith, and many others say are not these things so!

Be it known to all men that Latter-day Saints, being taught principles of truth by legitimate authority, their lives are lives of action—action that results in happiness, and thus know for themselves the principles to be true and efficient; illustrating and proving the verity of our Lord's words, "if any man will do my will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God:" To God even the Father, be all honor and glory, through Jesus Christ, Amen.

New Railroad Invention.

The New York Tribune mentions an invention not only in the construction of Railroads but in the transportation of the cars thereon. The rails to be elevated above ground to any required height so as to suspend the cars from wheels on top instead of impending them as at present. The advantage proposed to be gained is that with the aid of powerful magnets fixed in the cars below the rails the weight of the burden is lessened by whatever the attractive power of the magnet may be. This is an ingenious theory whatever it may prove to be in practice.

An unkind word from one beloved, often draw blood from the heart which defy the battle-axe of an enemy.

Song of the Deseret Bird.

BY LYDIA JANE.

Oh! come! come away to the beautiful land,
The land that Jehovah has blest;
O'er which His protection and mercy expand,
Like the wings of a dove o'er her nest.

Oh! come to the fertile the fruit burdened land,
The region of plenty, and rest;
Where God has heap'd up, with omnipotent hand,
The wealth of the East, and the West.

The land where the spring cometh not from afar,
But is born of the Sun and the earth,
Where all that is musical, fragrant and fair;
Are waiting to welcome her birth.

Where summer all glorious with sunshine and shade,
Rejoices in labor and health;
To see o'er her smiling dominion display'd,
A superabundance of wealth.

Where Autumn brings home with thanksgiving and mirth,
The fruits that Jehovah has given;
And winter sits down by his bright blazing hearth,
To joy in the bounty of Heaven.

Oh come where the air is salubrious and sweet,
Where health with the rivers flows free;
Where the world worshipp'd gold, glitters under our feet,
Unvalued as sand by the sea.

The realm to which blessing and beauty belong
Where nature with happiness teems;
Nor genius of romance, nor spirit of song
Has seen aught so fair in her dreams.

'T is the Valley of God,—the fair land of his choice,
His Paradise—deep in the West; [rejoice,
Where the Saints of his kingdom, may meet, and
With his presence of holiness blest.

The Spirit Divine, from its fountains above,
Beams on it, ineffably bright;
And the angels of God, on their missions of love,
Walk visibly forth in the light.

Come now—for the world has grown aged in guilt,
Her measure with sin runneth o'er;
The blood of the Saints she hath wickedly spilt,
Till her garments are spotted with gore.

The Justice Divine, which hath suffer'd so long
Shall visit her wickedness soon;
The arm of his vengeance is fearfully strong,
And the power of his wrath shall be shewn.

His terrors the fiercest of souls shall appal,
And those who his judgments defied,
Shall call on the rocks and the mountains to fall,
Their souls from his presence to hide.

Oh tempt not the plagues of that terrible day,
For who shall be able to stand?
But now—while his mercy waits—hasten away,
To his chosen and beautified land.

While earthquake and plague, fire and storm are abroad,
To desolate earth with their woes,
The Spirit of Peace—and the presence of God,
Shall shelter this land of repose.

Minutes of the General Conference, Of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, held in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, Sept. 7th, 1851.

Present of the First Presidency—Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Willard Richards.

Patriarch—John Smith.

Of the Twelve Apostles—Orson Hyde, Wilford Woodruff, G. A. Smith, and E. T. Benson.

Presidency of the Seventies—Joseph Young, B. L. Clapp, J. M. Grant, A. P. Rockwood, H. Herriman, Levi Hancock, and Zera Pulsipher.

Presidency of the Stake—Daniel Spencer, David Fullmer, and Willard Snow.

High Priest's Quorum—John Young, and Reynolds Cahooon.

The High Council of the Stake.

Presiding Bishop—Edward Hunter.

Clerk of Conference—Thomas Bullock.

The Conference was called to order by President Kimball, who stated that if the people have paid their tithing, the Spirit of God will be on this Conference; and notified the brethren, that another person would not get his endowment until his tithing was paid in full.

The Choir sung a hymn; prayer by Elder Orson Hyde, and singing.

President Young then addressed the people on the business of the Conference, and the experience that this people had passed through, and showed that Mormonism circumscribes all truth, whether in heaven, on earth, or in hell, and will continue to revolutionize this world, until all the kingdoms of the earth are subject to the kindom of Jesus Christ, and testified that Joseph Smith was a Prophet of God, and was as good a man as ever walked on the earth. Adjourned.

2 O'CLOCK, P. M.

Opened with singing and prayer, followed by discourses from Elders E. T. Benson, O. Hyde, G. A. Smith, Wilford Woodruff, Levi Hancock, President Young, and Willard Richards, each bearing a powerful testimony to the work of the Lord in the last days, and testifying that Joseph was a Prophet of God.

Adjourned, until the 8th, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

Monday, September 8th, 10 a. m.

Conference called to order by President Young; singing; prayer by Elder Joseph Young, and singing.

President Young then introduced the Hon. Perry E. Broochus, Judge of the Supreme Court, for Utah Territory; who, thanked the people of the Territory for their hospitality und kindness, in attending him in his sickness, when he was a stranger. He bore testimony of the peacefulness of the inhabitants, their fellowship, peace and love, one towards another, their submission to the tribunals of their own choice, and prayed God to Grant that the time may soon come, that all the United States may soon have such tribunals as are in this Territory, and then it always would bring peace to the heart of those who had to be judged. He expressed his indignation and abhorrence of the scenes which transpired, in driving the Latter-day Saints from Missouri and Illinois.

He then presented a description of the monument intended to be built to the memory of General Washington, and finished his discourse by saying, that he should always remember with deep gratitude, and respect, his interview with the Latter-day Saints in their mountain city.

He was followed in his remarks, by President Young, and the congregation was dismised with benediction by Elder Wilford Woodruff.

2 O'CLOCK, P. M.

After an intermission of one hour, the Conference was called to order by President Young; singing; prayer by Elder John Young, and singing.

President Kimball, then rose, on the business of the Conference, to bring before the people the authorities of the Church, and presented Brigham Youug, as the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, throughout all the world, and also as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator; which was carried unanimously.

Heber C. Kimball was then presented as First Counsellor to President Young, and Willard Richards, Second Counsellor; who were severally sustained in their office.

John Smith was sustained as the Presiding Patriarch to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Willard Richards was sustained as the Historian of the Church, and General Church Recorder.

Orson Hyde was sustained as the President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles; and Parley P. Pratt, Orson Pratt, Wilford Woodruff, John Taylor, George A. Smith, Amasa Lyman, Ezra T. Benson, Charles C. Rich, Lorenzo Snow, Erustus Snow, and F. D. Richards, were severally sustained as members of the same Quorum.

Daniel Spencer was sustained as President of this Stake of Zion, and David Fullmer, and Willard Snow, as his Councillors.

Henry G. Sherwood, was sustained as President of the High Council, and Eleazer Miller, John Kempton, Heman Hyde, Wm. W. Major, Levi Jackman, Ira Eldridge, John Vance, E. D. Wooley, and John Parry, were sustained as members of the same; and Winslow Farr, and Wm. Snow, were voted to be members of said Quorum.

John Young was sustained as President of the High Priest's Quorum; and Reynolds Cahoon, and George B. Wallace, as his Counsellors.

Joseph Young was sustained as Senior President of all the Quorums of the Seventies; and Levi W. Hancock, Henry Herriman, Zera Pulsipher, Albert P. Rockwood, Benjamin L. Clapp, and Jedediah M. Grant were sustained as his Counsellors.

Edward Hunter was sustained as Presiding Bishop in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

John Nebeker was sustained as President of the Elder's Quorum; and James H. Smith, and Aaron Sceva, as his Councillors.

Joseph Harker was sustained as President of the Priest's Quorum; and Simeon Houd, and Lewis White, as his Counsellors.

McGee Harris was sustained as President of the Teacher's Quorum; and John Vance, and Reuben Perkins, as his Counsellors.

Return R. Hill was voted as President of the Quorum of Deacons.

Brigham Young was sustained as Trustee in trust, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and Edward Hunter as an Assistant Trustee.

D. H. Wells was sustained as the Superintendent of the Public Works.

The President, and Assistants, of the Perpetual Emigrating Company, to gather the Poor, were next presented, when Brigham Young was sustained as President of said company; and Heber C. Kimball, W. Richards, W. Woodruff, O. Hyde, C. A. Smith, E. T. Benson, J. M. Grant, D. H. Wells, W. Snow, E. Hunter, D. Spencer, T. Bullock, J. Brown, W. Crosby, A. Lyman, C. C. Rich, L. Young, P. P. Pratt, O. Pratt, and F. D. Richards, were sustained as his Assistants.

President Young said, there would be travelling Bishops, to visit the Bishops in their respective wards, to see that they do their duty, and if they do not do it, they will be removed out of their place and others put in; when, Nathaniel H. Felt, was nominated as one of the travelling Presiding Bishops, under Bishop Edward Hunter—Carried.

John Banks was nominated as another of the travelling Bishops, and carried.

Ezra T. Benson, Jedediah M. Grant, and Orson Hyde, were voted as Agents of the Perpetual Emigrating Company, to gather the Poor to this place.

Samuel W. Richards, Willard Snow, Abraham O. Smoot, Dorr P. Curtis, and Vincent Shirtliff, were voted to take missions to England.

Daniel Carn, was voted to take a mission to Germany.

John Young, was voted to take a mission to the States, to preach, and gather up the Saints.

John L. Dunyon, was voted to take a mission to the States, and preach the Gospel.

A manifest of the affairs in the Tithing office, were read; also a manifest of the Pepetual Emigrating Poor Fund Company.

Adjourned, to 10, A. M. Benediction by George A. Smith.

Tuesday, September 9th, 1851, 10 a. m.

Conference again called to order; singing by the Choir; prayer by H. G. Sherwood, and singing.

The forenoon was occupied by President Young, preaching a funeral sermon on the occasion of the death of Br. Lewis Abbott, was followed in his remarks by Elder H. G. Sherwood, Levi Gifford, John Young, and H. C. Kimball, and benediction by Elder Hyde.

2 O'CLOCK P., M.

Conference being called to order, and opened in the usual manner. The Patriarch John Smith, said he had been through the whole scene of persecution, of mobbing, and murders, from 1832 to the present time; and alluded to the night of the murder of Joseph and Hyrum in Carthage Jail, and called on the people to pay their tithing, that it may be said of us well done good and faithful servants; and was followed in similar remarks by President Kimball, Edward Hunter, W. W. Phelps, Isaac Chase, and Zera Pulsipher.

The Patriarch again arose to speak on the Word of Wisdom, and urging on the brethren to leave off using tobacco, &c.

President Young rose to put the motion and called on all the sisters who will leave off the use of Tea, Coffee, &c., to manifest it by raising the right hand; seconded and carried.

And then put the following motion; calling on all the boys who were under ninety years of age who would covenant to leave off the use of Tobacco, Whisky, and all things mentioned in the Word of Wisdom, to manifest it in the same manner, which was carried unanimously.

The Patriarch then said, may the Lord bless you and help you to keep all your covenants, Amen.

President Young amongst other things said he knew the goodness of the people, and the Lord bears with our weakness; we must serve the Lord, and those who go with me, will keep the Word of Wisdom, and if the High Priests, the Seventies, the Elders, and others will not serve the Lord, we will sever them from the Church. I will draw the line and know who is for the Lord and who is not, and those who will not keep the Word of Wisdom, I will cut off from the Church; I throw out a challenge to all men and women. Have I not always counseled you right? I would rather you would cut me into inch pieces, than to flinch from my duty, the Lord being my helper. I would rather live with a few men who will serve the Lord, than live with ten thousand hypocrites. He then exhorted the men, the women, never to quarrel, to cease all contentions. If a man abuses you settle with him with kind words, but never go to law. Let every head of a family gather their family together night and morning, and wait on the Lord until his spirit shines on you like a cloud, and I say unto you in the name of the Lord God of Israel, be you blest.

Adjourned, until Wednesday, at ten o'clock, A., M.

Benediction by George A. Smith.

Wednesday, Sept. 10th, 10 o'clock a. m.

Conference called to order, and was opened with singing by the Choir.

Prayer by President Young, and singing.

E. D. Wooley bore testimony of the work of the Lord, that Joseph was a Prophet of God, and that Brigham is just as good a man as Joseph was, and he was as good a man as ever lived on the earth, &c.

President Young spoke on the subject of the Mormon Battallion, and why they went the journey. General Doniphan said in St. Louis that "if he had one thousand Mormon Boys, the same as the Mormon Battallion, he could do more good than all the United States soldiers that were there:" I say, if he had been a Mormon he would have been charged with treason, although the Government is good and the Constitution is as good as could be framed.

He then exhorted the Presiding Bishop to settle with the First Presidency, and all the Bishops, and require their tithing, the one tenth of all their real estate, of the value of their farms and possessions and all they have got, and then see that the Bishops settle with every man, and that he pays his tithing or we will disfellowship him from the Church. I will sell every particle of my property if a man can be found who will pay the cash, and I will put it all into the hands of Bishop Hunter, and I will begin anew, and in five years God will so bless me that I should be richer than any man in this community.

He then called on the First Presidency, the Twelve Apostle, High Priests, Seventies, and every person to know if they are willing to do as he told them when all hands were immediately raised.

He lifted his hands on high and with all the powers of the Holy Priesthood vested in him, he blessed the Saints in the name of the Lord God of Israel, when all the people cried, Amen.

On motion the Conference was adjourned to the 6th October next, at ten o'clock A. M.

Benediction by President H. C. Kimball.

THOMAS BULLOCK,
Clerk of Conference.

INDEPENDENCE OF PRINCIPLE.—Lord Erskine was distinguished through life for independence of principle, for adherence to truth. He once explained the rule of his conduct, which ought to be deeply engraved on every heart. He said; It was the first command and council of my earliest youth always to do what my conscience told me to be a duty, and leave the consequence to God. I shall carry with me the memory, and I trust the patience, of this parental lesson to the grave. I have hitherto followed it, and have no reason to complain that my obedience to it has been any sacrifice. I have found it, on the contrary, the road of prosperity and wealth, and I shall point out the same path to my chidren for their pursuit."

THE LARGEST PILE OF SPECIE IN THE WORLD.—According to a recent return of the Bank of France, the specie on hand amounted to 607,000,000 francs, or about $115,000,000. This, we believe, is the largest amount of specie ever collected together. The Bank of England has not had at any time over $100,000,000.

Review of the News from Salt Lake.

Great wealth has often been obtained by a strict observance of the following maxim: "Mind your own business." It is a precept to which we have given diligent heed; and we have had about all we could do to keep things right side up in our own field of labor where we have been placed in charge and under responsibilities, without directing or ordering any matters in the Territory of Utah. That has not been our post, and consequently we may not be able to respond to, or explain every matter that has been spoken of by the returning officers appointed by the Executive of the Nation for that Territory. But so far as our knowledge extends, we are happy to render to our friends any aid in our power, consistent with truth and honor; and anything inconsistent with these, would not be aid to them nor credit to us, neither would they thank us for any production that might depart from the facts in the case. Governor Young has undoubtedly sent in his report, with a clear and explicit account of all official proceedings; and it will not be necessary for us to attempt to give a history of the difficulties in advance of the official documents; but to correct some statements that have already been made by the officers before alluded to; and when we make the corrections, we think that they will acknowledge that their minds have been refreshed. It is stated that Governor Young said that the Judiciary should not have a case to try if he could prevent it. This statement the Governor made, and we heard it; and we also heard his accompanying explanation which was this: He would exert an influence to prevent litigation among the people, and induce them to settle their differences by milder means than a resort to law. Brother going to law with Brother was what he should labor to prevent. But when he could not prevent litigation by a moral influence, he would turn the parties over to him, addressing Chief Justice Brandebury at the time at Mr. Rhode's house in presence of Mr. Harris, Mr. Kimball, ourself, and several other gentlemen. With this explanation they all expressed approval we believe: Captain Day was also present at the same time; and now to see the light in which it is represented, we are not a little surprized. We are willing that the truth should be told; but when an incorrect version is given of anything connected with the affair, and we know it to be such, we feel it our duty to make the correction. There are many things spoken of in the papers and charged upon Governor Young and others that are alledged to have taken place before we arrived there, which was not until the Evening of the 17th of August. Of such matters, we cannot speak from any personal knowledge.

When Judge Brocchus delivered his speech at the Bowery, there was a strong personal prejudice against him in the minds of the people, as a principal reason why they did not listen to him with more attention and respect. If the Judge doubts the existence of that personal prejudice, we can give a list of names, and the public may judge whether those prejudices were well or ill founded. We will not accuse his Honor of any impropriety now: but we do know that if he had spoken the most brilliant and glowing truths that ever flowed from an Angel's lips, they would have fallen upon the ears of many of his audience with little or no force. We accompanied Judge Brocchus from Iowa to Salt Lake, and extended to him as many favors as he did to us, both of a pecuniary and courteous character, we believe; and does he intend to say that we are the Elder who spoke so disrespectfully of the American Government as he is represented to declare? Every body, almost, knows that we accompanied the Judge on his journey;—and is he willing to do us the kindness to allow us to lie under that imputation. If we had spoken thus of the Government, we would be silent and offer no remonstrance; but as we did not, and the Judge knows we never did in his hearing at any time nor in any place, we hurl the matter back from whence it came, leaving his Honor to dispose of it as he thinks best. We do not wish to mar the reputation or wound the feelings of any man who is just and upright, neither will we court the friendship or good will of any man who unjustly does us an injury.

The murder that is spoken of as having been committed in Utah, is not impartially represented. Let me ask those honorable gentlemen what they would do, provided an unprincipled wretch had, in their absence, entered their dwelling, and by various arts, stratagems, and devices, obtained a conquest over the heart and affections of the wife, demolished the temple of virtue and bequeathed upon your hands a legacy, in the shape of an illegitimate child, that whenever you looked upon it, you might be reminded, in the most thrilling and sensitive manner of the disgrace and dishonor that poison the cup your domestic bliss. Would you not kill the scoundrel that did it? If you would not, you possess not the blood, spirit or nerve, that we think you do. Such were the circumstances under which Monroe was killed. Have there not been similar cases in the States, in which the avenger has been acquitted by acclamation? Or is this a more bloody affair than is almost daily committed in California under far less aggravated circumstances, and the perpetrator go at large unpunished?

We do not think it a safe precedent to allow men to take the law into their own hands; but it is difficult to control a spirited man in the moments of excitement, such as these circumstances are calculated to arouse; and in our opinion, it would be equally difficult to find a Jury that would convict an honorable man for killing the scoundrel that thus robbed him of his peace and happiness forever and entailed dishonor upon his house and name.

With regard to the squandering of the twenty thousand dollars by Governor Young, we can only say; that if the returning officers know that he cannot produce that money when he please, or whenever he is required to account for it,—or if he cannot command at pleasure, the materials, and the workmen to build a State House, or if there has not been a State House already built to be transferred to the United States, they know more than we.

The declaration, referred to, that some departed patriots and statesmen were gone to Hell, may not seem so incongruent after knowing one article of the Mormon faith, and we believe that it is incorporated in the most popular religious creeds of the day; that as good a man as the man Christ Jesus died and descended into Hell; but rose again the third day from the dead, and ascended into Heaven. Now, if we should say that all people, when they die, must go to Hell, the righteous as well as the wicked, it might be a little startling to some. The righteous must follow the footsteps of their head and leader, if they expect to reign with him. An ancient Apostle said "they who suffer with him shall also reign with him." And a modern Apostle tells you that the three Hebrew children were cast into the fiery furnace, and came out without the smell of fire about their garments, which is a type of the righteous following the Captain of their Salvation through the gloomy empire of the Prince of darkness to the brighter realms of Eternal day. If Christ, Washington, Taylor, and Brocchus, all pass through that place, it is not inconsistent with the truth: But we have never heard a Mormon say that any of these men were burned there, or ever would be. But those wicked men that persecuted the three Hebrew children were burned up in that fire, which also shows that Hell will take hold of the ungodly, and persecutors of the righteous particularly, when they enter those accursed and benighted regions. This should make all men a little cautious and particular about what they say and do in relation to Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, lest when they pass the last fiery ordeal, the flames of Hell may consume them. We cannot say that Governor Young did not declare that General Taylor had gone to Hell, but we are so unaccustomed to that style of language that we feel very unwilling to admit it.

The prophecy on the 24th of July last, referred to by the officers, we of course did not hear: But if it was spoken as it is said; (and we do not like to contradict men who were present when we were not,) the Nation will have a sign, if they take the preliminary steps, whether there is any virtue or strength in this Mormon prophecy or not. We should hope that no such prediction would ever be fulfilled, or any cause for its fulfilment, in or upon the person of our worthy and high-minded Chief Magistrate, of whom we heard Governor Young freely speak in most favorable terms in a public speech. He said that he believed President Fillmore was a great and good man; and that a better President had not filled the Chair of State since the days of Washington—that Mr. Polk was also a good man, and no doubt intended the call for five hundred men from our emigrating camps, as a favor to the people; but spoke with much warmth against Mr. Benton, for designing or wishing to effect the overthrow of the Mormons by the operation. He claimed to be in possession of some evidence that gave him no very good feelings towards that man.

Of the elections and organization of Utah, we claim to have little or no knowledge. But its inhabitants being composed of people from various States and nations, and having, for some length of time, lived under no Constitutional law, it would be a matter of no little surprize if there were not some irregularities or "blunders" in the organization and first elections of that New Territory. When a child first begins to walk, he is apt to stumble a little; and it would be quite unkind and unfeeling in the Father to disown the child because of its inability to walk straight off at the first attempt, or to tie his feet and deprive him of the power of walking at all. While we [illegible] own that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light," we also expect to see the time when the wisdom of this world shall perish—when God will stain the pride of all glory, and bring into contempt the honorable of the Earth—when he will take the weak things of the world to confound the mighty, and the base things, (Governor Young is represented as a base thing,) and even things that are not to bring to nought the things that are, that no flesh should glory in His presence. After all, there is some kind of an inkling in us that things in general may take that kind of a turn that will makesome of Gov Young's "blunders, foolish and thoughtless movements," &c., to appear like the wide spreading branches of the sturdy oak, having risen from the simple acorn. The human skeleton appears horrible, ill-shapen, and sickening; but when it is clothed with flesh, animated with life, and adorned with beauty, how changed its appearance! So strange and naked truth simply declared, without covering or ornaments, may, to many, appear equally objectionable. But when Jehovah clothes that weak and unseemly truth with honor, power, and glory, and exalts it on high, shame flies from its advocates and lights upon the brow of its opposers.

The United States is a Country and Government that we love. We were born within her dominions and raised and educated upon her soil. In her "bottoms" have we crossed the Atlantic six times—under her protection we have roamed over the four Quarter of the Globe,—and often have proudly beheld her "Stars and Stripes" mirrored on the crest of the passing billow,—bearing terror to enemies and commanding their respect, and inspiring hope and joy in the bosoms of her friends, and scattering the notions of Liberty in all the World.

Loving our Country as we do and wishing her long life and good days, we are anxious that she should take no precipitate step in relation to Utah that possibly she may have cause to regret; and feeling anxious for the welfare of Utah, we will do all in our power to protect her and her inhabitants from the effects of any ill-founded prejudice or partiality. We feel safe and easy however, to leave the fate and destiny of Utah in the hands of the General Government, knowing that that territory is in her hands, and that she is in the hands of God. Let it, therefore, be the prayer of every Saint. "Guide the Nation in the path of wisdom, of justice, and of truth! and temper all her acts with mercy and good-will towards all people,—that Zion may shine like the Day Star in Heaven, as the harbinger of better times—the forerunner of the "perfect day," and sure precursor of the "Sun of Righteousness who is to arise with healing in his wings." Then the kingdoms of this world may become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ. More perhaps, from time to time upon these matters.

Hon. Bernhart Henn.

This gentleman will please accept our thanks for valuable Public Documents at this early day.

Our Traveling Elders.

Those Elders that were sent out from this place last Spring on missions, are requested to come home as soon as consistent, and instruct their flocks to come also, as early in the Spring as they can, preparatory to crossing the Plains. The call of the Chief Shepherds in Israel is: "Come Home."

Platte Argus.

This Paper says that Governor Young is an unnaturalized foreigner. Where did he get his information? He probably has so much on most subjects that he felt himself able to make the above statement without any information at all.

The Governor's Father was a soldier in the American Revolution—and when we saw him, he drew a pension. His Mother was an American Lady, and gave him birth on the Green Mountains of Vermont. So Mr. Argus has not hit the truth in this case; but has probably hit it in the following, in the very place where he missed it in the above.

"Mr. Babbitt, a distinguished member of the Mormon Church has renounced his connection with the same and come back to the States." What say you Br. Babbitt, is it so?

After writing the above article, we showed the manuscript to Mr. Babbitt, and he authorized us to say that it was unqualifiedly false so far as relates to his renunciation of the Mormon Creed.

Post Office.

We hear that some exertions are being made to remove Mr. Burdick, our present Post Master, and to supply his place with another. If any such move is on foot, we think it must be in some secret way: for we are confident that if the people wanted a change, and would honorably and openly apply to Mr. Burdick to resign, and recommend some other good man that the mass of the citizens might be in favor of, he would cheerfu do it: But as there seems to be no such wish expressed in any tangible form, we conclude that Judge Burdick will be continued in his place unless th Department shall have reasons for his removal that we know nothing of.

Pay the Printer.

Again we call on our delinquents to remember that they owe us, and that we want our pay. We want to settle up all our outstandings and pay off every body that we owe, and be square with the world again. We offer to take corn, hay, pork, beef, potatoes, butter, cheese, chickens, wood, and cash, also. But if there are any who are really poor, and will honestly tell us that they cannot pay us without distressing themselves or their families, we will forgive the debt and balance the account, and charge it to profit and loss. We trust that much further neglect will not induce us to leave the accounts with magistrates for collection. We do not mean this call for such as we have running accounts with, and that are ready to pay at any time if they owe us; but we mean those who owe us—have the means to pay, and give themselves no trouble to bring us any good turnips, potatoes, pork, beef, butter, cheese, flour, corn meal, and various other good things. Do you not know that "Brother Hyde" likes all these good things just as well as you do? And if he works and earns them, his mouth should not be muzzled! He would also like a little cash to buy some necessaries at the stores, and for various little contingencies that editors are sometimes subject to.

Some of our old friends who owe us nothing but good will, (and we can hardly say that they owe us that,) have remembered us. Our neighbor, Mr. Jackson, went down to St. Joseph and returned a short time since, bringing us a few cans of most excellent oysters from Mr. Tootle, (well known in this community,) with compliments, &c. He also brought us something in a bot- [illegible] cannot say what it was, but we can say that it was good, and we presume manufactured by herself from the products of her own valuable farm. They all have our best thanks for their kind remembrance, and friend Jackson also, for being the bearer of the tokens of their good will.

Letters of Recommendation.

When we have seen men possessing letters of recommendation from the highest sources, and from any and every body, and still anxious to obtain more, we are forced to this conclusion, that if it takes so much backing to support and uphold one man, he must have but little strength or merit of his own. So far as our experience has gone, we have seen some of the most reckless and unprincipled men armed with letters, vouchers, and documents innumerable. Let our Elders carry their letters of recommend in bold relief. A dignified respect for virtue and uprightness, language pure and chaste, manners easy and winning, a pure heart and clean hands; and then when you speak, your words are like the arrow shot from the bow of a strong archer. They impress upon every honest heart, this saving truth,—that God has sent you. This is all the letter you need except your license. Those who carry too many letters outside often carry too few in.

The Savannah Sentinel.

The first and second numbers of this neat and well got up Journal are on our table. It is published by HOLLY & CARTER, and ably edited by C. F. HOLLY, Esq. Their terms of subscription are two dollars a year in advance. We beleive that Mr. Holly is favorably known in the West, and from personal transactions with him we give him the credit of being a punctual, and upright man. We bid the Sentinel success, and give it a place among our numerous exchanges, hoping that while the Guardian takes care of the frontier, the Sentinel may be on its watchtower in Savannah.

Savannah Sentinel in Want of a "Standard."

The above Journal asks us to exchange with him, the "Mountain Standard," our contemplated paper at the City of the Great Salt Lake. With this request, we will cheerfully comply if we shall be so fortunate as to raise it, perceiving by his last issue that he is deficient, and really needs one: and what makes us still more willing to exchange is, a very forcible Apostolic and Christian precept, "RENDER GOOD FOR EVIL," and by so doing, we hope to spread the Oil of good-will over the turbid waters of spleen, sarcasm, and ridicule which have made their channel through the columns of the "Sentinel." We wrote the other piece before the Sentinel showed us the Elephant—this after.

Opinion.

We hazard an opinion that County Orders should be paid or allowed on taxes, only in their turn, according to date and number. Justice and the spirit of the law chime in to establish this precedent: And nothing but the Collector's receipt can release any man from his taxes: If A. B. and C., shall receive the cash from certain individuals and promise to pay their taxes with orders, they impose upon the unsuspecting; and should the treasurer recognize this operation, the revenue of the County would be turned from its legitimate channel to subserve the interests of those who demand their pay before their turn.

Emulation.

The following is from the pen of a Kanesville School Girl—her first attempt, and uncorrected: Come on young misses, try your skill; and we will occasionally give your productions a place in the Guardian, particularly if they shall be as pretty as you, of which we entertain no doubt; and at the close of the present term, we will award to her who will give us the best piece, on any subject she may choose, three dollars—for the second best, two dollars, and for the third best, one dollar. These productions must not make less than three squares in the Guardian each. The writers must call no person to their aid in writing or correcting the pieces. They must be original and not borrowed; and we will publish them "verbatim et literatim" over their own signatures or fictitious ones, with the ages of the writer. Only one prize can be drawn by one Scholar; and none but those who are regular members of the School can obtain any prize. We think that prizes will also be awarded to the first, second, and third best Grammarians. Somebody will certainly encourage literature in both male and female; and we would advise all the Scholars to do their best in every branch of learning; for there may be more liberal and extensive rewards offered.

The Board of Judges will be Mr. Charles H. Bassett, Mr. Daniel Mackintosh, and Mr. Clark, the Perceptor.

Here follows the virgin product of the Youthful Contributor.

A Few Random Thoughts on Day and Night.

How beautiful it is to see the glorious Sun rising above the misty clouds which envelope the Eastern Horizon, and passing on to its Noon-day splendor! And again, how lovely the gorgeous Sun-set where he sinks behind the mellow tints of crimson and of gold. How beautiful it leaves the hill, and dale, and brook, bathed in the same mellow light!

Then comes twilight: how calm, serene, and beautiful is twilight! It seems as though all the poetry of the soul is shadowed out, and the mind follows its own bent, and roams in the flowery fields of Imagination. And night; how peaceful and holy it is, when the Moon struggles through the misty clouds that give but the shadowy outlines of her fair face, or when she shines in all her placid beauty.

Upon the whole, night has as many charms for me as day: for with the night comes calm meditation and deep thought. Who cannot look back to resolutions made during the quiet of night, and broken in the noise and bustle of the day, whether of a moral or intellectual character?

The light of day furnishes the materials of thought, but they can only be refined at night when the Moon is shining brightly and the Stars are up in their innumerable beauty.

Age, Fourteen. KANESVILLINA.

Woman.

This fairest part of God's creation is said to be the weaker vessel. If this be true, her burthens ought to be apportioned to the strength which she possesses: but ungenerous man who gives caste and tone to public sentiment and custom to society, has said that he may do what he please—may break over the rules of good society, rob woman of her good name, often unjustly—roam at large and revel in corruption and wickedness; yet he is often allowed to pass in the most refined circles, and is hailed as a most splendid and gallant gentleman: But if woman, in her weakness, should, perchance, make one mistep, she is hurled from the bright pinnacle of honor and fame, down into the gulf of degradation and despair, by the arm of public opinion and sentiment. Thus will society rend a woman, for that which they would not only consider excusable in man, but too often as a token of gallantry and superior tact.

While we say that man gives tone and caste to society, woman might do it if she would. She has the power and inclination; but lacks the moral stamina to put her power in force. If she would be a little more charitable to her own sex who may err—never be first to shun them—never express suspicion of them—never be first to denounce them; but always, when their characters are assailed, be ready for their defence, and never join in with the tide against them, she might be a guardian angel to her erring sister, and by protecting her, protect herself. What gives man superiority in this respect is, that he is not so apt to condemn his own sex for a wrong step as woman is hers. Man looks charitably upon his fellow and forgets the wrongs of his brother; and thus is he sustained in society. But when woman steps aside, the whole sisterhood join together to persecute her, to expose her, and are down upon her like a turkey upon a poor June bug. They erroneously think that their own credit and honor depend upon victimizing the unfortunate one who has taken a false step. They are mistaken. For when they have established the fact that one has gone astray, they have also established the probability that others may also. Thus, instead of protecting themselves by exposing the erring ones, they weaken the confidence of man in the whole blessed fraternity.

If woman would never knowingly admit a corrupt man into her society—if she would hurl back, with scorn and indignation, any and every aspersion upon the character of any of her sex, whether they are innocent or guilty—throw the mantle of charity over her accused sister, and indignantly reproach man with being the cause and author of the misfortunes of her sex, she would then use the power which she possesses to redeem her own, and bring them up to a level with man, if not exalt them above him.

Conventions may be held to assert woman's rights and to maintain them; but to no purpose at all, without she is more charitable to her own kind—more rigid and scrupulous about associating with unprincipled men, or allowing such in her society. The key of power is with woman; and with it, if she will consent to be degraded, or suffer her sex to be, the sin lies at her door. She may murmur, complain, grieve, and cry over her condition, but until she rises up in the dignity of insulted virtue and kindness, she must bear her yoke, and "with a daughter's obedience, submit to her chain."

Interesting Session.

If the time is not mostly consumed in Congress by pulling the wires for President making, the coming Session will be a very important one to the Nation. Our relations with some foreign powers are somewhat jostled by reason of the Cuban and Mexican troubles: things at home also want looking to; and if the Representatives do their duty, they will have enough to do if they omit playing many games on the Political Chess Board for the next President. If the present Executive manages wisely in these critical times, (of which we entertain no doubts,) he will unquestionably be re-elected by an overwhelming majority to the same office which he has filled with so much credit to himself and honor to the Nation.

Surveyor General of Utah.

Some of our exchanges appear to be troubled because they say we have applied at Washington, through Judge Brocchus, for the office of Surveyor General of Utah But we would say to those Journals: Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid, for we have applied for no such office through Judge Brocchus or any other man. But we think of applying for one,—we have not exactly determined what. It may be that we shall get the appointment of an Extraordinary Minister to settle the Cuban question, cool off Spain, hush up Austria, take Mexico under our wing, and tell France and England not to put their fingers in our Pie. Would'nt this be Extraordinary indeed! You only lie low and keep dark, and you'll see how it goes, if Judge Brocchus does not "Crush us at Washington." But why should'nt we receive an appointment, the St. Joseph Gazette to the contrary, notwithstanding!

Age of Discovery.

Is not the Pottowatamie District in the State of Iowa? We think so: though some, doubtless, more learned in the law than we, express serious doubts in relation to it. If we are not in Iowa, what State are we in? We do not know; but conclude that those who made the discovery must have been in the State of Clairvoyance, as we cannot see how any one in a natural State could make such a discovery through the thick veil of Iowa's Admitted Constitution, and particularly after the General Government have acted upon our Poll Book and Election matters. Guess its all right, and no chance to make a splurge about a New State. If there is no door open to elevation in the Temple of Legal Justice in the Constitutional State of Iowa, true merit holds the Key to an effectual door and may enter when it will. So we had better jog on in the old track and be content.

The Foreign Interference — British and French Fleets Ordered to our Coast.

The National Intelligencer confirms the statement that letters had been addressed by the acting Secretary of State, Mr. CRITTENDEN, in reply to some reecent communications from the Ministers of France and England, in relation to Cuban affairs, but at the same time states that the character given to the Secretary's letters by the correspondent of the Philadelphia American, is not altogether correct. The Intelligencer says:

The language of the letters is plain, direct, and frank, it is true; but there is in them nothing in the slightest degree discourteous, or inconsistent with the Secretary's own character and dignity, or the respect due to the distinguished functionaries he was addressing. That the letters were able, forcible, and manly, as well as respectful and courteous, no American need be told

The Washington Telegraph of the 29th ult., adds to this what it believes it has from good authority, that the letters of Mr. CRITTENDEN were read to one of the editors of the North American, in Washington City, and that he could only err in his interpretation of them. The Telegraph adds the annexed important information:

An order has been issued by the British Admiralty, instructing a number of their naval vessels to cruise along the southern coast of the United States, and to capture all American vessels which they have reason to believe are destined to Cuba with hostile intentions. This order is now in this city, and a knowledge of its nature formed the basis of the letters of Mr. Crittenden to the British Minister: and we believe a similar order issued by the French government called for a like letter to that government, through its representative here. We can feed the starving subjects of Great Britain, but do not need the services of her navy as police force on our coast, and will not permit it.—[St. Louis Times.

The President's Proclamation.

The American Consul at Matamoras, having officially informed the President of the United States that an armed body of Texians had been organized and marched into the Territory of Mexico, with the view of aiding the Revolutionists, and that new enlistments were still being made for similar purposes, issued the following Proclamation, which we take from the Washington Republic, of the 23d ult.:

By the President of the United States.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, there is reason to believe that a military expedition is about to be fiitted out in the United States for the purpose of invading the Mexican Republic, with which this country is at peace. And whereas there is reason to apprehend that a portion of the people of this country, regardless of their duties as good citizens, are concerned, or may be seduced to take part in the same. And whereas such enterprises tend to degrade the character of the United States in the opinion of the civilized world, and are expressly prohibited by law:

NOW, THEREFORE, I have issued this, my Proclamation, warning all persons who shall connect themselves with any such enterprise, in violation of the laws and national obligations of the United States, that they will thereby subject themselves to the heavy penalties denounced against such offences; that if they should be captured within the jurisdiction of the Mexican authorities they must expect to be tried and punished according to the laws of Mexico, and will have no right to claim the interposition of this Government in their behalf.

I therefore exhort all well disposed citizens who have at heart the reputation of their country, and are animated with a just regard for its laws, its peace, and its welfare, to discountenance, and by all lawful means prevent, any such enterprise; and I call upon every officer of this Government civil or military, to be vigilant in arresting for trial and punishment every such offender.

Given under my hand the twenty-second day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, and the seventy-sixth of the Independence of the United States.

In this town, by the Editor, on the 5th inst., Mr. WILLIAM D. TURNER, Merchant, to Miss AMANDA M. GEE, both of Kanesville. (Omitted in our last.)

Died.

In Kanesville, on Friday, 21st inst., of Typus Fever, Elder WILLIAM HOWELL, late from Aburdare, Wales. Aged 36 years.

Brother Howell has left behind him a name immortalized,—not engraven on monuments of wood and stone, the devices of men's hands; but gloriously inscribed with the spirit of the Highest as the tablet of many a pure, and honest heart which he has been instrumental in turning from darkness to light, and from the power of sin unto the service of the living God.

DEATH, like the hoar frost does often pass by,
The stalwart and strong of the Earth;
While the pure and lovely violet lies,
Benumbed beneath his cold breath.

SCHOOL DISTRICT, No. 1.

A MEETING of the Citizens of School District, No. 1, will be held at the County Court House, on Monday evening, December 1st, 1851, at half past 6 o'clock. Punctual attendance is requested. By order of the board.

GEORGE W. ARMSTRONG, Sec'y.

TAXES! TAXES!!

THE time for paying taxes is now come, and all persons will do well to attend to this call in season. No man is authorized to receive taxes for Pottawatamie County, except myself and Mr Horace Burdick, my Deputy.

County orders will be received only according to their numbers. If A, has an order of a late date and B, has one of an earlier date, A's order cannot be received for his taxes until B's order is paid, because it is the o'dest. Persons who are engaging to pay the taxes of others, or are buying and selling county orders, irrespective of their date and number, may find themselves deceived when they come to pay their taxes. I would be glad to accommodate all people; but my only safety is to act according to the letter of the law. After the first of January, there will be an additional charge upon those who do not pay before, and property will be liable to be distressed, which the officers will be under the necessity of doing.

The Boundary with Mexico.

By the treaty with Mexico, if we mistake not, the boundary line was to be surveyed, run, and marked, in one year from the treaty. Upwards of three years have elapsed, and it is not yet done. Who is to blame for this? It would seem as if the Government of the United States cannot get anything done in double or treble the time, or at less than five times the expense, that individuals or private associations can. If they get things done by the job, or on contract, they are cheated in the work. The great seat of the disease is the lust for office, and a longing to make money out of the Government. When the office of Commissioner to run this boundary, under the treaty, was created, there were hordes of applicants for it, from every quarter of the Union, for it gave $3,000 per year, besides the pickings and stealings. Mr. Bartlett, from Rhode Island, was the accepted suitor among those who paid their addresses for this office, after Colonel Weller and Colonel Fremont had both been discarded. Colonel Emery and Colonel McClellen had both been employed to do the scientific part of the business; but they were dispensed with, and Colonel James D. Graham, of the Topographical Engineers, was ordered to perform that service. We learn that Mr. Graham and Mr. Bartlett have got at loggerheads in relation to some question of rank, on their route through the woods.

Indeed, the Commission appears to be in a bad way. The last express received in New Mexico, from the "copper mines" on the back-bone of the Rocky Mountains, states that the Apaches had hooked all the mules, horses, oxen, sheep, and even victuals and drink, from the scientific and military expedition. How is all this to end? When will the boundary with Mexico be run? —[N. Y. Herald.

Proposal to Sell Cuba to England.

From the last foreign news published in the New York Tribune of the 27th October, we cut the following:

The Kolner Zeitung has letters from Madrid, of the 7th instant, stating that in a Cabinet Council, held on that day, M. Bravo Murillo proposed to his colleagues to sell the Islands of Cuba and Puerto Rico to England, for the sum of $150,000,000. He asserted that this sum represented the capital of the revenue which Spain received from these Islands. The correspondent of the Kolner Zeitung states, that M. Lersundy, the Minister of War, and M. Armero, the Chief of Marine, pretended to consider this proposal as a jest on the part of the President of the Council, but when they understood that M. Bravo Murillo really thought of submitting his plans to the Cortes, they expressed their indignation, and left the Council. Bravo Murillo, however, proceeded to detail his plans to the other Ministers. He said, the great object he had in view was to obtain money and credit—that Cuba would sooner or later be conquered by the United States, and that if such an event were to take place, Spain would lose the Islands, receive no indemnifications, and that she would besides have to bear the burdens of a protracted and expensive war.

Important from the Rio Grande.

By the arrival this morning of the schooner Major Barbour, Capt. Arnet, from the Rio Grande, we have important intelligence from the theatre of war on the Mexican frontier up to Friday last.

We have no papers by this arrival, and the information which we have received is somewhat incoherent, though interesting. It appears that the revolutionary forces under Caravajal had attacked Matamoras, and after a desperate fight succeeded in entering the city; but having learned that a small American steamer plying on the Rio Grande, was coming up with Mexican troops, a body of the revolutionists, consisting of about 200 Texans, was detached from the main force and proceeded to attack her, with the intention of capturing the Mexicans and seizing two pieces of artillery which were on board.

The commander of the steamer having obtained information of this movement, immediately put about, and proceeded to the Brazos, placed the troops and two pieces of artillery on board the Mexican war steamer Neptuno. There they remained when Capt. Arnet left Brazos. It was thought that the troops were anxious to join the revolutionist.

The diversion of the Texans from Caravajal, caused a suspension of the attack upon Matamoras. But the revolutionary leader was hourly expecting reinforcements from the direction of Carmago, and when rejoined by the two hundred Texans, the attack was to be resumed with vigor. There can be little doubt that Matamoras fell into the hands of Caravajal on Friday or Saturday last.

From verbal report, we learn that many of the United States troops on the upper line have deserted, and joined Caravajal. We also hear that despatches have been received here for more troops.

In the first attack upon Matamoras, it is stated that the revolutionary forces lost only three men in killed, but the mortality on the side of the Mexicans was much greater. We have no particulars as to the number of troops under Gen. Avalos, but his men are said to have fought with greater bravery.

When Capt. Arnet left the Brazos, the Neptuno was ready coaled, and it was supposed would make for a port some 150 miles south. The commander of the Mexicans asked permission to march through the United States territory, in order to reach Matamoras, but this was refused. The appearance of the Texans probably prevented him from going up on the Mexican side.

Our next news from the Rio Grande, which will be brought by the steamer Fanny or the brig Brownsville, we look for with great interest. The Fanny will probably arrive by Sunday or Monday.—[N. O. Picayune, 30th ult.

A National Convention of the Democratic party has been called for the first Monday in June, 1852, at Baltimore.

South America--Horrible, if True.

The Journal du Havre has the following: On the 1st of August the National Guard of Colonia had ventured to manifest their satisfaction at the departure of the troops at the garrison, commanded by Lieut. Gen. Moreno. At the same time they took little pains to conceal the fact, that the entrance of Generals Urquiza and Garzon into the Oriental Territory was not displeasing to them. Observing these symptoms of the tendency of public opinion, the police agents of Oribe hastened to inform Moreno, who was then encamped six leagues from Colonia. As soon as this officer had examined the reports of his spies, he returned with all speed to Colonia, bringing with him about 400 men and 200 horses, entered the town and gave the signal for a general massacre; men, "suspected" children, fell under the knives of the cut-throats. Moreno, to excite by his own example the fury of these assassins, with his own hand cut the throat of a young man named Napoleon Neves.

Fearful incidents marked the progress of this scene of carnage. The executioners, infuriated against their victims, were seen to mutilate them, to rob the corpses of their jewelry and ear rings, and, not satisfied with cutting of their fingers and noses, to cut up their skins into strips to make ropes for their cart harness. The refinement of cruelty which cannibals inflict upon their prisoners, has been fairly surpassed by a lieutenant of Oribe.

It is beyond a doubt that among the victims, the precise number of whom had not been ascertained at the departure of the last letters, was a Frenchman, who had been a long time established in Colonia, where he executed daguerreotype portraits, and who had always kept himself aloof from the political affairs of the country. This unhappy man has been basely massacred. At the moments when the cut throats of Moreno entered Colonia, he was enjoying the amusement of fishing. Two of them were expressly detached from the troop to put an end to him, and a few moments afterward his mutilated corpse was stretched upon the shore. —[Organ and Reveille.

Movement of Troops.

A Telegraphic dispatch from Washington has been received, ordering eight companies of the Rifle Regiment to Texas. It is understood, that Mr. Sanderson has been instructed to report the strength of his Regiment to the Adjutant General's office at Washington. The chiefs of the different corps are instructed to furnish supplies of different kinds for the regiment. This movement it is presumed, has reference to a suppression of the troubles on the Rio Grande frontier—in which Americans are participating, in violation of our laws and treaty obligations.

The news from Mexico represents the War of Revolution as increasing rapidly. The Insurgent are still victorious, having taken every town and position they have attacked. Nothing has been done yet by the Government to strengthen their forces. The troops are fighting on the defensive, but are routed in every quarter by the Revolutionists, all of whom are determined to gain their ends or carry the war into the heart of the country. The Government must act promptly, or yield to the demands which are embraced in the petition of the Insurgents.

It was thought that the late Mexican war had improved the Mexicans in the art and science of fighting, but the defects that have marked the progress of the present insurrection, seem to have increased their cowardice. Something must be done soon by Mexico, or she will sink, if possible, still lower in the scale of nations, will be overrun with her own soldiers, who will battle down her own cities, and destroy all the improvements which peace and civilization have reared. There will be some hard fighting there before the Insurgents can be compelled to surrender the cause they have espoused.—[Organ and Reveille.

Kossuth--Important Movement.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1st.

A despatch has just been received at the Navy Departments from Commodore Morgan. The New York Herald states: Late accounts have been received from the steamer Mississippi at Gibralter respecting Kossuth, and it is now doubtful whether he comes to this country.

Kossuth assumes the air of a conqueror and not of an exile, and makes no secret of his intention to raise funds in England and France for the purpose of attacking Austria, and revolutionizing Europe. This induced the French authorities to refuse him permission to enter France.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3d.

It is rumored that the Chevalier Hulseman, Austrian Minister, has informed Mr. Webster that he has received orders to withdraw, as soon as Kossuth is received as the guest of the United States.

Mr. Rives, the American Minister at Paris, has been recalled.

Havana Consul.

The Washington Telegraph says that, as yet, neither Col. James B. Walton, nor Col. Langdon, of the Mobile Advertiser, has been appointed to the Havana Consulship, though both are prominently spoken of in the knowing circles of Washington, for this desirable post.—[Missouri Republican.

FIRST ASSISTANT P. M. GENERAL.—FITZ HENRY WARREN, Esq., formerly the Second Assistant P. M. General, has been transferred to the position of the First Assistant.—[St. Louis Union.

YELLOW FEVER IN MOBILE.—The following telegraphic dispatch we find in the Baltimore Patriot:

The yellow fever has broken out here and has caused great alarm. The board of health held a meeting and reported that the disease was not increasing, and advising all strangers to stay away at present.

To Sawyers.

Do not forget to have on hand some nice Lynn Lumber for wagon beds. When you stick it up to season, place your airing or seasoning strips near the ends to prevent checking.

From the Dollar Newspaper.

The Destiny of Empire.

BY W. H. BURNHAM.

Brave men! the living truth thus calmly spoken,
Was dearer to thee, than thy life betrayed;
It stay'd thy mighty heart all crushed and broken,
Wounded and bleeding, sad but undismay'd.

NOBLER than all thy deeds of self-devotion—
PURER than virtue in thy heart that dwelt—
BRIGHTER than sunlight on life's stormy ocean,
That burning truth, before which thrones shall melt.

'Twas but a word, but like the lightning's flashes
'Twill blaze athwart the gloom that shrouds the world,
While in its track shall lie the loathsome ashes
Of tyranny and power, to ruin hurled.

It must be so!—Time cannot end without it,
The "thousand years of peace" are yet to come:
God's word is pledged! what HUMAN heart can doubt it!
Man must be free! Tyrants behold your doom!

Up through the vista of the years before us,
The eye of Faith discries with folds unfurl'd,
Heaven's banner waving in protection o'er us,
Inscribed with "Freedom to a suffering world."

E'en now the work speeds on—for thrones are crumbled—
The sceptre trembles in the tyrant's hand,
And proud, disdainful kings are daily humbled,
As Freedom's voice is heard throughout their land.

The cry of "Suffrage"—"People"—"Constitution,"
So long derided, has at length been heard,
And though too often ending in confusion,
It is not passing as an idle word.

The rank of lords, and dukes, and kings, and princes,
Is fritter'd down to emptiness at last;
And time will show that all such vague pretences
Are to be buried in the dreamy Past.

The time is coming when the countless number
That bow in Serfdom at the feet of Power,
Shall waken from their deep and awful slumber
And sieze the world as Freedom's rightful dower.

The work is speeding on—the day is breaking!
Its golden light is beaming on our land;
And at the sight Old Monarchy is quaking
With fear, and trembling in his heart and hand.

The work will cease not! 'Tis begun, not ended:
Each year will add new triumph as it flies,
Until o'er Earth an Empire be extended,
Without a king but Him who rules the skies.

E'en now I hear, out from the coming distance
The welcome tones of a prophetic voice—
While nations smile as with a new existence—
"The Almighty reigneth! let the earth rejoice!"

MISCELLANY.

Mining Intelligence.

The news from all the mining regions is of the most encouraging charactar, as regards the amount of gold which will be taken out The dry diggings will be most successfully worked during the Winter, and the rain will be likely to present little obstacle to working the quartz mines.

Many companies are preparing to work quartz mines with improved machinery, and we shall expect to hear of a heavy yield from those mines. Supplies are being rapidly sent forward, and there seems to be no well founded reason to suppose that less work will be done through the winter than the past summer.

From Moquelumne Hill there is the most cheering intelligence. The miners have discovered gold in spots where they never before dreamed of looking for it; and it would appear from the accounts, that there is not an acre of ground in that region where the soil is not strongly impregnated with the precious metal.

The accounts from the bars on the Toulumne and the Mariposa mines are quite as gratifying. Business is brisk, and rich mineral developements are daily made.

The Stockton Journal says: All the accounts we have from the southren placers agree in representing them as being qually productive now as at any time during the past year.

The Sacramento Union says, the company which was organized the last Summer for the purpose of diverting the waters of Bear River at a point near Illinoistown, and throwing the stream into Auburn, are successfully prosecuting their labors. We hear that upwards of 500 men are employed in the construction of this work, which will be completed in the course of six weeks. The incalculable advantages to be derived from a copious supply of water in this flourishing mining town, are apparent to those who are familiar with the richness of the mineralogical deposits in that vicinity of the village. Earth is now being carted to the North Fork, a mile distant, and although transportation down the precipitous hills which skirt the river is tremendously expensive, still the dirt pays well. There is no settlement in the State which so imperatively demands a bounteous supply of water as Auburn, and we are assured that the company which has invested its capital in this enterprize will be abundantly remunerated for their outlay.

We learn from packers and miners from the mining districts, that on all the bars of the Yuba River, the yield is large, very large, even upon such bars as were abandoned last season; one in particular, known as "Condemned Bar," they are realizing $25 to the man, and have been for six or eight weeks past, which may continue for a much longer period.

From all we can gather from the different diggings, gold dust will be a drug in this market this fall.

The Nevada Journal say: a correspondent writing us from Park's Bar, on Yuba, says he found many of the mining companies doing well, the Canal Company in particular had averaged 35 pounds of dust per day the week before. The Ohio and Squad Companies were also doing well. The Park's Bay Company will not be able to do much until another year. At Long Bar, Parton's Bar, Rose's Bar, &c., miners were all doing well. The Banks were good, paying from $5 to $40 per day. There is much excitement now in that section respecting a rich quartz vein on Dry Creek, from which have been taken many fine specimens of quartz. I have not had time to visit the vein.—[N. Y. Sun.

The Spanish Flying Machine.

The inventors of this contrivance, Don Diego de Salamanca and his Daughter, are about to arrive at Paris, to show the effect of this marvellous invention.

The machine is very, simply; it consists of a case two feet long and one foot wide, adapted to a band of leather round the waist buckled behind. Two iron rods fastened to the case, support a small piece of wood on which the feet repose. The case contains a simple and ingenuous mechanism, similar to that employed to set an automaton in motion. The mechanism is worked by means of a handle. It sets in work two large wings ten feet long made of very thin caoutchouc covered with feathers, and the wings may be so worked as to produce vertical perpendicular or horizontal flight. The handle has also to be turned every quarter of a league to regulate the distance. The operation of turning lasts a minute. Horizontal flying is the most difficult; the wings beats the air like the oars of a boat, or rather as the feet of the Swan when it swims. By means of this curions machine a man can go, almost as rapidly as a carier pigeon, from the Hotel de Villie to the Arc de trumpe de l'Etnite, in eight minutes, and half an hour to Versailles.

Curiosities of the Arctic Expedition.

The New York News gives the following account from an officer of the American Arctic expedition, of the boats used in that region:

"Kyacs" are a kind of boat used by this people, and are certainly very curious affairs, four of which were brought in the Advance. They are made by stretching seal skins over a light frame work of wood, shaped very much like a flattened cigar, both ends being very sharp, with a hole in the top about 14 inches in diameter. The whole length of a boat is about 12 feet, by 14 inches in width, and 8 inches deep at the centre. The boatman slides his legs and hips through the aperture in the top of the boat, extending his legs lengthways, while from his hips up, are outside. This part of the body is covered with a seal skin, made the same as a "Jumper," and lashed with drawing strings at the bottom, to a rim round the aperture in the boat. The boatman propels his craft with a double bladed paddle, abont 7 feet in length, made of light wood, and slightly made; the main part but about 1¼ or 2 inches in diameter, and the blades four inches wide, and ornamented with Ivory. With this he moves his boat through the water at a very rapid rate. By a dexterous movement with his oar, an expert boatman will completely turn his boat over, and come up on the opposite side, still retaining his accustomed situation.

In this fragile vessel he pursues his avocation of spearing seals in the roughest weather, for which purpose he has a barbed spear several inches long, made of steel, and very sharp, which is attached to an ivory point about eight inches in length and 2½ inches in diameter: to the steel is attached a line, forty feet in length, made of the hide of the Walrus, and this is fastened to a bladder made of the skin of the seal and filled with air, lying on the after part of the boat.

When the spear enters the seal, it is arranged so that it disengages itself from the ivory point, by the point slipping at the same instant from the staff, but is attached by a string and floats with it, while at the same time the bladder to which the line was attached, is thrown overboard, preventing the seal sinking any farther than the length of the line; the staff and seal are then recovered at their leisure. For killing waterfowl, of which there are but few, a sharp, round spear is used, attached to a staff seven feet in length. These spears are thrown with astonishing accuracy, rarely, if ever missing their mark. Another manner, and the easiest by far, of spearing the seal, is by doing it through a hole in the ice where they come up to breathe; they will frequently scratch holes through the ice from the under side, where it is several feet thick, to get fresh air. The natives are accustomed to the noise made by the scratching, and will hear them a long distance and watch for them, and as soon as they make their appearance they are at once killed and secured.

The Two Paths.

There are two paths leading through this world, in one or the other of which every traveller on the journey of life is found walking. The one is the path of duty, and the other is the way of the transgressor. Every step in the former path elevates the character, and plants the immutable basis of truth and rectitude. Every step in the latter is a fearful descent in the direction of the great dismal swamp of abandoned guilt. At the outset, these two paths seem to our confused perceptions, to run so nearly parallel that we attempt to step from one to the other as best suits our inclinations. But this is a fearful experiment, for as one road is ascending and the other descending they very soon seperate so widely that those on the downward course are utterly unable to climb again upon the high road of rectitude, and unless the arm of the son of God is reached for their rescue they must continue in the way of the transgressor, which is hard in this life, and leads to endless perdition. It becomes us then to look well te our footsteps, and ascertain without delay in which of these two paths we are walking; Every act of our lives, every word of our mouths, and every thought of our hearts has a moral character—it is either in accordance with the will of God, or in opposition to that will, and consequently must effect our destiny here and hereafter.

Reader, in which of these roads art thou now walking? Assuredly—for the lips of Eternal Truth have declared it—the broad road of sin leadeth to destruction. Thou can'st not reach heaven, unless thou walketh in the narrow way.—[Classic Union.

The science of law, as often reduced to practice now-a-days, is based on two great principals—first to give the scoundrel a better chance than the honest man; second, to make technicalities weigh against truth and justice. A slight informality is sufficient to defeat the cause of a good man and advocate that of a bad one.—[Brunswicker.

NATIONAL CHARACTERISTICS.—The New York Times translates the following portion of a political catechism from "Il Fischietto," an Italian paper published at Turin:

Question—Who is the lightest man in the world?

Answer—The Frenchman.

Who is the heaviest?—The German.

Who is the most serious?—The Englishman.

Who is the most vivacious?—The Swiss.

Who is the proudest?—The Spaniard.

Who is the most humble?—The Russian.

Who is the most enterprising?—The Pole.

Who is the laziest?—The Turk.

Who is the widest awake?—The American.

Who is the sleepiest?—The Hottentot.

Who has all these virtues and vices mixed together?—The Italian.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.—What are those? asked the Queen of a Connecticut pedler, who was exhibiting wares in the Crystal Pallace.

Them, marm? Why, them is wooden nutmegs from Connecticut.

Oh! my! exclaimed Victoria, as she turned to the Prince, who mildly remarked:

Connecticut was always some pumpkins.

The next day the pedler received an order from the Palace for six barrels of wooden nutmegs.

More whisky is shipped from Cincinnati than from any other part in the Union. Large quantities, however, are retained for home consumption, as the records of mortality show.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned havin been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

References.—Messrs. R. C. Wetmore & Co., N. Y. City; Dr. F. Merryweather, Cinn. Ohio; Messrs. CLAIMS! CLAIMS!!
IN THE BOYOU COUNTRY.

THE Mormon population of HARRIS GROVE wishing to emigrate in mass to the Salt Lake, next season offer to sell out their interest to this beautiful section of Iowa—consisting of 20 improvements, from 5 to 50 acres fenced and cultivated and from 160 to 320 in claims, well supplied with excellent water and timber, and one of the healthiest countries bordering on the Missouri. Proof—there is not a case of ague or fever in the whole settlement. This grove lies about 20 miles north of Kanesville, and on the direct route from Fort Desmoine to Council Bluffs on the Missouri river. We will sell this fall at cost of improvement. Also a part of the crop on the ground. They will take cattle, store goods and money in exchange.

SALOON,
EMPORIUM BUILDINGS.

Here's Crackers and Hard Bread in any amount,
And Pastries, and sweetmeats, too much to recount,
Where the emigrant to Oregon, the Mines and Salt Lake,
Are sure to find plenty of real Brown Bake.
Then there's fruits, nuts and cigars to smoke,
Crack or chew.
Tobacco of all sorts, fine cut and honey dew,
Fine wines from the south and drinks rich and sweet,
And every rich viand, to smoke, drink and eat.
I'll sell you at wholesale, or at fourpence a slice,
Try, buy, and you'll own that I've every thing nice. J. E. JOHNSON.

SAVANNAH HOTEL.

IN the beautiful and flourishing town of Savannah, Andrew county, Mo. The subscriber has established himself for the purpose of accommodating travelers, visitors, and friends with entertainment, embracing as good fare as this and other countries can afford. He has newly fitted up the establishment formerly occupied by Mr. James Closby—has a good Livery Stable connected with the house, where persons can be accommodated with conveyances at all times. Horses, buggies and hacks in constant readiness, and on reasonable terms.

He flatters himself that, by strict attention to the wants, and devotion to the comforts and happiness of his guests, he will share a liberal portion of public favor which he solicits. Good fare for both man and animal! Call and try the Savannah Hotel, a little west of the Court House.

THE GOLD REGIONS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.

THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satisfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.

Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrrived at Sacramento, this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, whilst on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

For further particulars as to the route, we refer you to the best and most correct maps, and to a directory which will be published soon.

PERRYS & YOUNG

WOULD respectively announce that they are now receiving at their old stand on MAIN STREET, ST. JOSEPH, direct from the Eastern markets, the largest stock of dry goods, groceries; hardware; queensware, &c., ever brought to the West. Comprising French and English broadcloths, of every variety; plain and fancy cassimeres; sattinets; blankets; calicoes; domestics; boots and shoes; hats and caps; knifes and forks; picks and shovels; tea; sugar; coffee; molasses; salt; spun cotton; dye stuffs; rope; castings, &c., &c.

We will have on hand in a few days a large and well assorted stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,

Purchased by one of the proprietors, who by long experience, is well acquainted with the wants of the emigrant.

Your attention is also invited to a large lot of

DRY CLARIFIED SUGAR,

Warranted to keep in any climate.

All persons who make this place their starting point, (and all who act wisely will do so for many reasons,) would find it much to their own interest to give us a call, before purchasing elsewhere, as we feel confident that they can find goods in our stock better suited to their wants and at lower prices than in any other House in Upper Missouri. As all persons procuring outfits, will necessarily remain a few days, we invite them to call and look at our goods as it will be a pleasure to us to show them And they will have the opportunity of judging for themselves. The Materialism of the Present Age.

Ours is pre-eminently an age of Materialism. The strides of Physical Science within a few years have been gigantic and incessant, and thus far their results are as a whole unfavorable to implicit Faith. The Telescope, with its majestic and ever-lengthened sweep, seems, if I may so express it, to crowd back the Divine Presence farther and still farther from the orb we inhabit. God no longer walks in the Garden, conversing face to face with man: He thunders no more from Sinai nor holds his Court on the summit of Olympus; and to the searching inquiries directed to all accessible, cognizable portions of the Universe for the dwelling-place of its Creator and Lord, the chilling answer comes back, "Not here! Not here!!" Meantime the number, importance and power of the intermediary agencies between inert Matter and quickening Spirit seem perpetually to increase: Electricity and Magnetism steadily approximate the rank of demi-gods; and when at length some dogmatic Compt, some specious observer and analyzes of the "The Vestiges of Creation," proclaims to us, as if from the utmost pinnacle of scientific achievement, the conclusion that planets, suns, systems, plants, beings, men, are but inevitable results of a law which yet had no author, and that intelligence has been slowly, blunderingly, aimlessly evolved from ignorance, soul from body, thought from dust, as planets, with all their diverse properties and uses, from one homogeneous, universally diffused vapor or "fire-mist," our hearts sink within us as we falter out the expostulation.

"O star-eyed Science! hast thou wondered there,
To waft us back the message of Despair?"

These materialist dogmas do not overcome but they try our faith. They do not vanquish our convictions, but they perplex our reason. To our grosser apprehensions, Earth is so near and Heaven so far, Life and Death are so palpable and certain, while Immortality is so vague and shadowy, that a painful doubt as to the verity of our existence beyond the grave is the unuttered torture of many a mind not wilfully irreligious nor willingly sceptical. Death has so steadily gone forward from a period anterior to History, cutting down all who lived, and removing them entirely and permanently beyond the reach of human cognition—the course of Nature as we see it has been so unvaried and inflexible—the fall and disappearance of the successive generations of men so much like that of the annually renewed foliage of the forest—that even Faith hangs trembling over the brink of the grave, and tearfully, dubiously asks, "If a man die shall he live again?" Most of us believe he will, and yet would give very much to know it. The stupendous events, which gave assurance of man's immortality two thousand years ago, seem to fade into indistinctness and uncertainty as generation after generation goes by, and Nature pursues her unvarying, uninterrupted round of birth, growth, decay, death and (apparent) extinction of being. Since myriads of millions have "died and made no sign" since Christ was received up into Heaven, men's hearts are not always proof against a distracting suspicion that there may have been a mistake in the record, or an imperfection in the testimony, "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief!"

Nay, more! the general and scornful outcry against the verity of the alledged "Spiritual Manifestations" attests the existence of a wide-spread and deep-rooted Sadduceeism. The assumption which lay at the basis of this clamor was not that of the insufficiency of the evidence, but that of the essential incredibility if not impossibility of the phenomenon attested. Translated into plain words, the popular sneer amounted to this—"The pretended 'Spiritual Manifestations' are impostures because such 'Manifestations' are impossible,"—Or, we might even say, "because there are no spirits to manifest themselves." And yet in no part of the Bible can I recollect even an implication that direct intercourse between the Visible and the Unseen worlds was to terminate with the age of Christ and his Apostles. On the contrary, Chirst's discourses and observations seem to imbued with the constant assumption that the world of Spirits lies very near to the world of Sense, and that only capacity, adaptedness are required to enable us to look and pass through the thin partition which divides them.

Let me conclude, then, with an expression of my earnest hope that, even though the so-called "Spiritual Manifestations" of our day should all be proved brain-sick phantasies or blasphemous juggles, it will nevertheless be deemed possible, conceivable, desirable, that some farther, fresher evidence of the verity and individuality of our departed friends' existence in the Spirit World should yet be vouchsafed to Man. Faith needs the assurance, Sorrow the consolation, that such evidence would give; and it may be that, as Astrology opened the heavens to the conquests of Astronomy, Alchemy the earth to the triumphs of Chemistry, and as false Christs pre-ceded and attended the advent of the true Messiah, so imperfect and unreal developments as if from the Land of Souls may in the Providence of God be permitted to herald and draw attention to real and more fitting manifestations from that Land which are about to be vouchsafed us. The Star in the East would have been unmeaning or else appalling to any but the shepherds who waited and looked for the Messiah; and the sight of the Holy Child brought joy first to the dim eyes of good old Simeon and others like him who waited but for that vision and were then ready to depart in peace. And to my mind it seems more than reasonable—it seems fitting and logical—that a century which has witnessed such stupendous advances, such amazing transformations, in the material or physical world, should yet be rendered equally memorable by some farther developments with regard to the nature and conditions of the essential and immortal existence of Man.

Sir John Franalin.

The London Morning Chronicle publishes the following interesting statement, vouching for its accuracy, and saying that the admirality has ordered an inquiry.

Gloucester, Friday.

An extraordinary circumstance has just happened here, which I hasten to communicate. It is almost incredible, but for the fact that the authority is undoubted, and the Admirality have been induced to order an official inquiry, which is now being proceeded with.

These are the facts: Last Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Russell, a lady living at Wooten, near this city, observed something fall in the garden, while at dinner. On sending out the gardener, he found it to be a small balloon, in the car of which was found a card, bearing the following inscription:

Erebus, 112 W. Long
71 deg. N. Lat.
September, 3, 1851.
Blocked in.

The matter was at first looked upon as a hoax, but subsequent events led to a communication being made with the Admiralty, who sent for the balloon and card, and immediately on their receipt sent down Capt. Beechy, R. N., to Gloucester, with another officer, to make inquiries. These inquiries are now being pro-ecuted; Captain Beechy having been twice at Wootten, examining all parties resident there. It turns out that it is a real Government balloon, of exactly a similar kind to those sent out with the Erebus, when she sailed from England.

Position of the United States.

Washington, November 5.

It is understood in diplomatic circles here, that Chevalier Hulsemann has received a letter from Prince Schwartzenberg, the substance of which he has communicated to our Government, in relation to the proposed visit of Kossuth to this country. Though Chevalier Hulseman is not directed to withdraw, upon the arrival of Kossuth, or, at least, has not communicated such instructions, yet he has informed this Government that Austria will look with concern and regret upon any official recognition of Kossuth by this Government and that of Great Britain. This communication was made to this Government, as is believed, on Saturday last.

I have reason to think that the questions growing out of the Cuban affairs, between the United Staies on one side and the Governments of Great Britain, France, and Spain on the other, are all to be satisfactorily adjusted, or, at least, will have no difficulty.

In respect to the orders given to the English and French cruisers to intercept or search American vessels, supposed to be engaged in a hostile expedition against Cuba, or any proposition for a mutual right of purpose, they have recently been met by an appeal, on our part, to the principles established by the Ashburton treaty.

The doctrines on this subject which were laid down by Mr. Webster, in his dispatch to Lord Aberdeen, through Mr. Everett, during the Negociation of the Ashburton treaty, will be fully sustained and carried out by this Administration; and these doctrines would preclude England and France from urging into execution any orders such as were recently given.

The South vs. Secession.—Within a short period four Southern States have voted directly upon the question of secession from the Union, viz; Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and South Carolina. The total vote in these States, in favor of a continuance in the Union was 147,200, for seceding 109,100 majority in favor of the Union 35,000. Mississippi gave 7,300 Union majority, Alabama 6,200, Georgia 18,000, South Carolina 7,500.

Message of Gov. Townes.

The Savannah papers of the 4th, contain the message of Governor Townes to the Georgia Legislature. It is a long document, devoted to a variety of subjects, but has nothing on the subject of Federal politics except a recommendation to reorganize the militia, in view of the position of Georgia towards the General Government.

Governor Townes is in favor of extending the aid of the State toward the establishment of a line of steam propellers from Savannah to England, and to the continent.—[Mo Republican.

Novel Exportation.

Among other commodities of various kinds, comprising the cargo of a vessel which left New York last week for Chagres, was a consignment of one hundred cats, for the California and Oregon markets. This will not be considered so very singular, when it is known that in Oregon—where horses and mice are plenty, and cats scarce—it is not uncommon to exchange a horse for a cat.

At this rate it would not be surprising to see the quotations for cats regularly published in the prices current.—[Mo. Statesman.

New York, Nov. 16.

Later from Hayti.—By an arrival from Jaquemel, we have dates to the 26th ult. The Emperor (Faustin) had agreed to assure the Dominicans that he was still firm in his purpose of capturing the eastern or Dominican part of the Island, and had called out 3000 men at Jaquemel with that intention. The force was to rendezvous at Port au Prince.

Provisions were very scarce, and were selling at enormous prices.

On Listening to Evil Reports.

The longer I live, the more I feel the importance of adhering to the rules which I have laid down for myself in relation to such matters:

1. To hear as little as possible of what is to the prejudice of others.

2. To believe nothing of the kind till I am absolutely forced to it.

3. Never to drink into the spirit of one who circulates an ill report.

4. Always to moderate, as far as I can, the unkindness which is expressed towards others.

5. Always to believe that, if the other side were heard, a very different account would be given of the matter. I consider love as wealth; and as I would resist a man who should come to rob my house, so would I a man who would weaken my regard for any human being. I consider, too, that persons are cast into different moulds; and that to ask myself, "what should I do in that condition?" is not a just mode of judging. I must not expect a man that is naturally cold and reserved, to act as one that is naturally warm and affectionate; and I think it a great evil, that people do not make more allowances for each other in this particular. I think religious people are too little attentive to these considerations; and that it is not in reference to the ungodly world only that that passage is true. "He that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey;" but even in reference to professors also, amongst whom there is a sad proneness to listen to evil reports, and to believe the representations they hear, without giving the injured person an opportunity of rectifying their views, and defending his own character. The more prominent any man's character is, the more likely he is to suffer in his way; there being in the heart of every man, unless greatly subdued by grace, a pleasure in hearing any thing which may sink others to his level, or lower them in the estimation of the world. We seem to ourselves elevated, in proportion as others are depressed. Under such circumstances I derive consolation from the following reflections:

1. My enemy, whatever evil he says of me, does not reduce me as low as he would if he knew all concerning me that God knows.

2. In drawing the balance, as between debtor and creditor, I find that if I have been robbed of pence, there are pounds and talents placed to my account, to which I have no just title.

3. If man has his "day," God will have his.

See 1 Cor. iv. 3.—Simeon.

Iowa.—The following are the census returns of Iowa: Dwelling houses in the State 32,962; families in the State 33,517; white males 100,835; white females 90,994—total whites 171,879; colored males 168, colored females 167—total colored 335, total population 192,214. Deaths during the year 2,044. Farms in cultivation 14,395. Manufacturing establishments producing $500 and upwards annually 432.—[Des Moines Courier.

Evil Company.—The following beautiful allegory is translated from the German: Sophronius, a wise teacher, would not suffer even his grown up sons and daughters to associate with those whose conduct was not pure and upright. "Dear Father," said the gentle Eulalia to him one day, when he forbade her in company with her brother, to visit the volatile Lucinda—"Dear Father, you must think us very childish, if you imagine that we should be exposed to danger by it." The father took in silence a dead coal from the hearth, and reached it to his daughter. "It will not burn you my child; take it." Eulalia did so, and behold her beautiful white hand was soiled and blackened, and, as it chanced, her white dress also. "We cannot be too careful in handling coals," said Eulalia in vexation. "Yes, truly," said the father, "you see, my child, that coals, even if they do not burn, blacken, so it is with the company of the vicious."

Washington at Prayer.—Laurie Todd, that most indefatigable collector of choice legends of the past, in the course of an article prepared for the Home Journal, narrates the following anecdote of Washinton:

I received the following anecdote of Washington, 50 years ago, from the farmer referred to in the narrative. He was a member of the society of friends, who from their peaceable habits, were lukewarm or opposed to the war of Independence. While the army lay in the neighborhood of White Marsh, a farmer whose dwelling was near the camp, one morning at sunrise, while passing a clump of brush, heard a moarning noise. Thinking his ox or his ass had fallen into a pit, he, on approaching the spot, heard the voice of a man engaged in prayer; he hid in a thicket, and listened, resolved to see the speaker. Having finished his aspiration to heaven, this man of God came forth from his hiding place. It was George Washington. When the farmer entered his dwelling, he said to his wife, "Martha, we must not oppose this movement any longer. The work is from the Lord. I heard the man George Washington send to heaeven such prayers for the cause and the country, that I know they will be heard." Thus Washing rose with the sun and prayed for his country—fought for it by day, and watched for it by night.

A Contrast.—France refuses Kossuth the poor privilege of landing on her shores; Turkey gives him his liberty though threatened with vengeance of Russia and Austria. Yet France is a christan land and Turkey is Mahommedan.

Departure of the Emigrants for Liberia.

The barque Morgan Dix, Capt. Conrad, sailed on Saturday morning from Mason's wharf, Fell's Point, for Bassa Cove, Liberia, having on board about 150 emigrants to that land of promise to the colored race. The emigrants are mostly manumitted slaves from Virginia and North Carolina, and we believe are well provided for start in life in their future home. In proceeding down the river appropriate hymns were sung and a feeling of prayer offered to the Great Ruler of the winds and waves, for a prosperous voyage and safe arrival of the emigrants at their destination. The ceremonies were conducted by the the Rev. B. W. Bayley, Agent of the American Colonization Society.—[Baltimore News.

A Chance for Clairvoyants.—Professor Simpson has offered, through the president of the English Medico-Chirurgical Society, £100 to any one who shall read a slip of paper enclosed in a box, and containing a line of Shakespeare.

A Forcible Comparison.—The Chicago Commercial Advertiser says:

"We saw a "colored individual" yesterday in full dress, Bloomer looking like a charred stump in soldier clothes.

She carried herself with most majestic impudence, casting black looks on all she met."

Egypt as it is.—A late traveller, in speaking of Egypt, says her products consist of wheat, flies, and sore eyed children.

Perpetual Motion.—The Red Land, Texas Herald of the 11th inst., says that perpetual motion has been discovered by three young men of San Augustine county, and adds:

They are now in Washington City applying for a patent, and they write back that there is no doubt of success. The principle on which the machinery is propelled is the presure of atmospheric air upon a succession of vacuums. They have been offered in Washington $50,000 for the patent right for the State of New York.

Congestive Chills;—This disease has destroyed a good many horses in Bates county recently.—[Oseola Independent.

Horses?—[Mo. Statesman.

Yes, horses! We doubted until we saw it ourselves, and subsequently, we have examined works on farriery and find the disease distinctly, classed and described. A horse taking the chill, passes through all the symptoms that attach to the disease in man.—[Oseola Independent.

A Maxim of Washington.

"Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire, conscience," was one of a series of maxims which Washington framed or copied for his own use when a boy. His rigid adherence to principle, his steadfast discharge of duty, his utter abandonment of self, his unreserved devotion to whatever interests were committed to his care, attest the vigilance with which he obeyed that maxim. He kept alive that spark! He made it shine before men. He kindled it into a flame which illuminated his whole life. No occasion was so momentous, no circumstance was so minute, as to absolve him from following its guiding ray. The marginal explanation in his account book, in regard to the expenses of his wife's annual visit to the camp during the revolutionary war, with his passing allusion to the self-denial which the evigencies of his country had cost him, furnishes a charming illustration of his habitual exactness.

Australia vs. California.—From recent accounts Australia bids fair to cast California in the shade as a gold bearing country. The London Times says that some lumps have been found which weigh 8 pounds.

Kossuth is the son of a lawyer, and small land-owner in Zemplin, and was born in 1806. He is, therefore, now in his forty-fifth year. He was married in 1842. Previous to the Hungarian revolt he was distinguished for his eloquent advocacy of liberal principles, in the Hungarian diet, but it was in the character of an editor that his influence was most exerted and deeply felt. Kossuth is said to have commenced his career as a reporter for the Hungarian Diet, and afterwards become an editor.

An ingenious printer of Illinois, Mr. F. A. C. Foreman, has recently invented an electro-Magnetic printing press, which is highly spoken of by those who have examined it. The Vincennes, Indiana Gazette, speaking of this invention, says:

A contemporary who saw it at work, says it threw off impressions with the rapidity of lightning. His paper works upon a reel, and is continuous, like a telegraph coil. The paper is carried over the type on a cylinder, and when one side is worked, the paper is reversed, and the other printed with a most perfect register, and as they come from the press, the sheets are clipped apart by an ingenious contrivance. The speed of this press is almost unlimited and its exactness is beyond anything in the line of machinery. Mr. F. estimates the cost of the largest sized printing press at not more than five hundred dollars.

The two papers published at Fort Desmoines are each proposing to drop the "Fort" from the name of their town, and the Journal thinks it best to write Desmoines as one word, and pronounce it according to English analogies. Very good idea. We trust it will be carried out.

Another Fire Annihilator.

A new and important discovery is announced in a Paris letter to the St. Louis Republican. It is a fire varnish, and an experiment recently tried at Madrid is thus described:

"Five small frame houses, covered with tar and turpentine, were erected on an open square. Two of these houses were re-covered with the varnish, and the other three were not. The latter were reduced to ashes almost as soon as they were set on fire; whereas the former, in spite of the tar and turpentine, remained perfectly uninjured to the end of the trial, which lasted two hours. The trial was the most severe, as the five houses were close together, and all of them were on fire in the inside, but the flames did not break forth at all from the varnished houses; besides this, in the midst of the conflagration, two gallons of some strong essence were thrown upon the varnished houses, and they were immediately and entirely enveloped in flames; but when the liquid was exhausted, the walls appeared perfectly intact as before. Don Gueseda is about to get out a patent for this wonderful varnish, which he says will become as cheap as it is valuable, and he can put it within the reach of everybody."

Mr. Fillmore.

The New York Commercial closes an article on the National Administration with this language:

"Whether Millard Fillmore be re-elected to the Presidential office, or whether some other good and tried Whig be chosen for that honor, or whether the mantle of the Executive fall upon one of an opposite political faith, we shall always regard Mr. Fillmore's administration of the affairs of this Union as remarkable alike for its lack of pretension and for its pre-eminent purity, skill and success."

Annexation of the Sandwich Islands.

The New York Herald of the 4th inst., says it has been informed upon high authority that a treaty, from his Majesty, Kamehameha the Second, King of the Sandwich Islands, proposing the annexation of these Islands to the United States, has been transmitted to the Government at Washington, and is now among the files of the State Department.

The Crystal Palace is to be taken down and removed two miles from its present position, and erected for a winter garden. It is composed of four thousand tons of iron, and 396,000 feet of glass.

Betsy Procter hung herself at the Poor House in this place on Thursday last. There was an incident in the history of this woman worthy of record which comes to us authentically sustained. She had been blind for ten years, and become so, we learn, under the circumstances: When a married woman her husband charged her with inconstancy to the marriage vow. She emphatically denied it, and upon her knees prayed God to strike her blind if true. Immediately after she went blind. She died by the violence of her own hands, distracted by the constant apprehension of the further judgment of Heaven. Her appearance in death indicated a higher destiny than awaited her in this world.—[Frederickstown (Md.) News.

Destruction of a Ship By a Whale.

Captain Deblios, of the Whaleship Ann Alexander of New Bedford, states that on the 20th of August last, when in latitude 5° 5m S., longitude 102° W., while in persuit of whales, two of his boats that were out in pursuit were attacked by a large sperm Whale, and completed demolished. The Captain promptly ordered out a third boat, and proceeded to the assistance of the men, who were thrown into the sea by the destruction of their boats. He succeeded in rescuing all of them, and reached his Ship in safety. But the Whale becoming more frantic with rage, immediately directed his course for the Ship and struck, her abreast of her foremast, injuring her so badly that she instantly filled. All hands took to the boats on the 22d, and were subsequently picked up by the Ship Nantucket, Captain Gibbs, of Nantucket, had arrived at Payta. September 15th, whence the Captain took passage for New York on his way home.

This is certainly an extraordinary instance of the fearful capabilities of the Whale, and we believe that the like has occurred but once before, which happened in the case of a Nantucket Ship many years ago.—[Boston Journal.

Mr. Charles W. Marsh, of Washington City, alluding to the notice said to have been given to our Government by England and France, of their intention to search the vessels of this Country bound to Cuba, writes as follows in a letter to the New York Courier and Enquirer:

"I happened to be in the North, where Mr. Webster was last Summer, when the news arrived that England and France intended to order, or had ordered, American vessels to be searched, as in former times; and I heard Mr. Webster, then confined to his house by his annual attack of catarrh, declared that the first instance of any such proceeding ought to be, and would be followed by war! And I know, also, that this declaration was made by him in presence and hearing of several persons in habits of daily correspondence with their English friends, and that, in less than twelve days from the time it was made, it was heard of and known in high quarters in London.

Mormon Affairs.

Are the Mormons in Western Iowa to be trampled under foot and crushed, because public opinion may be against the Mormons in Salt Lake? Upon close examination, it may appear satisfactory to the people and Government of the United States, that the officers of Utah left their posts without sufficient cause. It was our opinion that they did. We told them so face to face, in Salt Lake City, before we came away, in all kindness and good-will; and we have seen no good reason since why that opinion should be changed. We repeatedly remonstrated with them against their leaving—told them that we felt interested for Utah, and personally interested also, as we expected to be a citizen there with them another year,—reminded them that our Lord endured the contradiction of sinners against himself, (not that we wished to accuse our friends in Utah) that by so doing he might save a Nation: And you, by a little endurance, may also save Utah, and reap the laurels of eternal gratitudes: Whereas, if you leave now when your presence is most needed, you may add fuel to the fire that ought to be extinguished." The decisions of the Supreme Court would be, in that Territory, like the anchor and chain-cable that hold the Ship amid the storm: or like the majestic Mississippi, deep, silent, and strong,—bearing down in its bold and resistless current, every thing that might attempt to obstruct its course. We do know that the officers left Utah contrary to the wishes of the great mass of the people there, both officials and unofficials. No man has been driven away from that country who behaved himself while there: Neither Jew nor Gentile.

We apprehend that it would have been early enough for the Judges to leave Utah after their decisions had been resisted, or when they were forcibly prevented from holding Courts. With some propriety they might then have returned and asked the General Government to send a command there sufficiently strong to enforce their decisions, and to punish the offenders, and make such changes in the appointments as would tend to a faithful administration of the laws. But because there was a little flurry, caused mostly by the speech of Judge Brocchus, to think of putting the Government to the unnecessary expense and trouble of sending troops there is, in our opinion, preposterous and absurd. But such a movement would please the Mormons, as it would afford them a cash market, at living prices, for much of their surplus produce.

Suppose the Mormons go from this Frontier to Utah, with the same good feelings which they have ever cherished in this region; would they not be more likely to exert such an influence when they arrive there as would be gratifying to the people of the States; than to go with their feelings soured and riled by unprovoked excitement, mobocracy, and outlawry? The wise will consider this suggestion, and reflect: But the fool will rage and be confident!

Utah Officers.

If the report of officers returning from Utah, should only have the effect of arousing a flood of indignation against us on the Frontier; what a triumph they will gain. "It must needs be that offences come. But woe to them by whom they come." Better have remained at their posts and endured a little longer,—kept all the difficulties the other side the mountains, and settled them there. Governor Young did pledge himself in our hearing and in their hearing to render the Judiciary any aid they might need to organize the Court, to sustain it, and to abide the decisions; and he entreated them to stay; and we believe, in good faith also.

Chief Justice Bramblebury, we regarded as a modest, unassuming and talented gentleman. Indeed, so far as we are personally concerned, we have nothing against any of the officers: But we require of Judge Brocchus to acknowledge that there was a strong personal prejudice against him in the minds of the citizens of Salt Lake, and that those citizens believed that their prejudices were well founded. We do not now say that they were, neither do we require Judge Brocchus to say that they were: but that he believes the citizens thought them well founded. If the Judge makes this acknowledgement, then we shall publish nothing personal concerning him: but if he does not, we shall feel in justice and honor bound to lay the entire history of the causes of that prejudice before the people.

Rumors.

We hear that some of the "Brares" of Mills County make their boasts of extensive arrangements in Missouri to afford them recruits; and some of our professed knowing ones talk about "wire workers" and "Submarine Telegraphs." Missouri may take such things not altogether complimentary: But, be this as it may,—we know little and care still less about any such extravagant notions or sayings: It is enough for us to know that our course and the course of our people in Western Iowa, is marked with justice, honor, truth, and good will to man: and should such rumors be based upon facts, greater men than we can attend to the case of citizens of one State going into another to join in any hostile and riotous proceedings.

Varioloid.

There have been several cases of the above disease about in this County. It is a milder form of the small pox. We advise parents to get their children vaccinated as an antidote against this disease which may assume a more malignant and dangerous aspect if allowed to range unchecked.

One Mile Square.

The citizens of Kanesville are about to petition Congress for a grant of land of one mile square to cover the town. This land to be sold out to claimants or occupants at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and the proceeds to be applied to improving the streets, making bridges and to such other works of internal improvment as a Board of three commissioners or trustees may think most advisable. The trustees should be honorable and highminded men, and permanent residents of the place.

Kanesville is near equidistant between the Missouri line and the Northern boundary of the State of Iowa; and it is about four miles back from the Missouri River, just far enough to be out of the way of high water mark, and it is a healthy location, and the natural business centre for all Western Iowa, as every disinterested observer will acknowledge. It is directly on the great northern emigration route, and the chief, and almost only outfitting post on the Western Frontier. Pottawatamie is the Banner County of the Sixth Judicial District, and Kanesville is the County Seat of Pottawatamie. The great district of country lying north of us and mostly unsettled,—will greatly add to the importance of this place when it becomes settled up, which must soon be the case, as the land is now being surveyed, and claimants may know their metes and bounds. We receive regularly three mails per week and sometimes four. We think that we shall soon have a daily mail, or what will be equal to it. The capital vested here in merchandize will run up to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, besides stoves hollow ware, tin and sheet iron business, which is extensively carried on here. Mechanics of the best kind in the world, of all sorts needed.

We expect to leave Pottawatamie County in the Spring; yet, as we have been well used by her, we wish to bequeath to her our good will and our blessing; and with all defference and respect to the adjacent and surrounding counties, knowing that they possess many advantages—such as good soil, good water, and much good timber, and all the principal natural elements and sources of wealth;—yet Nature's hand has given to Pottawatamie a geographical location that affords her not only the natural sources of wealth, but the superior advantages of trade and commerce. We are glad to see our citizens awake upon this subject,—taking measures to secure that permanence to Kanesville and to improve the place in a manner worthy of the inducements which nature and surrounding circumstances hold out.

The Message.

As we before predicted, the Message is a lengthy document. There were many things requiring the notice and attention of the Executive, and few have escaped his observation. The head and pilot of our nation, with the candle of intelligence, has marched into all the rugged and intricate affairs of the Republic—shown her foreign and domestic relations, and her financial condition. He recommends liberal appropriations for internal improvments, and for all Governmental purposes:—Advises a liberal policy towards the Territories—a reform of the criminal statutes—thinks the Indians should be civilized and taught to cultivate the soil, and to afford them relief, rather than chastise them. (This is humane. But President Fillmore has never been much among the Indians; neither left on the plains by reason of their stealing all his animals, neither has his shirt been stripped from his back by the villains, we presume.) If we had had that portion of the message to deliver, it would have been of a little different color.

The main land-marks of legislation are plainly erected before the eyes of Congress, and they have rather a lengthy and difficult task before them. The Lord help them, and guide their actions for the greatest good of the Nation!

We should have copied the entire message, but for its coming to hand just before going to press.

Weights and Measures.

As some little complaints are made respecting measures for grain, being incorrect, it is the imperative duty of the proper officer of the County to provide a Standard. Dealers cannot be particularly blamable until a Standard of measures is provided according to law: then if any man shall use an incorrect measure, he will come within reach of the following statute:

"If any person with intent to defraud use a false balance, weight, or measure, in the weighing or measuring of anything whatever that is purchased, sold, bartered, shiped, or delivered for sale or barter, or that is pledged or given in payment, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the County Jail not more than six months, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the Court"

Officers of County will do well to attend to their duty, and see that lawful measures are kept by dealers that no cause of complaint by buyer or seller exist.

If every man who wants a measure for corn, will provide himself with a good strong tub or box that will not give or stretch, and get the official Seal or Standard upon it, containing a bushel, it might be the better plan.

From Salt Lake.

We have just seen a private letter from a gentleman at Salt Lake, to a friend in this town. The letter is from a reliable and a responsible source. It says that Governor Young appointed a Secretary pro tem., after Mr. Harris left, who now has possession of the seal left with Livingston, and all government has not stopped yet; for Judge Snow is doing the Circuit Court business for all the districts. Trains were all safely in. Williams' Merchant train was last in, about the 24th, October.

John D. Lee & Co., have gone to Rio Virgen. J. L. Heywood & Co., to Salt Creek. Bishop, Call & Co., to Parwan to settle and organize Millard County, and Fillmore city where is to be the seat of Government.

Times look rather squally about mails for the future on account of the Indians; but we hope for the best.

Prospects on the Frontier.

The prospects at the latest accounts, are more favorable for an orderly and amicable arrangement of all matters, religious, and political, in this section of the country.

Wanted at this Office.

The signatures of all men in this county who feel interested to ask the present Congress for a grant of land of one mile square, covering the town of Kanesville. The petition is at our office, please call and write your names, it will cost nothing more.

☞ The report of Judge Sloan to Gov. Hempstead, in another place, will be read with interest. We have the corroborative statements of some of the bar that it is correct. We have heard that certain complaints are made against the Judge's inability to do business, &c. But so far as we have been able to learn, the complaints against him are too trifling to record.

The real substance and root of the matter is about as follows: Judge Sloan is, by birth, an Irishman,—he adheres to the Mormon faith; and though a good scholar and an intelligent lawyer, he is not fit for Judge. He was legally elected to that office by a great majority of the oldest settlers in the country who made the roads and bridges, suffered and nearly overcome the early Indian depredations,—citizens who have demeaned themselves orderly—have been loyal and upright, and have not violated the laws, neither abused the power which they had. But they are Mormons, and they must not hold office. Other men must have the offices;—and now, since public opinion is somewhat against the Mormons in Salt Lake, it is the time when our unlawful intentions can be revealed, and popularity will shield us from harm.

It the foregoing be not the real bone and sinew of the causes of any disturbances; our columns are open to some person or persons better informed than we, provided the statements be made over the signatures of men known to us as responsible and honorable men.

If the Mormon population on the frontier had been disorderly, rebellious and criminal, we should fear the consequences: but as we know that they have endeavored to conduct themselves as good and orderly citizens, and have done to others as they would that others should do to them, we can rejoice and be exceeding glad, that if we get into trouble, we get into it with clean hands, and with consciences unefiled. We have not wronged or injured our neighbor, neither have we wished him ought but good. There may have been, here and there, a transaction out of place, that we could not control: If any, we are sorry for it; and are always ready to do whatever justice and honor require at our hands, to make right whatever may be wrong. None can deny this who know anything of our course of conduct in this region, and that have generosity enough to own the truth. But to Mormonism is likely to be added another testimony of its truth. Jesus says: If ye were of the world, the world would love you; but as ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hates you. Blessed are ye when men revile you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely—when they separate you from their company, rejoice and be glad," &c.

A little patience and forbearance might, possibly, do that which would be better for all concerned.

North Country.

In the North part of Pottawatamie County or District, are some of the most valuable farming lands in Western Iowa. Bishop Lane has some ten sections of the best timbered lands in all the upper country, upon which are located or settled quite a number of families. Now is the time for some enterprizing men to step in and buy.

Kanesville has an abundance of capital, vested in all sorts of necessary articles for the settlement of a new country and the cheapset market for merchandize west of St. Louis; and the quickest, best, and surest market for all the products of the land in the Western States. No better soil on the face of the whole earth than in Pottawatamie. Plenty of good Springs, and running creeks and branches. Corn and wheat are the staple products. Great country for raising pork and bacon,—No better part of the world for stock raising in general. The people do not sell because they dislike the country. But they sell because they want to be richer hereafter, by sacrificing a little now. This is, and is destined to be, one of the greatest outfitting posts for emigrants to California and the Western Territories on the Missouri river. Nature has so ordered and planned it; and it is hard to oppose her decrees. Come to Pottawatamie all ye ends of the earth; for here are the elements and sources of wealth. California is no touch at all to this county. There they have to dig ten or twenty feet deep for gold; and in this country, we find the richest veins of the precious metal by turning up from four to six inches of the soil.

The country is now being surveyed, and soon will be brought into market. Now is the time, and here the place for the lovers of wealth to make their pitch; and secure for themselves and their children after them, good and permanent homes. Our merchants and mechanics are all enterprizing men, and mostly control heavy capital. They are preparing every thing that may be wanted by emigrants that remove from this place to the West, for such as pass through this place; and for such also as may come into the country to locate and settle. We are not in the mercantile business ourself. Neither have we any stock, interest, or ownership in any mercantile establishment in this country; but we venture to say, that goods, wares, and merchandise can be purchased here cheaper than they can be brought here from any quarter, particularly if brought in small stocks. Our merchants do not make their money by high prices. They make it by doing an immense amount of business. A large business may be safely calculated upon here in the Spring, in our opinion.

JUDGE BROCCHUS has published a card in the St. Louis Intelligencer, exonorating us from the charge of hindering him from firing a National Salute on the Fourth of July last while crossing the plains in Company. Justice is all we claim; and when that is administered to us, we can extend our personal good-will to the administrator.

Not Driven Out.

The following is from a Mercantile firm in the City of the Great Salt Lake. They are not Mormons and never expect to be that we are aware of. They appear contented, and are calculating to remain there as it would seem. Major Blakey and Dr. Shropshire, having formerly done business in Palmyra, Missouri, may be personally known to some of our readers. They are not driven away, neither do they speak of any that have been.

Their letter to us on business matters closes in the following language:

"We have no news of importance to give you; peace, order, and plenty prevail here: also good health. One of us will go East in the Spring, for another stock of goods, but we will not perhaps leave in time to arrive in Kanesville before you leave; but think that we can send the funds to pay the freight so that the goods Robbins left can be freighted in your company.

Your Friend, &c.,
WILLIAM BLAKEY, & CO.,
By J. P. SHROPSHIRE.

[COPY.]

To His Excellency Stephen Hempstead Governor of the State of Iowa.

As Judge of the Sixth Judicial District of the State of Iowa, I lay the following facts before your Excellency, for your consideration and action thereon, as you may deem meet and proper.

I held a term of the Court at Coonville, Mills County upon the 27th day of October last, and sat during five days, although suffering considerable from the Ague, partly because of an open house in which the Court was of necessity held, but being then overcome by the affliction, and through the solicitation of the Bar, as well as my own belief that it would be of general utility, I appointed the first Monday, the first day of December inst., a term to hear and determine all business that might then appear upon the docket and ready for action.

I was in readiness in Coonville, to attend to my duties, at the proper time of the day upon the first day of this month; but to my surprize I was informed that notices had been, and were then posted up in town, of which the following is a true copy:

"LOOK AT THIS

We the gentiles of Mills County Do this day notify the citizens of Coonville that they are not to lease rent loan or hier any house in that town if they Do it will be at thear own pearil for ware determine that the gran jurar shall not sit."

The County Judge who was not in town had not procured a place to hold Court, and I desired the Sheriff to use his utmost endeavors to procure one, which I believe he did do, but without effect.

Sometime about or after Noon thirty-one horsemen or thereabouts well armed with rifles, pistols, and knives, &c., entered the town in a Company, and there had a Rendezvous. Those who had spiritinous liquors for sale in town, had agreed not to sell any, therefore refused; but they procured all they wanted at a distance, and after some time became considerably intoxicated, and were very riotous even from their coming in.

J. D. ROGERS, LEWIS JOHNSON, and BRANSFORD ALLCORN, waited upon me, stating that they were a Committee appointed by that Company of Gentiles, to know what I intended to do, wishing me at the same time to write out and execute an undertaking that I would discharge the Grand Jury; also, that I would never come back to hold Court there, and that if I would do so they would permit me to obtain a house and hold Court to clear the docket of Civil business.

Furthermore, that they would have Gentile Judges, and all other officers of the same kind,—could find such that would answer their purpose, and I might Judge the Mormons. I peremptorily refused to sign such, or any other document, but informed them as citizens, that I had good reason to believe that the Grand Jurors had not been legally summoned; therefore, I would discharge them, and inasmuch as I could not ascertain any business of consequence to go before the Grand Jury, I did not consider it would be necessary to have a Jury; but, that I could not be compelled to do any illegal act through coersive measures.

Finding that the Mob had increased to about forty, and it being beyond the power of the Sheriff or Magistrates to attempt to control them. I got together with me the District Clerk and Sheriff, at my boarding house, and for want of a place to hold Court, adjourned the Court until the second Monday in May next, and had the same recorded.

Since I returned from that place I am well informed that those men are notifying the peaceable inhabitants by threats, to leave their homes.

I humbly await your Excellency's instructions, and shall be always found ready for a faithful discharge of the trusts reposed in me.

I am with the highest respect,
Your Excellency's,
Very Obedient Servant,
JAMES SLOAN.

Special Conference.

The Special Conference of the Church, held in this place, was duly organized on the 8th of November last. Elder Orson Hyde was unanimously chose to take the chair. E. M. Greene, appointed clerk, and Daniel Mackintosh, Reporter.

The minutes are two lengthy for insertion, but will be faithfully preserved.

The Elders and friends from the Valley, all spoke freely to a very large and attentive audience,—bore strong testimonies in favor of the cause, and the united testimony of all was, for the Saints to prepare for emigration to the Valley in the Spring. Union, good will, and concert of action, in all things, were strongly urged upon the Saints, and responded to most cordially in every measure th was laid before them. It closed with the best of feeling; and every face seemed looking westward. The weather was as favorable as could be expected and the business was all closed and done up just before a storm set in.

CORRECTION.

At the last Session of the High Council, the subject was fully investigated, which was brought before that Body in September last, and then ordered to be printed. Some official men were pretty strongly accused of being slack, in the discharge of their duties, and of acting in bad faith: But at the last examination, it was clear and apparent that no charge, or color of wrong could be sustained against the individuals charged and consequently were honorably acquitted: but it was satisfactorily shown that the buyers and sellers of the cattle were alike guilty: it being apparent that each understood the other. Done by order of the High Council. G. W. HARRIS, President.
E. M. GREENE,—Clerk.

From the Millennial Star.

Fellowship has been withdrawn from Elder Joseph Clements, late President of the Glasgow Conference, for the highly disreputable course of conduct pursued by him on the eve of his unexpected and abrupt departure for America, the facts in the case will be forwarded to the Presidency of his Quorum in the Great Salt Lake City, for their consideration and action thereupon.

Expulsion of an American Citizen from France.

Mr. Bouis, citizen of the United States, has been ordered out of France, by the Government. His offence was finding M. Bonaparte's administration not liberal enough. The facts are as follows: Mr. Bouis, being of French extraction, speaks French like a native, in 1848 he expressed freely his sympathies with the Republicans, was denounced by some secret agent of the police and placed on the list of Republican foreigners. The affairs lay dormant until a few weeks ago, when Mr. Bouis demanded permission to deliver a course of lectures on China. It was flatly refused on the ground of the applicant's political opinions, and on his remonstrating against this excessive rigor, he was ordered to quit Paris in twenty-four hours, and the Country in three days. —[Lou. Courier.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Patriot.

BOSTON, Tuesday, A. M.

Twenty thousand persons, it is estimated, have traveled to the top of Bunker Hill Monument within the past year, to accomplish which each person had to take two hundred and ninety-five, and as many more to get down—making five hundred and ninety feet in all. At the price charged for admission, (12½ cent.) the receipts during the above mentioned time must have amounted to $2,500.

Missouri Republican.

This Journal, in our opinion, takes a correct, common-sense and legal view of the aspect of affairs in Utah, and of the return of the officers. We were there at the time of the difficulty, and can appreciate the position of the Republican. It is our unqualified opinion that the officers should not have left. The above Journal says:

No official statement has yet been made, though this is promised upon the arrival of the officers in Washington; nor are we informed to which of the number the paternity of these defences is to be ascribed. It is not important for our purpose to know, further than that the facts set forth are the leading and main grounds on which these officers justify their leaving their posts. If there are other and better reasons, we will be prepared to give them due consideration when we know what they are and to what extent they go.

In the first place, the Chief Justice of the U. S. Court, L. G. BRANDEBURY, PERRY E. BROOCHUS, Associate Justice B. D. HARRIS, Seretary of Utah Territory, and H. R. DAY, sub Indian Agent to the Utah Indians have left their posts and returned to the United States. The public will enquire why and for what reasons—According to the published statement they are these.

The Governor of the Territory, BRIGHAM YOUNG, and the Mormon Elders and the community have been acting very improperly, in the use of abusive seditious language towards the United States Government. They are guilty of Polygamy, or having many wives, and exhibiting them in the streets. The Governor is farther guilty in having squandered $20,000, placed in his hands by the United States; and is guilty of the omission of not having appointed county sheriffs, as the Organic law requires.

This is the substance of the charges brought against the Governor and people of the Territory. They are grievous charges, and we are not disposed to defend them nor shield them from the odium due their acts. On the contrary, if Governor Young has uttered the language ascribed to him, or has encouraged such sentiments towards the United States Government as are imputed, he is unworthy of being the Governor of the Territory, and should be removed from office. As to his immorality of life, profane language, plurality of wives, and such like matters, we presume these are subjects for the Territorial Legislature to attend to. As yet, we believe, Congress has passed no statute for the States or Territories on these subjects. If the Governor is a defaulter, we have no doubt the accounting officers at Washington will know it, and punish him as such, if they can. Of all these charges so much at war with, and so repugnant to all our feelings of right and propriety, we could not, if disposed, attempt a justification or excuse. We only know their existence through the publications alluded to, and, admitting their truth (as at this writing we are compelled to do,) we inquire what has been the conduct of the United States officers? and how far is their conduct justifiable? The community will draw the distinction between the evil and bad practices of the Governor, and the justification for leaving their posts, set up by these officers.

It will, at the first reading, strike every one, that the defence of these returning officers is fatally insufficient in the outset, in this: that there is no overt act, or crime, charged or alleged to have been committed. The Judges of the U. S. Court go there, are well received, and from the time of their arrival to their coming away, no attempt is alleged to have been made, to infringe upon their jurisdiction, or to refuse obedience to their decisions. On the contrary, as far as the statements go, there seems to have been a disposition to submit to their decisions, as in the case of the Secretary and the funds in his hands. Threats were made that they should not hold a court—but words are only empty sounds—and no fact is presented, showing an effort to prevent their holding court, and exercising their proper jurisdiction.

What should be thought of a U. S. Judge, who, in times of excitement, deserted his post and fled the State, because the Governor thereof, and other persons, in office or out of it, had used intemperate and improper language towards the United States Government and her officers? It is at such times, amidst such excitement, when the popular feeling may run right or wrong, that the Judge, with his unsullied ermine, his purity of purpose, his rectitude of character, his freedom from transient or party impulses, his learning and official position, is expected to sit in judgement, above the storm of error or popular prejudice, and enforce the law. If his decisions and orders are set at nought, and not enforced—if, by personal or actual resistance, he finds himself powerless—then, and only then, would he be justified in leaving his post. How has it been in this case?

But these Judges—at least one of them, Judge BROCCHUS—seems to have considered, that new duties were added to his Judicial functions. In the States, and well regulated communities, it is considered to be decorus, and the duty of the Judges, to keep entirely free from all popular excitement—that they may stand forth as the arbiters between the community and the government, and between man and man. Judge Brocchus, it seems, summoned the people to assemble; they listened to him respectfully, whilst he made a speech against them and their criminal practices—this may be the province of a Territorial Judge, but we are at a loss for the statute requiring it. It could hardly be expected, that a fanaticle and misled people—such as we all believe the Mormons to be—would not be roused to anger, and indeed to make violent demonstrations, by such an assault upon them and their leaders.

We have not time now to follow this subject in all the views in which it appears to us. We think the Judges should have remained at their posts, proceeded regularly with their courts, kept out of excitements, and when cases occurred requiring the exercise of their official authority, exercised it fearlessly and without favor or affection. If they had done this, and their authority had been resisted, then, but not till then, the public would have been prepared to excuse their retreat.

For Mr. Harris, there is quite as little excuse. So far as the published statements go, he does not seem to have been seriously interfered with in anything, except the effort to take the money which he had a legal custody of. In all his other acts he had no opposition, and in this case when the court decided in his favor, the Governor and his people submitted.

But what surpasses our comprehension is, what a sub-agent of the Utah Indians has to do with the civil or political affairs of the people of Utah Territory, unless they conflict in some way with the Indians. Yet Mr Day, also finds an apology in this seditious language, to leave the Indians to the mercies of those corrupt and seditious people, and come back to the States. One would suppose that he could have discharged his duties to the Indians at least, even if Gov. Young had committed treason, and been hanged for it.

Personally, we do not know either of the officers named, except Captain Day. We presume they are all of the Whig party, but that does not justfy, nor ought it to go as a condemnation of their acts. Their course is one that demands the earnest investigation of the Administration at Washington. It is not only prejudicial to the public service, but is calculated to bring the appointing power into discredit before the people. There is too much of this receiving office, paying a short pilgrimage to a distant territory, and then coming home without leave.

FRIDAY. DECEMBER 12, 1851.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate, and House of Representatives:

I congratulate you and our common country upon the auspices under which you meet for your first session. Our country is at peace with all the world. The agitation which for a long time threatened to disturb the fraternal relations which made us one people, is fast subsiding, and we are crowned as a nation with usual blessings. None can look back to the changes which are past, or forward to the bright prospects before us, without feeling a thrill of gratification; at the same time he must be impressed with a grateful sense of our favored obligations to a beneficient Providence, whose eternal care is so manifest in this happiness, in this highly favored land since the close of the last Congress.

Certain Cubans and other foreigners residing in the U. S., who were more or less concerned in the previous invasion of Cuba, instead of being discouraged by any failure, have again abused the hospitality of their country by making it the scene of another military expedition against the possessions of her Catholic Majesty. In which they were countenanced aided and joined by citizens of the U. S. On receiving intelligence that such designs were entertained I lost no time in issuing such instructions to the proper officers of the U. S., as seemed to be called for by the occasion. By the proclamation a copy of which is herewith submitted, I also warned those who might be in danger of be inveigled into this scheme of unlawful invasion and the penalties which they would incur.

Sometimes there was reason to hope that these measures had sufficient influence to prevent any such attempt. This hope however, proved to be delusive. Very early in the morning, 3d of Aug., a steamer called the Pampero departed from N. O., for Cuba, having on board upwards of 400 armed men with the open intention to make war upon the authorities of the Island of Cuba. This expedition was set on foot in palpable violation of the laws of the U. S. Its leader was a Spaniard; and several of the chief officers and some others engaged in it were foreigners. The persons composing it, however, were mostly citizens of the United States. Before the expedition set out, and probably before it was organized a slight insurrectionary movement which appears soon to have been suppressed had taken place in the eastern quarter of Cuba.

The importance of this movement was unfortunately so much exagerated in the accounts published in this country that these adventurers seem to have been led to believe that the creole population of the Island not only desired to throw off the authority of the mother country, but had resolved upon that step and had begun a small concerted enterprize. The persons engaged in the expedition were generally young and ill informed.

* * * * * * *

The Government of Great Britain and France have issued orders to their naval commanders in the West India Station to prevent, by force if necessary, the landing of Adventurers from any nation on the Island of Cuba with hostile intent. The copy of a memorandum of a convention on this subject between the Charge de Affairs of Her Britanic Majesty and the acting Secretary of State, and a subsequent note of the former to the Department of State are herewith submitted together with a copy of a note of the acting Secretary of State to the Minister of the French Republic, and the reply of the latter on the same subject. The papers will acquaint you with the grounds of this interposition of the two leading commercial powers of Europe, and with the apprehensions which this Government could not fail to entertain that such interposition, if carried into effect, might lead to abuses derogatory of the maratime rights of the U. S., are in a firm, secure, and well defined basis, they stand upon the ground of national independence, and public law, and will be maintained in all their just extent. The principle which this Government has heretofore solemnly announced it still adheres to and will maintain it under all circumstances and at all hazards; that principle is, that in every regularly documented merchant vessel, the persons who navigate and those on board of it will find their protection in the Flag which is over them.

No American Ship can be allowed to be visited or searched for the purpose of ascertaining the character of individuals on board, nor can there be allowed any watch by vessels of any foreign nations over American vessels on the coast of the U. S., or the seas adjacent thereto.

* * * * * * *

By reference to the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, it will be seen that the aggregate receipts for the last fiscal year amounted to $52,319,970, 87, with the balance in the Treasury on the 1st of July 1850, gave as available means for the year, the sum of $58,017,521 26. The total expenditures for the same period were $44,005,-878 68. The total imports for the year ending June 30th, 1851, were $215,725,995, of which there was in specie $19,679,000. The exports for the same period was $217,517,330, of which there was of domestic products $178,546,555. Foreign goods re-exported $9,733,635; specie, $29,241,880. Total, $117,517,150. Since the 1st of December last the payments in cash on account of the public debt, exclusive of interest, have amounted to $756,156, 56, which however includes the sum of $92,101 paid under the 12th article of the treaty with Mexico, and the further sum of $2,591,-713 45, being the amount of awards to American citizens under the late treaty with Mexico, and for which the issue of stocks are authorized, but which was paid in cash from the treasury. The public debt on the 20th ultimo, exclusive of the stock authorized to be issued to Texas by the act of the 9th Sept. 1850 was $6,256,095 26.

The receipts for the next fiscal year are estimated at $51,840,000. It has been deemed proper in view of the large expenditures consequent upon the acquisition of territory from Mexico that the estimate for the next fiscal year should be laid before Congress in such a manner as to distinguish the expenditures so required from the others as ordinary demands upon the Treasury. Total expenditures for the next fiscal year are estimated at $42,-988,290 19, of which there is required for the ordinary purposes of the Government other than those consequent upon the acquisition of the New Territories, and deduct the payments on account of the public debt, the sum of $34,343,198 56, and for the purposes connected directly or indirectly with those territories and in the fulfilling of the obligations of the Government contracts in consequence of these acquisitions the sum of $8,595,491 01. If the views of the Secretary of the Treasury, in reference to the expenditures required for the Territories shall be met by a corresponding action on the part of Congress and appropriations be needed in consequence therewith, there will be an estimate amount in the Treasury on 30th January, 1853, of $20,366,443 60, wherewith to meet that portion of the public debt due on the 1st of July following, amounting to $6,237,931 35, as well as any appropriations which may be made before the estimate.

In thus refering to the estimated expenditures on account of our acquired territories, I may express the hope that Congress will concur with me in the desire that a liberal course of policy may be pursued towards them and that every obligation expressed or implied, in consequence of their acquisition shall be fulfilled by the most liberal appropriations for the purpose. The value of our domestic exports for the last fiscal year, as compared with those of the previous year exhibits an increase of $13,646,322. At the first view of this condition of our trade with foreign nations, would seem to present the most flattering hopes of its future prosperity. On examination of the details, our exports however, will show that the increased value of our exports for the last fiscal year, is to be found in the high price of cotton which prevailed during the first part of that year, which has since declined about one-half. The value of our exports of breadstuffs and provisions, which it was supposed the incentive of a low tariff, and large importations from abroad would have greatly augmented, has fallen from $68,707,221, to $21,948,652, in 1851 with a strong probability amounting to almost a certainty of a still further reduction in the current year.

* * * * * * *

The exports of specie to liquidate our foreign debt during the past fiscal year has been $24,263,-976 over the amount of specie imported. The exports of specie during the first of the present fiscal year have been $14,651,827, should specie continue to be exported at this rate for the remaining three fourths of the year will drain from our metalic currency during the year ending 30th January, 1852, the enormous amount of $58,607,308. In the present prosperous condition of the national finances, it will become the duty of Congress to consider the best mode of paying off the public debt if the present anticipated surplus in the Treasury should not be absorbed by appropriations of an extraordinary character. The surplus should be employed in such way and under such restrictions as Congress may enact in extinguishing the outstanding debts of the nation.

* * * * * * *

In my last annual message to which I respectfully refer. I stated briefly the reasons which induced me to recommend a modification of the present tariff, by converting the ad-valorum into a specified duty, whenever the article imported was of such a character as to permit it, and that such a descrimination should be made in favor of the industrial interests of our own country as to encourage home productions without excluding foreign competition.

* * * * * * *

The proper disposal of the mineral land of California is a subject surrounded by great difficulties. In my last message I recommended the survey and sale of these lands in small parcels, under such restrictions as would effectually guard against monopoly and speculation, but upon further information, and in deference to the opinions of the persons familiar with the subject. I am inclined to change that recommendation and to advise that they be permitted to remain as at present a common field of operation to enterprise and industry of all our citizens, until further experience shall have developed the best policy to be ultimately adopted in regard to them. It is safer to safer the inconvenience, that now exist, for a short period than by premature legislation to fasten on the country a system founded in error, which may place the whole subject beyond the further control of Congress.

* * * * * * *

The Agricultural lands, should, however, be surveyed and put into market with as little delay as possible, that the titles may become settled, the inhabitants, stimulated to make permanent improvements and enter their ordinary pursuits af life. To effect these objects it is desirable that the necessary provisions be made by Congress for the establishment of land offices in California and Oregon, and for the efficient prosecution of the surveys at an early date.

Some difficulties have occurred in organizing the Territorial Government of New Mexico and Utah, and when more accurate information shall be obtained of their causes, a further communication will be made on that subject.

* * * * * * *

The large accession to our Indian population consequent on the acquisition of New Mexico, and California and the extension of our settlements into Utah and Oregon have given increased interest and importance to our relations with the Aboriginal race. No material change has taken place within the last year, in the condition and prospects of the Indian tribes who reside in the North-western territory and west of the Mississippi river. We are at peace with all of them, and it will be a source of pleasure to you to learn that they are gradually improving in civilization and the pursuits of civil life. Along the Mexican frontier and in California and Oregon there have been occasional manifestations of unfriendly feelings, and some depredations committed, more from the destitute and starving condition of the Indians than from any settled hostility against the whites. As the settlement of our citizens progresses and the game upon which they mostly rely upon for subsistance is driven off or destroyed. The only alternative left them is starvation or plunder. It becomes us to consider in view of this condition of things, whether justice and humanity, as well as economy do not require us instead of seeking to punish them for offences which are the result of our policy towards them, to provide for their immediate wants and encourage them to engage in agriculture, and to rely on their own labor instead of the chance for the means of support. Various important treaties have been effected with different tribes during this year, by which their title to large and valuable tracts of country has been extinguished; all of which will, at the proper time, be submitted to the Senate for ratification.

* * * * * * *

In my last annual message I had reasons for believing that you possessed the Constitutional power to improve the harbors of your great Lakes, and sea coast and the navigation of our principal rivers and recommended that appropriations should be made for completing such works as had already been commenced, and the commencement of such others, as might seem to the wisdom of Congress to be of public and general importance. Without repeating the reasons then urged I deem it my duty again to call your attention to this important subject. The works in many of the harbors were left in an unfinished State and consequently exposed to the action of the elements which are fast destroying them. Great numbers of lives, and vast amounts of property are annually lost for want of safe and convenient harbors on the lakes. None but those who have been exposed to their dangerous navigation can fully appreciate the importance of the subject. The whole north-west appeals to you for relief, and I trust their appeal will receive due consideration at your hands. The same is in a measure in regard to some of the harbors and inlets on the sea coast. The unobstructed navigation of our larger rivers is of equal importance. Our settlements are now extending to the sources of the great rivers which empty into, and form a part of the Mississippi, and the value of the public lands in those regions would be greatly enhanced by freeing the navigation of those waters from obstruction.

* * * * * * *

The expenditures of the War Department for the year ending the 29th of June last, were $9,-062,689. The estimates for the year commencing the 1st of July next, and ending June 30th. 1853, are $7,898,775 83 showing a reduction of $11,-149 75.

* * * * * * *

The estimates for the support of the naval and marine corpse the ensuing fiscal year will be found $5,856,472 19. The estimates for the current year being $5,900,602 89. The estimates for the special objects under the contracts of this department amount to $2,684,220, against $2,210,980 for the present. The increase being the additional mail services on the Pacific coasts and the construction of the dock in California, authorized by the last session of Congress, and some slight additions under the head of improvements and repairs in navy yard buildings and machinery. I deem it of much importance to government economy and a correct understanding of naval expenditures that there should be an entire separation of appropriations for the support of the naval service, from those of permanent improvement at navy yards and stations, and for steammail service, and other special objects assigned to the supervision of this department.

The report of the P. M. General herewith communicated, presents an interesting view of the progress of operations, and condition of the Department at the close of the last fiscal year, the length of mail routes in the U. S., was 196,290 miles, and the annual transportation thereon is 53,275,252 miles, the annual cost of such transportation $3,421,723,00. The length of the foreign mail routes are estimated at 18,549 miles, and the annual transportation thereon 6,152,067 miles; the annual cost of this service is $1,472,187, of which $448,937 is paid by the Post Office Department, $1,023,250 is paid through the Navy Department. The annual transportation within the U. S., excluding the service in California and Oregon, which is now for the first time reported and enumerated in the tabular statement of the Department exceeds that of the preceding year 6,162,855 miles, at an increase cost of $5,471,100, the whole number of Post offices in the U. S., on the 30th June last was 197,966; there were 1,698 P. O., established, and 256 dis'd during the year The gross revenue of the department for the fiscal year, including the appropriation of the frank matter of Congress, of the departments and officers of Government and excluding the foreign postage collected for and payable to the British P. O., amounted to $625,866 and 78 cents. Expendifor same exclusively $2,059,949 under an award of the auditor, in pursuance of a resolution of the last Congress for mail services on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers in 1832 and 1833, and the amount paid to British Post offices collected for and payable to that office amounted to $6,024,566,-79 leaving a balance of revenue over the proper expenses of the year of $7,032,999 09. The receipt for postage during the year excluding foreign postage collected for and payable to the British Post office amounted to $63,447,4 21 being an increase $99,161,076 or $1,865,100 over the like receipts for the preceding year.

The public statutes of the U. S. have now been accumulating for more than 60 years and interspersed with private accounts and scattered through numerous volumes, and from the cost of the whole have become almost inaccessible to the great mass of the community. They also exhibit much of the incongruities and imperfections of hasty legislation at its sessions, and it is generally conceded there is no general law of the U. S. to supply the deficiences, of their legislation. It is important that such legislation should be as perfect as possible defining every power intended to be conferred, every crime intended to be made punishable, and prescribing the punishment to be inflicted. In addition to some particular cases spoken of more at length the whole criminal code is lamentably deficient. Some others are imperfectly described and other flagrant crimes may be commited with impunity. The scale of punishment is not in all cases graduated according to the degree and nature of the offence, and is often rendered more unequal by the different modes of imprisonment by confinment in the different States. Many laws of a permanent character have been introduced into appropriation bills. It is often difficult to to determine whether the particular clause dispenses with the temporary act of which it is a part or continues it in force, it also frequently happens that enactments and provisions in laws have been introduced into bills with which they have no title of connexion or relation. In this mode of legislation so many enactments have been heaped on each other with but little connection that in many instances it is difficult to search out or determine what is the law. The Government of the U. S. is emphatically a Government of written laws. The statutes should therefore so far as practible not only be made accessible to all, but the expressed language so plain and simple as to be understood by all, and arranged in such method as to give perspicuity to every subject. Many of the States have revised their public acts with great manifest benefit, and I recommend that provision be made by law for the appointment of a commissioner to revise the statutes of the U. S arranging them in order, supplying deficiences, correcting incongruities, specifying their language, and reporting them to Congress for its action.

* * * * * * *

It is deeply to be regretted that in several instances officers of the government, in attempting to execute the law for the return of fugitives from labor has been openly resisted, and their efforts frustrated and defied by lawless and violent mobs; that in one case such resistance resulted in the death of an exemplary citizen; in other instances serious injury to those officers and to individuals who were using their endeavors to sustain the laws. Prosecutions have been instituted against the alleged offenders, so far as could be indetified. I have regarded it my duty is such cases to give all aid legally in my power to the enforcement of the laws, and shall continue to do so whenever their execution may be resisted. The act of Congress for the return of fugitives from labor is one required and demanded by the express words of the constitution. The constitution declares that no person held to service or labor in one State under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall not, in consequence of any laws or regulations therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered on claim of the party to whom such services or labor may be due. This constitutional provision is equally obligatory upon the legislative, the executive and judicial departments, and upon every citizen of the United States.

Congress, however, must, from necessity, first act upon the subject by prescribing the proceedings necessary, ascertaian that the person is a fugitive, and the means to be used for his restoration to the claimant. This was done by an act passed during the first term of President Washington, which was amended by that enacted by the last Congress, and it now remains for the executive and judicial departments to take care that these laws be faithfully executed.

This injunction of the constitution is the peremptory and as demanding as any other. It stands exactly on the same foundation as that clause which provides for the return of fugitives from justice or that which declares that no bill of attainder shall be passed, or that which provides for the trial of all crimes shall be by jury These several articles and clauses of the constitution all resting on the same authority must stand or fall together.

Some objections have been urged against the details of the act for the return of fugitives from labor, but it is worthy of remark that the most opposition aimed against the constitution proceeds from persons and classes many of whom declare their wish to see that constitution overthrown. They avow their hostility to any law which shall give practical effect to this requirement of the constitution. Fortunately the number of these persons is comparatively small and it is believed to be daily diminishing, but the issue which they present is one which involves the supremacy and even the exlstence of the constitution.

Cases heretofore have arisen in which individuals have denied the binding authority of the acts of Congress. Several States have proposed to nullify. They acted upon the ground that the constitution was the supreme law of the land, and that those acts of Congress were repugnant to that instrument; but naullificatin is not aimed so much against particular laws as being inconsistent with the constitution, as against the constitution itself, and it is not to be disguised that a spirit exists, and has been actually at work to rend asunder this Union, the cherished inheritance of our revolutionary fathers.

In my last annual message, I stated I considered a series of measures which had been adopted at a previous session, in reference to the agitation that growed out of the territorial and slavery questions as a final settlement in principle and substance of the dangerous and exciting subjects which they embraced, and I recommend adhereuce to that adjustment established by those measures until time and experience should demand the necessity of further legislation to guard against evasion or against abuse I was not induced to make this recommendation because I thought those measures perfect, for no human legislation is perfect, wide differences, and variance of opinions can only be reconciled by yielding on all sides, and this result has been reached after angry conflicts of many months, in which one part of the country was arrayed against the other, and a violent convulsion seemed to be inevitable.

Looking at the interests of the whole country, I feel it to be my duty to sieze upon this compromise as the best that could be obtained amidst the conflicting interests, and to insist upon it as a final settlement to be adhered to by all who desire the welfare of the country. A year has now elapsed since that recommendation was made, to that recommendation I still adhere, and I congratulate you and the country in acquiesence of these measures of peace which has been exhibited in all parts of the Republic, and not only the acquiesence in these measures but the spirit of conciliation which has been manifested in all parts of the country, have removed all doubts and uncertainties in the midst of thousands of good men concerning the durability of our popular institutions and given renewed assurance that our liberties, and Union may subsist together for the benefit of this and all succeeding generations.

MILLARD FILLMORE.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 2, 1851.

SLEEPY.—A writer says that women require more sleep than men, and farmers less than those engaged in almost any other occupation. Editors, reporters, and doctors need no sleep at all. Lawyers can sleep as much as they please, and thus keep out of mischief. Clergymen can sleep twelve hours out of twenty-four, and can put their parish to sleep once a week.

Late Elections.

WISCONSIN.—In this State the whigs and free-soilers united and the result is the election of the coalition ticket, with the exception of Lieut. Governor. It is thought that Burnes the Democratic candidate is elected.

OHIO.—Wood (Dem.) has a majority of 26,000 over Vinton (Whig) and 9,000 over Vinton, and Lewis (Abolitionist) combined. The Democrats have elected all the State officers and about two thirds of the Legislature. Three cheers for the Buck-eye.

VIRGINIA.—The new Constitution has been been adopted by an almost unanimous vote. The Democrats have carried the State by nearly the same majority. Of the fifteen members of Congress they have secured thir teen!

MARYLAND.—The Democratic candidate Comptroller is elected 2000 majority. On joint ballot in the Legislature the Democrats will have two majority.

ILLINOIS.—The election in this State was on the Bank Law, passed by the last Legislature, which proposed the free banking system after the manner of New York. It appears from all the returns that the Law is adopted by about 15,000 majority!

LOUISIANA.—The election was for members of Congress, Legislature and County offices. Full returns have not been received, but it appears that the Democracy have generally triumphed.

MISSISSIPPI.—The Union ticket has succeeded by about——majority. Foote fell far behind his ticket, obtaining but a small majority over Davis.

MASSACHUSETTS.—It does not yet appear which party has succeeded in this State, but the probability is there will be no election of Governor by the people. The Legislature is near a tie. There are some vacancies to fill, but it is probable Winthrop (Whig) will be elected.

New and Dangerous Counterfeit.

Twenties on the States Bank of Ohio made their first appearance yesterday, which, from their general character, are well calculated to deceive. They are fac-similes of the genuine plate, coarsely engraved; filled up and signatures well executed. Two that were offered at Clark's Banking House, were on the Exchange Branch, Columbus, and Farmer's Branch, Mansfield. Those who are not good judges of engraving, are advised to refuse all 20's of State Bank of Ohio.

One of the letter-writers from this City enlightens his readers at the North with a story that the Postmaster General, by a late decision, authorizes members of Congress to frank letters to their destination in any foreign country, and that such decision is contrary to a former decision of the Department. Upon inquiry at the General Post Office, we learn that there is not the slightest foundation for such a statement.

Franked letters to England or other foreign countries; transmitted under our postal treaty with Great Britain, are chargeable as unpaid letters with the full rate of inland, sea, and foreign postage.—[Washington Republic.

New and Fatal Disease.

The Paris Correspondent of the Republican, says:

"A terrible and singular disease has just broken out in Gallicia, which defies all the efforts of the medical faculty to explain or cure. It is an epidemic, and has received the name of the "sleeping fever." The victim is suddenly seized, without any warning, with an irresistable desire to sleep; and this sleep lasts without interruption, four, five, and sometimes eight days, during which time the sleeper gives no sign of suffering. When he finally awakes, fever commences—lasts from sixteen to twenty hours, and ends in death. Two or three eminent French physicians have just left for Poland, in order to study this new disease."

Java Coffee Raised In North Carolina.

The editor of the Milton (N. C.) Chronicle was recently shown a parcel of Java Coffee, fully matured, that grew in Dr. John T. Garland's yard, about a mile from that town. It looked as natural as the imported article. The shrub that produced this Coffee is but two years old, and bears prolifically. The tree sprouted from a grain of Coffee which was planted on the north side of the house.

Kossuth to the United States Government.

The Washington Correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says in his letter of the 11th inst:

A letter has been received from Kossuth by this Government, which is probably of a similar tenor to that reported as received from him by the Mayor of New York. It is evident that Kossuth has not quarreled with the officers of the Mississippi, and that he left her because he was desirous of visiting England. He will visit the United States and spend two or three months. He does not and never did propose to settle here, at least at present, but he sends hither his comrades, who are, no doubt, to be permanent settlers.

A MUSS IN MINNESOTA.—On the organization of the Territory, Aaron Goodrich was appointed by President Taylor, Chief Justice of Minnesota. He was removed by President Fillmore a few weeks ago, and a Mr. Fuller, of Alabama, New York, appointed to fill his place. Judge Goodrich, however, has concluded that the President had no power to remove him, and avows his determination to hold his courts as usual, disregarding entirely the order of his removal. The Court is composed of three Judges, and it has not transpired whether the other two will recognize Goodrich or Fuller as the Chief Justice. On the whole they are likely to have a lively time in Minnesota.—[Adventure.

POETRY.

The following elegant and admirable production is the best declaration of woman's right's we have seen. We propose that it be recited in the next Woman's Rights Convention held in the North. The soul of a true woman and the inspiration of a true poet are her's:

Woman's Rights.

BY MRS. N. F. LASALLE.

It is her right to watch beside
The bed of sickness and of pain,
And when the head almost despairs,
To whisper hopes of health again.

Her right, to make the hearth-stone glad,
With gentle words and cheerful smile;
And when man is with care oppressed,
His wearied spirit to beguile.

It is her right to train her sons
So they may Senate chambers grace—
Thus, is she with more honor crown'd
Than if herself had fill'd the place.

It is her right to be admir'd,
By every generous, manly heart,
When with true dignity and grace,
She acteth well a woman's part.

She hath a dearer right than this:
To be in one true heart enshrined—
Who, though the world may all forsake,
Will cherish still, and still be kind.

And there is yet a higher right,
Which, also, is to woman given;
T'is hers to teach the infant mind
Those truth's divine, which came from heaven.

What would she more, than to perform,
On earth, life's holiest, sweetest tasks?
When you a perfect woman find,
No other rights than these, she asks.

WORK.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Attend, oh Man,
Uplift the banner of thy kind,
Advance the ministry of mind,
The mountain height is free to climb,
Toil on—MAN's heritage is TIME!
Toil on!

Work on and win:—
Life without work is unenjoyed;
The happiest are the best employed!—
Work moves and moulds the mightiest birth?
And grasps the destinies of earth!
Work on!

Work sows the seed;
Even the rock may yeild its flower,—
No lot so hard, but human power,
Exerted to one end and aim,
May conquer fate, and capture fame!
Press on!

Press onward still;
In nature's centre lives the fire
That slow, though sure, doth yet aspire:
Through fathoms deep of mould and clay
It splits the rocks that bar its way!
Press on!

If nature then
Lay tame beneath her weight of earth,
When would her hidden fire know birth?
Thus Man, through granite Fate, must find
The path—the upward path—of Mind!
Work on!

Pause not in fear:
Preach no desponding, servile view,—
Whate'er thou will'st thy WILL may do!
Strengthen each manly nerve to bend
Truth's bow, and bid its shaft ascend!
Toil on!

Be firm of heart;
By fusion of nanumbered years
A Continent its vastness rears!
A drop, 'tis said, through flint will wear;
Toil on, and nature's conquest share!
Toil on!

Within thyself
Bright morn, and noon, and night succeed;
Power, feeling, passion, thought and deed;
Harmonious beauty prompts thy breast,—
Things angels love, and God hath blest!
Work on!

Work on and win!
Shall light from nature's depths arise,
And thou, whose mind can grasp the skies,
Sit down with fate, and idly rail?—
No—onward! Let the Truth prevail!
Work on!

The steamer Daniel Webster arrived this evening from San Juan de Nicaragua, bringing dates from San Francisco, to the 15th October and about 400 passengers; she brings $117.000 on freight, and about $500,000 in the hands of passengers. She sailed from San Juan on the 16th of November, with passengers from San Francisco, brought down by the steamers Independence and North America.

The Daniel Webster, with steamer Central America in tow, made the passage from New York in twelve and a half days to San Juan. The Central America experienced much trouble in getting over the shoals at the mouth of the river but finally succeeded and from thence passed up the river without difficulty.

The mining intelligence by this arrival is of the most satisfactory character; the weather has been most favorable, and the yield of gold from the different sections of the mining regions is steadily on the increase.

The steamer California sailed from San Francisco for Panama on the 15th with the mails, and $1,900,000 on freight and about 200 passengers. Messrs. Adams & Co., shipped about half a million of gold by the California.

Since the sessation from duty of the vigilance committee, San Francisco has become crowded with numerous bands of desperate characters, and some of the papers are strongly and earnestly appealing to the committee to set to work again.

The project of steam communication between San Francisco and the Sandwich Islands, was likely very soon to be carried into effect. Mr. S. Woodworth was spoken of to command the first ship.

The United States Sloop of War Vincennes, Commander W. L. Hudson, left San Francisco on the 13th October, on a cruse to the Southward and to the Sandwich Islands.

The steamer Miner was burned at Sacramento on the 15th October. Captain Clark and one of the firemen were badly burned, and a passenger named D. Brown, was burned to death.

"Do you see that meetinghouse, Jimmy?"
"Yes," said Jimmy, "I do"
"Now," says Pat, "just take a squint at it through my spy-glass, and it will be so nigh to ye that you can hear the organ play."

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, Oct. 6, 1851.

SIR:—The President has learned from the newspapers, with the deepest regret, that a disgraceful outrage has recently been committed by a lawless mob, who have by force rescued a fugitive from labor from the custody of the Marshal, thereby resisting the execution of legal process and setting the law at defiance. He hopes that the statements respecting the occurrence are exaggerated, especially as it took place at your residence, and no communication on the subject has been received from you. But whatever may have been the extent of the outrage, he expects that no effort will be spared, on your part and that of the Marshal, to bring the guilty offenders to justice. The supremacy of the laws must be maintained, at every hazard and at any sacrifice. Men whose sworn duty it is to execute them must be protected and sustained in the discharge of that duty.

I cannot doubt that the great majority of your citizens are loyal to the Constitution, and that they will aid the proper officers in bringing to justice those who have wantonly and wickedly violated the most sacred duty of a citizen, in a free Republic, by setting an example which, if followed, must endanger the life of every officer charged with the execution of the laws.

I am, sir, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant.
(Signed) J. J. CRITTENDEN,
Acting Secretary.

To James R. Lawrence, Esq., Attorney of the United States for the Northern District of New York, Syracuse.

FROM OREGON.—The mail steamer Columbia arrived San Francisco on the 14th, bringing $45,000 in gold, and forty-five passengers.

The Indians were continuing their depredations upon emigrant trains and the Frontier settlements. Much excitement and alarm prevailed. Jeremiah Ryan, of Maryland, with six others, had been murdered by the Port Oxford Indians.

The Post Office Department at Washington has given notice that whenever satisfactory proof is furnished that the labors of a Postmaster have been increased and his commissions reduced by the operations of the Act of March 3d last, he shall be allowed and credited with extra compensation in accordance with rules hereafter to be adopted.

Mississippi.

It appears that the State of Mississippi is now without a Governor, or any person authorized to discharge the functions of that office. Upon the resignation of Governor Quitman, the office devolved upon Judge Quion, then President of the Senate. His senatorial term expired on the 4th inst., and according to his construction of the Constitution (in which he is sustained by many able lawyers) he could not act as Governor after his office of President of the Senate ceased. There is therefore an interregnum until the Governor elect shall be qualified. The worst of it is, that many of the courts are suspended on this account; as the offices of Sheriff have become vacant in many counties and the new sheriffs cannot act until their bonds shall have been approved by the acting Governor. No provision seems to exist for filling up either of these gaps.—[Adventure

California.

The returns have not been received from all the counties, but there is no doubt of the election of Bigler, (Dem.) for Governor by a majority of about 1.500. Messrs. Marshall and McCorkle have been elected to Congress by large majorities. The whole of the Democratic State ticket has been elected, and the Legislature, in both branches, is also Democratic. The inference from this would seem to favor the presumption that the next Legislature will elect a Democrat to represent the State in the United States Senate. The whole vote polled was about forty-five thousand.—[Missouri Statesman.

Mexico and Santa Anna.

By our latest advices from Mexico, we learn that there is a conspiracy formed for the restoration of Santa Anna and the overthrow of Arista's administration. This famous Chief remains at Trubaco, a town in New Grenada, but he is evidently waiting anxiously for the moment when he shall be called from his retirement by his active partizans in Mexico. Then we may look for another Pronunciamento, a triumphant ovation for the one-leged hero, and unless M. Arista is very wide awake, he will have some trouble to keep his head on his shoulders.—[Times.

Mining Intelligence.

There seems to be but little doubt as to the existence of valuable silver mines in California. We have from time to time heard of discoveries in various parts of the southern country, but the following account is sufficient to settle the question. Early in the present year the exploring expedition left Stockton, and we believe resulted in nothing tangible, although H. W. Wallace, of this city, showed us specimens from the region of the Four Creeks, where deposits were found in incalculable amount. It is a kind of black sulphurate of silver, is brittle, cellular, affording globulets of silver at the blow pipe; it is called by the Spaniards negrill, and is found in large masses in Peru and Mexico. The specimens we have seen have been of different degrees of richness, the amount of silver varying from ten to fifty in one hundred. The analyzation, by Moffat & Co., gave the following result; Silver in a ton weight of the ore, $206 40; gold, $27 90; lead, $15.—[Alta California, October 2d.

[By O'Reilly Eastern Line.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.

The editorial fraternity in this city will hold a meeting of its members, at La Favotte Hall, on Tuesday week, to devise suitable welcome, on their part, to ex-editor, as well as the ex-governor of Hungary, Louis Kossuth.

Presidential Caucusing.

"It is stated in the New York papers that the leading members of the Cabinet of the late President Polk are assembled in that city at this time, and engaged in concocting a scheme to defeat the movement in favor of Judge Douglas, of Illinois, for the Presidency, and to secure the nomination of Mr. Buchanan, of Pensylvania."

Speculations in regard to the next Presidency are multiplying in a rapidly progressive ratio as the time for another election approaches. It seems to be conceded that the President must be from a free State, and hence the bids making for the nomination to secure the South. Mr. Buchanan is in favor of extending the line of the Missouri Compromise to the Pacific. He will be a strong candidate in the Convention. Dallas bids stil higher. He wishes the Constitution changed so as to provide for the extension of slavery. Douglas prefers as his bait the annexation of more "sugar-growing States—that is, the further extension of Slavery by the seizure of Sierra Madre country. Gen. Houston has been talked of, but he is from the South, and it is the North's time now;—he stands no chance, unless Messrs. Donaldson of Texas, and Greer of Iowa," can bring the free soilers to his support, and kill off Walker of Wisconsin.

The Old Hunkers of the locofoco party prefer either Cass or Marcy. Gen. Cass will get a large vote in Convention, but the democracy will never run a man who has been so badly beaten as Gen. Cass was. Marcy will be supported by the New York delegates, and eventually by the Cass men. Mr. Buchanan has stated that if he does not receive the nomination himself, Gen. Wm. O. Butler, of Kentucky, will be the man. Judge Douglas is a new man, and sympathizing more directly with the people has a better chance with "Young America" than Buchanan.

Governor Brown, of Florida, has written a letter which has been published in many of the papers, and which points a curious contingency likely to occur in event of a non-election of President by the people. He thinks the election will test the permanency of the Union and that should it go to the House there will be a coalition of Southern Secessionists and Northern Abolitionists and Free Soilers to plot mischief against the Union. Nothing is more probable.

PROPOSED DIVISION OF OREGON.—A movement has lately been set on foot by the settlers in Oregon Territory, which has for its objection the organization of a seperate Territorial Government, for that portion which lies to the north of the Columbia river. It is to be called the Columbia Territory, and throughout its vast extent is well adapted to agriculture, commerce and manufacturing. The total absence of all municipal law and civil officers, the great distance from the seat of Government, and the isolated situation of this part of the Territory therefrom, and many other reasons, are urged as to the propriety of the organization of a seperate Territorial Government. For the promotion of this object a Convention of twenty-five delegates assembled at Carolitz, Lewis county, on the 29th of August, and after discussing the matter, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

That a committee of three be appointed by the President of the convention to prepare a suitable memorial on that subject to Congress, and that the same be forwarded to the Delegate in Congress from Oregon Territory, requesting him to use his influence to procure the organization of a seperate Territorial Government.

Previous to the session of the Convention a committee on districts and counties having been appointied, the territory north of the Columbia river was divided into twelve counties, with well prescribed boundaries. The Convention is to meet again at Olympia some time about the middle of next May, there to form a State Convention, preparatory to asking admission into the Union as one of the States thereof, provided that Congress has not at that time organized a Territorial Government.—[National Intelligencer.

Oregon Emigrants.

The Oregon Spectator, of September 2d, notices the arrival of some forty or fifty wagons, mostly with families and says the new comers are striking out in every direction on the look out for their portion of the unclaimed soil. The Spectator of September 23d, says:

The immigrants are coming in rapidly, though the late storm seriously retarded their progress through the mountains. Snow fell in the cascades to the depth of eight or ten inches—a large quantity of water also fell, and the streams will not be likely to again get down to low water mark this season. The suffering from cold, and in a few instances from a lack of provisions, is represented to have been very great. Animals became so chilled as to be unable to proceed, and parties were frequently compelled to camp, and shield themselves from the storm in the best manner possible, until it abated or until relieved by assistance from this side.

Seven Hundred Cannon at One Depot in Boston Harbor.

For the defence of this port, and the supply of the United States Steamers and other vessels stationed here, or built or to be built in this quarter of the Country, we are told that there are deposited at the Navy yard at Charlestown not less than seven hundred Cannon. They are of the most improved model and description known to military men—have each been thoroughly tested and proved by the artillery officers and engineers of the General Government. Quite a number of them were cast at the Foundry at South Boston. Some of them cost $1,400 each, if not more. Were their average price, unmounted, not more than $300 each, the expenses of the whole would exceed $200,000.—[Boston Atlas.

BLUE MORTAR

St. Joseph, Missouri.

E. H. HAYCRAFT, having purchased the interest of Dr. J. B. HOWARD in the Drug Store of Haycraft & Howard, still continue the Drug business at the old stand where he will be much pleased to see all the former customers of the house.

He wishes it to be distinctly understood that he will sell as cheap as good articles in his line can be sold in Upper Missouri; and if an article is not as is represented it may be returned.

As all of his sales are made for cash in hand he can afford to sell very low, and he invites the attention of his customers to this particular fact.

He is the wholesale agent for JOHN BULL'S and S. P. TOWNSEND's SARSAPARILLA. Receiving his supplies directly from the Proprietor's, and can furnish them at St. Louis Wholesale prices, thus saving the expense of freight, and risk in transportation.

The celebrated Mexican Mustang Liniment is also offered by the dozen or gross at the wholesale rates.

Remember the original "Mammoth Blue Mortar," on the West side of Main street.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned havin been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

References.—Messrs. R. C. Wetmore & Co., N. Y. City; Dr. F. Merryweather, Cinn. Ohio; Messrs. Bacon & Hyde, William North, and Wolf & Hoppe, St. Louis, Mo.; Middleton & Riley, St. Joseph, Mo.; Major L. Bidamon, and William McLennan Esq., Nauvoo, Ill.; L. E. Johnson Esq., Keokuk, Iowa; J. C. Hall, Burlington, Iowa.

Terms.—Half cash advanced on all orders, and three per cent commission on all purchases.

Letters of inquiry, or containing orders, must be post paid to receive attention.

All order should specify the kind, and quantity, and quality, of articles; also at what time they will be required. J. E. JOHNSON.

CLAIMS! CLAIMS!!
IN THE BOYOU COUNTRY.

THE Mormon population of HARRIS GROVE wishing to emigrate in mass to the Salt Lake, next season offer to sell out their interest to this beautiful section of Iowa—consisting of 20 improvements, from 5 to 50 acres fenced and cultivated and from 160 to 320 in claims, well supplied with excellent water and timber, and one of the healthiest countries bordering on the Missouri. Proof—there is not a case of ague or fever in the whole settlement. This grove lies about 20 miles north of Kanesville, and on the direct route from Fort Desmoine to Council Bluffs on the Missouri river. We will sell this fall at cost of improvement. Also a part of the crop on the ground. They will take cattle, store goods and money in exchange.

Do not forget—HARRIS GROVE, where are already a number of other professors of religion settled. Come and see.

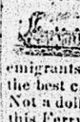
COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.



THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satisfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.

Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrrived at Sacramento this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, whilst on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

Awful Calamity! Loss of the Archer!!! Dreadful Destruction of Life!!!

Steamboat casualities of a serious character have happily been so few and far between on our upper rivers for the past six months, that we had reason to hope that the days of fearful disasters had passed, and that late improvments in machinery, and the master eye of strong practical officers would prove sufficient guards to avoid similar calamities in future. Such was, however, not to be; and the collision between the steamer Die Vernon and Archer on Thursday morning, in which the latter was borne down, with the loss of from twenty-eight to thirty-five unprepared souls, will long be remembered as among the most fearful of this class of accidents.

The Archer, commanded by Captain M. Rogers, started out on Wednesday evening with a good freight and a goodly list of deck passengers, for the Upper Mississippi. Between one and two on the following morning she reached the foot of Enterprize Island, where the Die Vernon was met coming down.

From all the statements which we hear it is extremely difficult to glean such facts as will give the whole affair in a satisfactory manner. The following are, however, as near the truth as we could arrive at; and we may hear state, that we learn it to be the intention of Captain Rodgers (who arrived in town last night,) to make a public statement.

At the head of the Island, the bell of the "Die Vernon" was struck twice, a signal to the Archer to take the outside station—the channel at this point being narrow—which signal the Archer unfortunately could not answer, from the fact that the bell-rope was hitched in some way among furniture, or some other kind of freight on deck. In this dilemna, with the descending boat coming on them, the Archer was made to take the shore or upper bar to avoid a collision and at this time the Die Vernon struck her amidships on the larboard side, crashing through her guards and hull.

One of our informants states that the Die Vernon at the moment of striking, was backing water, but was borne headlong on by the rapid current and her heavy weight. Had she been under full head of steam she must, according to his opinion, have passed right over her. The passengers, chiefly comprised of emigrants to Iowa and Illinois, were sleeping on the boiler deck and engine room, and of some forty or fifty, together with ten of the deck hands, at least twenty-eight or thirty were either crushed by the collision or drowned.

The Archer sunk in about twenty minutes to her cabin floor; but the Die Vernon suffered but little loss and came on to the city. The books of the Archer were unfortunately lost, and the names of the persons lost are at present unknown. The following are however known to have been on board as deck passengers: James Smyers, Sen.; Jane Smyers, Mary Smyers, Caroline Smyers; Susan Dick; James Symers, Jr.; Margaret Ann Symers; Sarah Smyers; Ellen Symers; an American family, and an Irish family, comprising fourteen persons, with some four or five other passengers, are lost. —[Organ and Reveille.

Terrible Disaster—Many Lives Lost.

We learn from the Cincinnati Commercial that three flat boats, loaded with coal, sunk in the Ohio River below Portsmouth, on the night of the 20th inst., and that only one person of the crew (twelve in number) was saved. The night was of pitchy darkness; the winds blowing, the river rough, and the boats in the middle of the stream. Their voices were heard above the howling winds and dashing waves, crying for help, but they were beyond the reach of aid. Not knowing how to swim, and being strangled with waves and confused with darkness they soon perished. One man saw a light on the shore, and by straining every nerve in his body, reached the shore in safety. He was the only survivor.

A Greater Calamity.

It is reported that on the same night, while nine coal boats lashed together, were descending between Portsmouth and Guyandotte, the storm raged with such violence that it shook the bottoms loose, and with their entire loads sunk with a tremendous noise. Forty-four persons were carried in an instant to a watery grave. Six only escaped, but were so cold and fatigued with over exertion that they may not recover. The scene must have been one of wild and terrific anguish. To hear the strangled screams of so many asking for assistance is fearful and heart rending. We earnestly hope that the report may prove untrue, for the confirmation of such an appalling occurrence would carry grief and dispair to the hearts of many families.—[Organ and Reveille,

The Mormons.

We learn from the Los Angeles (Cal.) Star that the Mormons of California have made a contract for the purchase of a place called San Barnardino. Twenty-five thousand dollars was paid down; the balance, of $77,000 is to be paid in two equal annual installments. San Barnardino contains within its boundaries more than eighty thousand acres of excellent land, a great part of which can be irrigated, the Santa Anna river runs through it furnishing a large and unfailing supply of pure water, having excellent mill cites. The mountains near are covered with pine, sufficient to supply with lumber all Southern California for years. The improvements to be immediately made will be of great benefit to the country. This settlement commands the Cajon Pass, and will rotect the valley from further Indian incursions.—[N. O. Pic.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21, 1851.

Gen. Foote is expected in New York in a day or two. His march thence to Washington will be an uninterrupted triumph. Next to Kossuth no living man has battled harder for the maintenance of free and liberal institutions than he; and no man has stronger claims on the gratitude, not only of the people of this country, but of all men who look to the government of the United States as the standard bearer of national freedom throughout the world.

Members, are fast coming in, and the Speakership is the subject of living conversation. Some of the unterrified democracy evince a strong predilection in favor of George W. Jones, of Tennessee, or, as an alternative, Gen. Richardson, the war-horse of Illinois. Both these gentlemen are in excellent trim for starting on a race and will not easily be beaten, even by old Kentucky.

Henry Clay—the Roman—is announced by his friends as a candidate for the Presidency, with or without his consent, and is expected here on Saturday. He will occupy his old quarters, Nos. 16 and 17 at the National Hotel.

Since it is known that Mr. Fillmore withdraws for the present, from the Presidental canvas, there is no reason to suppose that Mr. Webster will leave his post at the head of the State Department. This will cut off Mr. Crittenden, whose friends may have kept him ready to cover the rear.

An attempt will be made in the next Congress, to amend the settlement of the Boundary of Texas, and for organizing the Territory of New Mexico, with a view to get rid of the clause which appropriates five million of the money to be paid to Texas for the discharge of that portion of the public debt of that State for which her revenue was pledged, and for which the United States, by the act of annexation, became directly responsible. It is hardly to supposed however, Congress will distrub one of the compromise measures for the sole purpose of aiding Texas to defraud her creditors. The whole Democratic party is pledged to the compromise measures, one and all; and any meddling of them would necessarily loosen the security of all the rest. X.

Railroad to the Pacific.

The general demand for a Railroad communication with California, through our own territorities, seems to increasing. The unhealtiness of the passage across the Isthmus seems to be sufficiently established, while the great and permanent value of the gold discovery is becoming equally well settled.

Mr. Silas E. Burrows, a well known New York merchant, writing from San Fransisco to the Journal of Commerce, says that "California will furnish all the gold and silver required for the enterprize of her sister States." But he adds:

"A railroad, no matter what the expense, should at once be commenced to connect by gold, iron, steam, and electricity, our citizens in the Pacific States, with their parents on the shores of the Atlantic.

"How happy should we feel, after having encountered so much to reach California, if we could return, when our industry is rewarded, directly home, without being compelled to visit the sickly latitudes near the Equator, where the disease is contracted for which California is charged.

"I have never known a healthier climate, and those returning from the mines, look as if they had not known sickness.

"The countenances we see in New York, are, in my opinion, in many instances, acquired on the passage home. Heaven has given us a healthy climate, from the Atlantic to the shores of the Pacific, and we can travel on our own soil from sea to sea. We do not wish in traveling between our sister States, to be compelled for a great length of time to leave a healthy climate, and go many thousand miles out of our way, into a climate where sickness is sure to arrest the traveler. A railroad must be completed to connect forever our land of gold with the land of industry. Then our lovely daughters will be induced to visit California, and with the rose and the lily on their cheeks, make a Paradise of this Far West, the sons of which only require their society to become the most happiest and most enviable of mortals."

We trust that Missouri appreciates the importance of this Railway communication, and that her Senators and Representatives in Congress will do all in their power to promote it. Our neighbors in Iowa seem to be wide awake on this subject. A State Convention was held at Iowa City on the 15th of October, at which ex-Governor Lucas presided. Fifteen counties were represented. A memorial to Congress was adopted, asking for a grant of lands, to aid in the construction of a Railroad from Dubuque to Keokuk, and another from Davenport to Council Bluffs, on the Missouri. Hon. J. Grant, Gen. Van Antwerp, A. Emerson, G. S. Hampton, and B. Granger, were appointed special delegates to Washington, to urge upon Congress a compliance with their wishes.

New Post-offices have been established in Iowa, at Pleasant Hill, Van Buren County, John Purdom, P. M.; at Grey's Creek, Monroe County, John C. Church, P. M.; at Sweetland, Muscatine County, Joseph N. Harker, P. M.; at Panther Creek, Clayton County, E. C. Forbes, P. M.; at Fort Atkinson, Nebraska Territory, Samuel G. Mason, P. M. The Post-office at Richmond, Warren County, Iowa, has been discontinued.

Expense of the Church of England and other Systems.

At the present time, when the incomes of our bishops and dignataries of the Church occupy so much attention, the following comparative table of expense of Church-of-Englandism, and of Christianity in all other countries in the world, will be found interesting.

Name of Nation.	No. of hearers.	Total Expenditure in each Nation.
France, - - -	30,000,000	£1,050,000
United States, -	9,600,000	575,000
Spain, - -	11,000,000	1,100,000
Portugal, - -	3,000,000	300,000
Hungary—Catholics	400,000	320,000
Calvinists,	1,050,000	63,000
Lutherans,	560,000	26,000
Italy, - - -	19,281,000	770,000
Austria, - - -	35,000,000	970,000
Switzerland - -	1,750,000	67,000
Prussia, - -	10,536,000	527,000
German small States,	12,763,000	765,000
Holland, - -	2,000,000	160,000
Netherlands, - -	6,000,000	252,000
Denmark, - -	1,700,000	119,000
Sweden, - -	3,400,000	238,000
Russia—Greek Church	34,000,000	510,000
Catholics & Lutherans.	8,000,000	400,000
Christians in Turkey,	6,000,000	180,000
South America, -	15,000,000	450,000
Christians elsewhere,	5,000,000	150,000
	201,728,000	£7,999,000
England and Wales,	6,500,000	9,459,565

Thus it appears that the administration of Church-of-Englandism to 6,500,000 hearers, costs more than the administration of all other forms of Christianity in all parts of the world to 201,728,000 hearers. The £9,459,565, which is paid for the Church of England, is thus divided:—Archbishops and bishops, £297.115; 28 deans, £44.250; 61 archdeacons, £45.146; 26 chancellors, £12,844; 514 prebends and canons, £230,130; 530 precentors, succentors, and other members of collegiate and cathedral churches, £111,650; 2,886 aristocratic pluralists, holding two, three, and four livings, in all 7,037 livings, averaging £764 each, £5,379,430; 8,559 parochial clergy and curates £3,289,020.

"Herod Killing the Hebrew Children," Or Judge Birch on Mormonism!

OUR RELATION TO THE MORMONS.—In the course of Judge Birch's speech upon public affairs, on Saturday last, amongst the variety of interesting topics to which he alluded and discussed, not the least obsorbing and exciting one was the present and possible future relation of the Government and people of the United States to the Mormon population on the route to the Pacific. The speaker admitted the delicacy of the subject, and after alluding to the injustice there would be in holding men to hypocritical conclusions, hastily formed, and thrown out rather for reflection than for action proceeded to remark that were he in the public councils at Washington, he would so work as that, whilst the cup of forbearance was being drained, (it might be) by the obstinacy and disloyalty of this strange and infatuated people, there should be cultivated with the neighboring tribes of now savage and warlike Indians, the most amicable and paternal relations. These Indians remarked the speaker, are to be on the side of the Mormons, or on the side of their Great Father, the President, should the present insulting, oppressive, and defiant attitude of the Mormons assume an ultimate complexion which can be decided alone by the sword of extermination in which event it would be no infringement either of the principles of humanity, of the law of self-protection or of the code of nations, to regiment and brigade the natives of the country, and for their services in assisting us to break up a horde of marauders a thousand times more dangerous, give to them the houses and possessions they had thus helped to redeem from intolerance, audacity, and social impurity, at which even the semi-savage himself revolts! This was the only "indemnity" the Mormons would have to give for the expenses of such a war as they might provoke, and this perhaps was the best "security" which could be taken for the quiet possession of the whole country from the Missouri to the Pacific.—[Platte Argus.

Getting Economical.

The newspapers announce that the British Government will not fill the station of Minister, vacated at Washington by the departure of Mr. Bulwer, till some emergency shall arise requiring the presence of such a Representative. This may be profitably imitated by our Government. Why maintain all this diplomatic pomp and parade, at great expense, for no useful purpose, when, at this age, a British Minister can reach the United States in a few days? Of course our Government is bound by usage only to maintain the same grade of Ministers at the Court of London. In addition to this, we should not be surprised to see England totally abolishing her embassy to France, now that the sub-marine telegraph is in operation between the two countries. She has already reduced the salary from £10,000 to £8.000 sterling.—[Baltimore Sun.

A World's Fair at New York.

A proposal is made in the London papers over the signature of Edward Riddle, U. S. Commissioner, and the Austrian Commissioner, to transfer to New York the most attractive and valuable portion of the articles which have been exhibited in the Crystal Palace; and it is stated that a company has been formed, represented in Europe by these two gentlemen, to whom the entire management has been entrusted. It is also stated that a large building will be erected in New York, which will be made a bounded warehouse for the reception of goods from all countries, and that the proposed exhibition will be open on the 15th of April, next, about six months from this date, and continue open for a period of fourth months.

Eloquent Philanthropy.

Judge Niles recently made a most eloquent speech in the Connecticut Convention in favor of exempting the homestead. We clip the following:

"It may be thought unsuited to the place and occasion to refer to the recollections and associations which make up the crowning felicities of life. I am not ashamed to own that my feelings are enlisted no less than my understanding is convinced. I go for it because it is right in itself, right against all appeals to prejudice and passion and the love of gain, right against the world.

The home where the ivy and the woodbine have been taught to twine by tender hands and loving hearts—where the chidren were born and some of them have died—where the aged parents still remain, and where the sons and daughters return from their distant emigration to pay their tribute of filial homage—the home where all that is sacred in life, in death, and in religion, centres—that home I would protect, not by unstable laws enacted to-day and repealed to-morrow, but by constitutional provisions immutable as truth and justice, and enduring as the everlasting hills."

THE SUBMARINE BOAT.—This novel affair is built of strong boiler iron, and is 10 feet in diameter, and 30 feet in length, while on the outside are fixed a number of shelves, which work on hinges, and upon these ballast is placed to lower the boat to the bottom of the sea. The inside is divided into two compartments, and the latter part of the boat is filled with water to keep it down when sunk. It is also fitted with a propeller, which worked by hand, and used to move it gently along the bed of the Ocean, as may be required during the operations of a survey. According to the best calculation, the boat will remain under water for seven hours, without any supply of air more than what it receives before descending, and this is purified and re-purified by passing through valves and cells containing chemical preparations for that purpose. While the boat is under water a telegraphic communication is kept up with a vessel stationed on the surface, and when it is necessary to ascend, the ballast is thrown from the shelves outside the the boat, and if necessary the water is pumped out of the after compartment, and it rises, at the rate of thirty feet in seven seconds. The machine is intended to be used in the pearl fisheries, and will be shipped to Panama in a short time. It is intended, if arrangements can be made to give it a trial before leaving New York, as it is the first of the kind which has been built, and to employ it in sinking a submarine telegraph line, between Brooklyn and New York.—[N. Y. Tribune.

A Prophecy.

The St Louis Union has declared itself several times in favor of JAMES BUCHANAN, of Pennsylvania, as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Now we undertake to prediet that the proprietor will be compelled by his lord and master, who has ruled him with a rod of iron, whilst treating him with supreme contempt personally, to declare his preference for another candidate. We are so much more in the confidence of his master than he is, that we know what his views are upon the subject, and know what he will require of his servants. Verily he is a hard task-master to serve.—[St. Louis Times.

The London corespondent of the New York Times, gives the following account of the disposition to be made of the surplus fund of the great exhibition:

"It is at length decided what is to be done with the surplus funds arising from the great exhibition. A "National Meseum of industry," is to be the abiding result of this grand event, to be formed and supported by the interest of the surplus, which will be funded for that purpose. Half a million of money, the estimated balance after paying all expenses, will be no bad basis for the proposed Museum, towards which by the way, there are already large contributions by the foreign exhibitors. There is to be a college, with professors, in connection with this industrial collection, which, if managed properly, promises to confer more substantial benefit to the country than the "Exhibition," from which it originates."

Affairs in China.

According to the latest accounts the rebellion in China still gains ground. The Imperial Governor in Kwang si is put to his trumps, and is about to give up in despair. We have several reports of the merciless manner in which the rebels treat the Imperialists when they once fall into their hands. A detachment of five hundred men sent from Heang-Shan, together with three hundred men from Kwei-lin-foo, were enticed into an ambuscade, and out of the five hundred Heang-Shan men only ten escaped to return to their homes alive. Recently, falling in with a commissary General, with a large quantity of grain, they decapitated him and made booty of the whole of the stores he was conveying. The Canton people haue quite disabused themselves of the idea that the Tartar General possess any greater courage than people of their own race.—[N. O. Pic.

New Invention.

A Mr. Chas. Denton, of Peoria, Illinois, has invented a new Reaping Machine that cuts grain as well "where it is as where it aint." It is said to be far superior to M'Cormick's, as it cuts the grain "whether standin or lodged, green or dry, on rough or smooth ground, and lays it in bundles." Hurrah for another World's Fair,

Never purchase love or friendship by gifts; for it will vanish as the morning dew.

Letter from Elder G. P. Dykes.

Persecution of the Saints in Aalborg—Great increase of the Church in Denmark, upwards of sixty baptized in two months—Conversions in Schleswig—Visit to England and departure for Hamburgh.

HAMBURGH, COMMERCIAL HOTEL,
October 14th, 1851.

DEAR BROTHER RICHARDS:—Desiring to keep you informed of the history of the times with me, I write you again. In my last, written you from Schleswig, on the 4th of May, I stated I had just began there when I received a letter from brother Snow, directing me to come immediately to Copenhagen, and accompany him to the London conference in June last, which I did; but my stay in England was very short, as I felt deeply pressed in spirit to return to the field of my labors in Denmark; accordingly I left London for Lowestoff, intending to sail from thence to Hjerting, but the steamer after being delayed a few days, over her appointed time, came in at last in a crippled state, and had to go London Docks before she could return, so I was under the necessity of returning to London again to get a passage. From thence I sailed on the 24th of June for Hamburgh, where I landed on the morning of the 27th, and proceeded immediately on my journey over land, and by traveling day and night, I was enabled to reach the City of Aalborg, my former field of labor, but, indeed, too late to save the little flock from a very heavy blow; for a spirit of persecution had arisen, and the mob had assembled and broken the windows of the Saints' meeting house, and demolished all the furniture within; and from thence proceeded from house to house, they broke the windows of nearly all the dwelling houses of the Saints in the City, while the civil authorities looked on with seeming indifference.

In a few days after these things occurred, I entered the city, and had not heard a word of them till I stood by the side of the house where I had so often met with the Saints, and where I had preached the word to sinners; but I leave you to judge of my feelings, when, instead of meeting the joyful smiles of beloved Saints, I saw the windows and furniture of the house broken to pieces, and no Saints to welcome me there, for they were not now privileged to appear in the streets without being grossly insulted and sometimes shamefully beaten.

While I was thus deeply pondering over these things, an officer approached and requested me to come immediately to the Mayor's office, which I did, and he peremptorily told me I had better leave the City forthwith, as he would not promise me protection from the mob for one hour. And as there was a steamer then at the wharf to sail that afternoon for Copenhagen, I went on board, but the mob hearing that I was in the city, began to gather, and some went to the Mayor's office to find me, but he told them he had me in prison. Others went to the ship, but the captain told them I had left and gone up into the city, and thus were they ranging about for me till the appointed hour for sailing, when I think there was more than a thousand people assembled on the beach. I was down in the cabin till we were fairly out of reach, when I came up on deck to see the sight, and being thus delivered I gave God the glory, and proceeded on our way, we touched at Hals, where we took on brother Jenson, the Presiding Elder, he having been obliged to flee from home to save his life, and the next day, the 1st of July, we landed in Copenhagen, to the great joy of the Saints as well as ourselves.

But now came the most arduous part of our duty; to guide the "Old Ship Zion" in such a storm, and sailing in strange waters required more than the wisdom of mortals; we therefore gave ourselves to much fasting and prayer, to obtain the Spirit to guide our councils under these dark and gloomy circumstances. Suffice it to say that our prayers were heard and our desires granted, and I must ever remember with pleasure the zeal and diligence of brother Forssgren on this occasion, as indeed on all others, and the strict obedience and prompt attention with which brother Hanson travelled from place to carry out the measures adopted in our councils; and thus by our united effort, the spirit of the mob was turned from the Saints, and division arose among themselves, so that on one occasion the soldiers had to be called out to still the tumult.

And now let me say, to the glory of God our Heavenly Father, that I here saw what I never saw before, that in so great a persecution every soul was saved alive, both temporally and spiritually, so that not one denied the faith in this difficulty.

The enemy not being satisfied with this effort to overthrow the Truth, raised opposition in another way, by sending in priests and other professors of religion to make disturbance in the midst of the congregations, while our Elders were holding forth, by asking questions on points of doctrine, &c. However, this did not last long, for on one occasion, when there was many people assembled, I was speaking on the first principles of the Gospel, and atonement for original sin by the sufferings of our Savior, the Spirit was upon me and I spoke in power, not sparing the Lutherian doctrine of "infant baptism," and when I closed I gave the privilege for remark if any one had any thing to say for or against what had been said, as I felt myself fully able to answer every question pertaining to the doctrine of the Saints, and to prove it by scripture, &c.; but every tongue was still, except of those who came forward and publicly acknowledged the truth of what they had heard that day, and desired to be united with us by baptism. The work continued to spread on the right and left, so that on brother Snow's return from England in August, he called a conference, in which the Church was fully organized, and the Elders and Priests appointed to their several fields of labor.

I left for Schleswig on the 2nd September, after spending two months and two days in Denmark during which time there was added to the Church about sixty souls, thirty of whom in Copenhagen, and the others in different parts of the kingdom by the native Elders' preaching. The whole Church in Denmark numbers, I think, over three hundred members. (The definite number I do not rightly recollect, as I have not the records with me.)

In Schleswig I found a great military excitement prevailing as the Austrians had stationed a very heavy army at Holstein, and even extending to the very frontier, leaving only a narrow bridge of about thirty yards between their outposts, and the sentinels of the Danish army. The towns and cities here being placed under marual law, I found it impossible to call a meeting of the people, indeed the citizens themselves were not allowed to be out at night after a certain hour without a passport, signed by the commanding general. But not being discouraged by a sight of the military, I determined to do what little I could, as my feelings are very warm towards the German people; yet another difficulty arose; the city was so closely guarded, and all having to be in-doors at the appointed time, that it was next to impossible to find an opportunity, to baptize those that should believe. However, I succeeded, and on the evening of the 15th September, 1851, and in the same waters where the first Christians were baptized, when the people were converted from Paganism, were the first Saints baptized in Germany into the new and everlasting covenant; and although there were but two baptized, yet it is laying the foundation of a good work, as there are many more there who who are believing our doctrine.

Finding it difficult to proceed in Shehleswig at present, and as the Danish government was in daily expectation of the Austrian troops being removed, I thought I would leave for a short time and go to England to see brother Taylor with reference to his intended mission to Hamburgh, which I did, and found him deeply engaged with his capacious soul for the good of England, France, and Germany; and while thus laboring for the spiritual salvation of nations he was not forgetting to bless the Saints temporally in Zion. According to his directions I have now come to this city to labor for a season under his wise counsels for the good of this people, hoping as I do that the day of my deliverance is soon at hand, when I shall be enabled to return to the bosom of my family, to remove them from the borders of Babylon (the Council Bluffs) to the vallies of the mountains, where they can rest in peace from the tumults of the world, and may it be according to the will of God in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Thus you have a sketch of the history of this, to me, interesting summer, and the kind dealing and protecting hand of God that have been extended to me, his weak and unworthy servant; and while kind heaven shall give me common intellect, must I remember it with the deepest gratitude to Him. And now I close by desiring the blessings of the everlasting God to rest upon all those who wish well to you and the cause of Zion generally.

Your humble and obedient servant.

G. PARKER DYKES.

Railroad Notice.

A meeting of the citizens of this place and vicinity was held in the Court House, on Tuesday evening last, to consider the propriety of organizing a company for the purpose of building the Davenport and Council Bluff railroad. Le Grand Byington, of Iowa City, being present was called upon, and stated that the friends of the road in the eastern part of the State, had organized a company, called the Davenport and Iowa City Railroad Company, and had made a preliminary survey, with the view of progressing with that part of the road at all events—and that they look to the people of centre and west to continue the road to the Missouri river. It was then resolved to organize a company here and an amount of stock being subscribed the stockholders adopted articles of corporation, and elected the following gentlemen officers for the ensuing year:

PRESIDENT—R. W. Sypher.
SECRETARY—Hoyt Sherman.
TREASURER—Jonathan Lyon.
DIRECTORS.

W. McKay,	P. M. Casady,
A. Y. Hull,	J. E. Jewett,
Le Grand Byington,	S. Sheladay.

The title the company have adopted is The Iowa City, Fort Des Moines and Council Bluff Railroad Company.—[Iowa State Journal.

Awful Calamity!—Forty-five Children killed!!—Sixty-three wounded!!!

A most shocking catastrope occurred on Thursday afternoon at Ward School No. 26, New York.

Miss Harrison the teacher, being taken suddenly with a fainting fit some of the children near her immediately cried for water—this cry was mistaken for that of fire, and the whole room resounded to the cry of fire! fire! The alarm was communicated to other rooms throughout the building. From all one general rush was made for the spiral stairs, which descended from the fourth story to the ground floor paved with flags. The banisters gave way, and hundreds of the terrified children were precipitated to the bottom, the fall killing and wounding a great many. The scene of distress and agony presented to the eyes of the distracted parents, as they gathered hastily to the spot, passes description. As accurately as could be ascertained in the alarm and cofusion of the hour, the number of killed and wounded is as stated above.

SPECIE MOVEMENTS.—The sum of $1.295,992 40, taken from New York on Wednesday for Liverpool, is said to be the largest amount ever taken from this country in one vessel.

Br. Holly and the Sentinel.

We presume that the able and talented Editor of the Sentinel will take no offence at the familiar manner in which we address him; or rather, speak of him. That our friends may not be misled by our application of the term brother to him,—and, that his friends may not discard him wholly, we feel bound in justice, and in honor to say, that though he possesses an inquiring mind, he has not yet been baptized; however pre-disposed he may be in favor of the Mormon cause.

Those delicate matters to which he alludes at the Valley of the Salt Lake, and in which he appears to feel more than ordinary interest, we are sorry to say, that we do not consider it our province to enlighten him upon. We have not been employed as an attorney in the case to prosecute or defend, and it becomes the profession to look a little after the fee, before we volunteer our services so far as to answer to the plea of "Guilty or Not Guilty." Our legal qualifications [illegible] money, and we do not like to be too lavish with our opinions and pleas without respect to an adequate compensation.

Feeling that we are rather a privileged character, having the special grant and permission to travel or live in any State of the Union with all the wives we have in the world, without even the fear of fines or imprisonments, we think that we owe a lasting gratitude to the "powers that be," for directing the course of legislation to suit, so exactly, our circumstances and condition. Privileged thus as we are, we would ask Brother Holly, a plain straight forward question: We do not wish the reading public to regard this as "solid matter," but liberally spaced and leaded, or in other words, that kind of Gas that Editors sometimes inhale and blow off at one another.

Who shows the lowest and most cowardly disposition, the man who, in the dark, secretly assassinates his neighbor, or he who, believing he has a justifiable cause, openly and in broad day light, shoots him down in the street before the eyes of all? The former shows acknowledged guilt, perfidy, and cowardice. The latter may be mistaken and may not be, in the cause or provocation; but he shows honor, sincerity, and a degree of high-mindedness that commands, at least a measure of respect, though he may or may not be justifiable in committing the deed. If the statements concerning Gov. Young's sixteen wives and fourteen young children be true, he walks or rides in broad daylight with them—is not ashamed of them, but honors & respects them. Contrast this conduct with that of some other men—even men in high places, who are looked up to as honorable men, even statesmen and philosophers, (and some [speak it lightly,] learned divines not excepted,) who may have many women, and keep them in a secret and dishonorable way! In this we may be mistaken; for by what we have heard, it is considered rather honorable and gallant. The Indians are taught that it is no crime to steal; but if they are caught at it, they are criminal indeed; but white folks who are honest, attach the same criminality to that offence whether the perpetrator be discovered or not. This latter principle is a fair illustration of the former. He that doeth good cometh to the light and walketh therein! but he that doeth evil prefers the dark because he is a child of darkness.

Suppose, Br. Holly, that you take the place of your devil, (and you know that lawyers and editors sometimes act in that capacity,) and in dipping up the ink, distributing it, and rolling it over the forms, you accidentally and unknowingly get a little daubed upon your face. By-and-by you look into the mirror or glass, and see yourself just as you are: you feel a little ashamed of your appearance, and resolve to wash at once. Well now, how do you know but that Heaven has raised up Brigham Young as a great mirror to reflect the dark and secret characters and conduct of thousands who affect outwardly to despise such things, but secretly practice all, and more than they accuse him of?

If this be so, may not the cause of virtue and righteousness receive liberal contributions and heavy accesations by the alleged vices and corruptions of Gov. Young, inducing many to look at themselves—sense their own depraved condition, and resolve to reform? We cannot see why he may not be as successful a preacher of righteousness in this way, as Paul was in another, when he said: "If the truth of God abound through my lie unto his glory, why am I thought an evil doer?" But perhaps the gentleman does not believe that "all things work for good;" and his taste may lead him to prefer the light of the picture without the shade to increase its beauty.

If the nerves of our brother Editor were so shocked as to cause him to drop his pen and turn away in disgust when thinking about Gov. Young's sixteen wives and fourteen children, what must he do when thinking about wiser and better men having a thousand wives perhaps, and children accordingly. Judging by the rule of proportion, we should suppose that he would not only drop his pen, but paper, hat, and press, and fly from christianity with that rapidity that would leave his shadow so far in the rear as to lose his track, and be found enquiring the way to its owner.

Why is it thought strange that we should be a Mormon? We are not the author of Mormonism. We have not bourne the root, but the root us. In our early childhood, we were left an orphan. We grew up to manhood, a stranger to a father's protection and to a mother's care; and for twenty-five years of our early life, we saw no one in whose veins flowed a drop of kindred blood that we know of; and few seemed to care for us, or take any interest in our welfare. In nature's garden we grew, a wild and uncultivated plant. But thanks to Him whose watchful eye catches the flight of every sparrow, and whose unobstructed vision counts every truant hair that plays upon the brow when fanned by the soft and balmy breath of evening! His Providence was over us. His hand guided our steps, and the angel of mercy moistened our path with sympathie's dew.

If we possess talent, energy, and a well-balanced mind, according to the complimentary notice which Br. Holly has generously given us, Mormonism has bequeathed to us that legacy. It found us at the foot of the hill, and if we have ascended at all, that is the car in which we have rode. If, therefore, Mormonism has taken us from nothing, and elevated us in the scale of intelligence to the height represented by the Editor of the Sentinel; what would it do for him if it should take him at the height to which he has already ascended? On the wings of faith, he might soon find himself soaring above the fogs and mists of error—above the clouds of gloom and darkness, defying the mountains of the ignorance of this world to cast their shadow athwart his celestial orbit, and proudly might he float on a sea of light to the haven of immortality.

If Abraham was guilty of polygamy, we are none the less anxious to be accounted his son—that we may be an heir according to the promise. If David, a man after God's own heart had wives and concubines without number, we offer it as no apology for rejecting his Psalms, his Root or his Offspring, or the bright and the Morning Star. If Solomon followed in the footsteps of his father, David in this respect, we are not disposed to deride him or to reject his wisdom. The Queen of the South was attracted by his greatness, and his posterity was greatly honored, by being the channel through which a Savior was given, even Christ the Lord! The name and memory of this truly wise King of Israel will be cherished while there is a foundation to lay or a cap stone to be brought forth.

If in Christ himself were fulfilled the words of Isaiah: "He shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands," the Christian world are not mistaken in their opinion. But how were they fulfilled? If, at the marriage of Cana of Gallilee, Jesus was the bridegroom, and took unto him Mary, Martha, and the other Mary whom Jesus loved, it shocks not our nerves Br. Holly. If there was not a familiarity and an attachment between the Savior and these women highly improper, only in the relation of husband and wife, then we have no sense of propriety, or of the characteristics of good and refined society. Wisely was it then concealed; but when the Savior poured out his soul unto death when nailed to the cross, he saw his seed or children; but who shall declare his generation? No one, if he had none to be declared. Notwithstanding this, which to many, is a new and strange feature in christianity, we are not disposed to mock at it, neither to reject salvation through the Virgin's Son. "Oh! fools, and slow of heart to believe all things that are written in the prophets and in the Psalms concerning Christ!"

But again; if all we hear about some of our law makers—our wise statesmen and politicians about having many women, and living with them in corruption, and even in unbelief of the correctness of their doings, be true, we accept it as no apology for rejecting or disrespecting the Government and laws of the United States. We should never dare to lay to the charge of some great men what we have heard them charge one another with: and if Brigham Young has sixteen wives and fourteen infant children, we accept it as no reason for rejecting Mormonism.

For this production, we may be regarded, by some, as a blasphemer against the truth—by others as a deluded fanatic, and by some as a strange comet visiting and crossing the orbits of the regular planets, portending evil and strange events. Be this as it may; Br. Hyde knows what he says, and is not lacking for reasons. But this is only his weakness and folly, and prays you to indulge him a little in his folly and weakness, and measure them by the rod of your wisdom and strength which, if you can do, then Br. Hyde may be foolish again, or possibly wise.

We propose making a bargain with Br. Holly; and entertaining the kindest and best of feelings towards him personally, we are not disposed to take any advantage in the trade whatever. Our propositions are these: If he will show us good reasons for rejecting Abraham, David and Solomon and their writing, (saying nothing of Christ,—his being a case not so generally established or admitted,) on account of their having more than one wife, without rejecting Christianity wholly: Or if he will show one good reason why we should reject the Government and laws of the United States, because it is so often admitted, if not known, that some of our great Statesmen are not the most scrupulous or conscientious in these matters: then we will reject Brigham Young and his writings, if he really has sixteen wives, or if he has more than one. But if he fails to produce to us these reasons, then he must come and be a Mormon along with us: But if he can do neither, then let him confess and acknowledge the corn; and say that Mormon folly and weakness are too potent for his [illegible] strength.

The foregoing being our weak side, we will now show a little of our strength. Though we have written as we have, if there can be one case found in the State of Iowa where a Mormon is living in adultry, fornication or licentiousness, then put the law in force against the offender. If any Mormon practices liscentiousness, considering himself at liberty to do so, by reason of anything that we have written, then let him wither like a dried reed. Those who are without, God Judgeth; and man may also, if they are guilty.

Taxes.

Almost the last hour has come, to pay taxes without extra expense, cost, &c. We would advise all concerned to pay over before the First of January, and save extra taxation.

Satisfied Mr. Argus;—reach your ☞ and take our hat.

Loyalty.

With us, this is no new subject. It is our pride and boast, that our people in this State have conducted themselves orderly, and have never, at any time, manifested any disloyalty to the State or Nation by word or by deed that we are aware of.

Every officer of the law is respected in his place; and if it is the last counsel that we ever give in any field where it is our right to give counsel to the Saints, that counsel is this: "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake." By this we do not wish to be understood to cast any reflections upon any other portion of the Church: But we pray God, our Heavenly Father to guide every Branch of His people in wisdom, in mercy, and in good-will. Let all the Saints over whom your humble servant is called to preside, observe these things, as they ever have done, and keep themselves unspotted from the world: then if trouble come, and persecution arise, it will be, not for ours, but for Christ's sake. And should any be persecuted unto death; remember that we go with clean papers into the presence of our God, where we shall reap the reward of well doing; and leave our persecutors to receive that reward which their works merit. The world now is a theatre, and happy is he who acts well his part, on the Stage.

To our Subscribers, Patrons, and Friends.

The time has now arrived when the pleasing duty is imposed upon us of tendering to you our sincere thanks and unfeigned gratitude for the generous and liberal support which the Guardian has received at your hands. It is now almost three years since the first issue; and from the success that has attended our enterprize, our vanity might lead us to make undeserved claims if the acts were not so apparent, that we live in a generous communality, composed of different religious creeds, and many of no creed at all;—most of whom have manifested their good-will towards the office by the patronage which they have extended to it. These characteristics are not confined to the people of Pottawatamie County, but they apply with equal truth to many people in the neighboring counties. Every State in the Union has contributed to second our exertions. Canada has not been far behind. Old England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, have manifested a wish to know how we get along. France, Italy, Denmark, and the East-Indies, have not withheld their anxieties, but to a certain extent, have manifested their good-will. Utah last, but by no means least, has taken a deep interest in the Guardian's success.

On our part, we have but one thing to regret; and that is, that our merit could not keep pace with the increase of our business. Yet we console ourself with the fact that we have done our best. [illegible] case, as yet, [illegible] hour behind the time: and though some of our foreign subscribers may not have received their papers by due course of mail, we are unwilling to own the fault or neglect to be ours. Order and system characterize the business of the office; and energy, correctness, fidelity, and despatch, the men employed to execute it. It is not impossible but that an omission may have been made at head quarters; but we are not conscious of any: and while the conducting and management of this office remain in its present hands, every possible attention will be given to the wishes and demands of our patrons.

The main landmarks, by which we have sought to steer our course, have been justice and equal rights: and it has been our aim and still shall be, to protect any and every man in his moral and legal interests irrespective of creed, color, or profession so far as it is reasonable and consistent. A strict observance of the laws of the State has been enforced with religious scrupulousness. Crimes has been suppressed, and rectitude not allowed to pass without an encouraging word. In our reproofs, we have sometimes been severe, yet not vindictive; and we have endeavored to temper our chastisements to the nature and magnitude of the offence. If in any case we have gone beyond this, it has been an error of the head and not of the heart; and should any feel themselves agrieved with us on this account, let them remember that faithful are the wounds of a friend while the kisses of an enemy are deceitful. Did we feel as well prepared to meet our God upon every other matter as upon this, the Sun never sat more calmly and serenely from the rim of a Western Sky, than we could pass from the verge of mortality through the shades of death to the presence of our Father and our God.

A paper is supposed to breathe, not only the spirit of its Editor, but also the spirit of the community where it is published: If this is true, and the Guardian has advocated just and correct principles, upright and legal conduct, doing to others as they would that others do to them, and this being the spirit of the Mormon community here: what virtue or credit do some of our Mills County folks expect to gain by their proceedings, or any other folks that follow in their steps? There is a natural season for fruit to ripen, and when it comes to maturity it will drop off itself. It may then be enjoyed with safety to the health and pleasure to the appetite. But when you see a man throwing clubs into a fruit tree, and beating off the green fruit, the first conclusion of him is, that he is a thief: for the owner who cares for the tree and for the fruit, will not do so. The untimely fruit thus beaten off is injurious to the health if eaten, and is very liable to set the teeth on edge. But when ripe, it resigns its hold on the parent stem at the latter end of the year.

This is the last number but two, to complete the third Volume; and our friends who may desire to renew their subscription to the next Volume, are hereby timely notified to signify their wishes to us, with the accompanying funds for the time. The paper will change hands most likely between now and the middle of May next, and most likely it will be published weekly after it changes hands. In the event of this change, the paper will be continued to subscribers just the same as though no alteration had taken place. Should subscribers want to remove from their present locations or homes before the term expires for which they have subscribed, by giving notice to the office by letter, or by verbal request, the paper can be mailed and sent to Salt Lake or to any other place to which the subscriber may desire to remove. In the event the paper should be published weekly, subscribers will receive it for a proportionate length of time, to the amount they have paid.

We trust that every friend and well-wisher to us, will consider that we have spent the last season on a trip to the Valley for the good of the cause, and our expences out were more than a thousand dollars cash, besides our time; and as this Winter and coming Spring will be the most important periods of the Church since its organization, every friend and well-wisher should take the Guardian and keep himself duly informed of the prospects and prosperity of the Church. Moreover all subscriptions paid in advance, will be so much pay towards the office when sold, as the amount due subscribers at the time the office may change hands, will be deducted from the price of sale, and secured to subscribers by the new Proprietor, in sending them their papers. Thus, all who are friends to this establishment, can now show their friendship by aiding in its sale, and showing a willingness to allow Br. Hyde to make good some of his losses and expenses by working hard for it.

There are many persons in our own vicinity whose duty it is to take the Guardian, that do not now take it. They claim to be strong in the faith, but if they were a little stronger in works, we should like it better. They may think, however, that it is cheaper to borrow the paper of their poor Brother than to take it and pay for it themselves. But we pass these things by, and ask a generous people to come nobly forward and make the Guardian "a strong man armed" on the Frontier, that can speak by the authority of truth, advocate your interests, bring purchasers for your property, secure trade to the country, and elevate the best outfitting post on the Frontier to the gaze and vision of all who want to go West.

Gratifying.

We have, of late, received many letters from distinguished gentlemen, expressing much regret at our contemplated removal from our present location, to the Vallies of the Western Mountains. That our labors have met the approval of many high-minded and honorable gentlemen, is gratifying to us to learn; and while the applause of virtuous and good men is very desirable and satisfactory; the approval of High Heaven is more to be sought and desired than that of all men on earth.

This number carries us out of the present year, 1851, and with its departure we would gladly forget every wrong and injury that may have been done us, and call to mind every kind word that has been spoken to us in any time of trouble or difficulty and every generous deed that has been done to us. On a close examination, we can see many places where, perhaps in moments of excitement, we might have done better than we have, and we may have injured some good, kind, and generous feelings: if so, we ask pardon and forgiveness: and if there is one case of this kind, and that individual will come to us, we will avoid no just or honorable principle to make him ample amends. We do hereby, before God and man, freely forgive all people who may have offended against us, if they will manifest repentance and go and sin no more. With the New Year, we would like to commence anew on a clean sheet; and we forgive, as we hope to be forgiven.

[illegible] 1850, we may be seperated for distant, perhaps to meet no more in this world. But in whatever place, nation, or country, a good and upright man may, in the order of Providence, be placed, he finds a field of usefulness. "Peace on earth, and good-will to man" is his motto, and in all the world, where he sees man, he sees the image of his Maker, and inasmuch as he does good unto one of the least of these, he does it unto his Savior and his Lord.

This year will now soon pass into chaos and oblivion, leaving only its shadow on the pages of history and upon the memory of its survivors. The Church to which we belong shares our confidence, our love, and our blessing: And although friend Holly of the Sentinel thinks we may be accounted rather heterodox by His Excellency, Gov. Young; we are by no means fearful of incurring his displeasure by publishing the article that he approves and copies, or any other equally good and true. We esteem and love our brethren in the West; and Gov. Young is not a man that cherishes one wish or desire to bind us to sanction a wrong, or to copy one improper example; neither have we any wish or design to do it. We love our brethren; and bless them, and humbly ask our Heavenly Father to guide their steps in wisdom, and enable them to do his will in all things. The office of "Peace Maker" is one that we covet. "Peace on earth and good-will to man," are what we should like to see ruling the destinies of all people.

With the passing year, we bequeath our good wishes to the Nation that gave us birth, asking the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, even the God of our Fathers, to guide the deliberations of our law makers, and the action of our Rulers in wisdom, in justice, in mercy, and in truth, upon every subject that may demand their attention.

We love the Mormons because they are willing to suffer any and every thing for their religion. No sacrifice is too great for them to offer. Hardship and suffering they are willing to pass through if it must needs be; and it is not impossible that one day, some of those severe articles against the Mormons may pierce their authors more keenly and severely than they ever have or can the Mormons. Though time may be short with many of us, eternity endures forever!

To all our patrons and friends we cordially wish, a little in advance, A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Holidays.

The season of recreation and and amusements is now at hand; and our young people, and old ones, also, perhaps, are anxious to participate in the festivities of the times.

The Council has, therfore, permitted, that civil and social parties may be had in every branch of the church in this region, to be conducted in all civility, kindness, and morality, under the management and charge of the authorities of the respective branches during the month of January. Each branch is to make, at least one feast and party for the poor of their branch, and as many more as their liberality will allow them. It is expected that those feasts for the poor will come behind in no good thing. It is furthermore expected, that a sin-offering will be made on these occasions, in the shape of provisions, clothing, or money, for the benefit of the poor and needy; and in the disbursement of these offerings, no respect to faith or creed will be paid: the only questions that will be asked, will be about the following: "Are you in want of help? and are you unable to help yourself?" All these parties are to be opened and closed with prayer. Thus the old and the young may go forth in the dance together, according to the scriptures. Our friends who do not belong to the Church are not forgotten, but are kindly invited to bring their offerings also, and thus secure the blessings of the poor, and perhaps you nor your children will ever lack for bread.

With regard to dancing schools about which we have been spoken to, we have only to say, that we have no special objections to their being taught; provided that you employ a teacher who is a devotedly praying man—a man who prays in his family—who sets a pious and godly example of morality, and uprightness—who avoids all loose company—whose precepts and examples are decidedly opposed to the use of spirituous liquors—even one whose whole being casts a frown upon every evil, and a smile on every good. When you find a man possessing these qualifications, we shall have no objections to his teaching dancing schools, IF HE WILL!

Guard Against the Small Pox.

DR. LUKE JOHNSON, of this town, has procured the genuine vaccine matter directly from his own cows by inoculation. He was requested to do so by a resolution of a public meeting held here on the subject. Pursuant to that resolution or request, he has been very fortunate in procuring the matter, which is safe, sure, and may unquestionably be relied on. Though there is no particular danger of Small Pox now; yet when the emigration season sets in, it may be brought here; and it is well to guard against it in season. We would advise all people to get vaccinated with the genuine matter, and have their children vaccinated also, and not trust to uncertain matter that has been modified by passing through many human systems till its power, as an antidote against the Small Pox, is lost. But when once vaccinated with fresh matter from the cow, it is an antidote for life if it works well.

Merit Rewarded.

We are glad to see the Hon. Fitz Henry Warren promoted from Second Assistant to First Assistant Post Master General. He seems towering up like the rock amidst the stormy, but receding waves.

This able and talented officer of the Government encountered a storm of abuse and opposition at the beginning; but perseverance and fidelity, which seldom fail to reward all who are governed by them in a good cause, have placed him beyond the reach of his enemies, and the tongue of slander aimed at him, only proclaims the vindictiveness and corruption of its possessor.

A Swindler.

Noah Miles, a merchant at Coolsville, in Mercer County, Mo., has just put out for Garden Grove in Iowa, the Mormon settlement,—having turned all his goods into money and left all his debts unpaid, even to printing and job work. This is the more aggravating, because he was doing a prosperous business. He came here from Nauvoo, and is undoubtedly fitting for the great Mormon gathering next year at Salt Lake. We turn him over to Br. Orson Hyde of the Kanesville Guardian.—[Brunswicker.

We clip the above from the Brunswicker, presuming that its Editor wished to confer upon us some direct honor in an indirect way. They call us, "Parson Editor," "Prophet Editor," and various other things. We see that they are inclined to "lay upon us the iniquity of all." We expect therefore, they will give us still a higher title by and by.

It is expected that a corporate body, employing a police, will hold out some show of payment for services rendered. Now this "Noah Miles" is turned over upon our hands. We have plenty just such without any more.

There used to be a Mormon settlement in Garden Grove: But the Mormons have sold out and are gone from there. Is this Noah Miles a Mormon, and has he fled to Garden Grove? Will some of our subscribers there who are not Mormons inform us by letter? Then we shall know if Messrs. "Brunswicker" and "Sentinel," have put us on the right track; or whether they want the Mormons to have the credit of the dishonorable acts of some graceless renegade of their own Church who may have fled where the Mormons once lived.

THE SENTINEL complains of a lack of Editorial courtesy in us for not giving him due credit for "Several" of his editorials transferred to our columns. He approves our taste in selecting, but complains because he has not sufficient credit.

Now Br. Holly, we are pleased at the charity you manifest towards us; and since reading your complaint, we have searched diligently over the columns of our last issue, and have failed to find one of your editorials, let alone "Several." It is possible, however, that we have overlooked them; and if Br. H. will point them out to us, he shall yet have "honor to whom honor." We do assure the Sentinel that if we have omitted giving him credit for any light emanating from him that illuminates our columns, it has been unintentional. Therefore in your next, point out these "Several" editorials of yours and you shall have due credit.

It may be possible that he claims the Message as editorials; if so, we must inform him that we copied that document from the Platte Argus, and gave President Fillmore credit for it. We received the Sentinel and Adventure Extra at the same time. For this, they both have our thanks. But we will not be particular, Br. Holly may take as much from the Guardian as we took from the Sentinel without credit, and thus balance. But we want him to be a little more particular in proof reading and correcting when he publishes our articles, than he was when transferring our article on the duties and powers of woman. But if he will be thus careless with our productions when we have done our best, we will not complain if he does not give us credit.

For the Guardian.

The Dying Scholar.

And I must leave this world of beauty,
For a secret voice is near,
Ever, ever, softly breathing,
Do not tremble, I am here.

Hopes I've cherished, fondly cherished,
And I've dreamed of pleasure bowers;
Friends, companions, linked around me,
Tasting too the joyful hours.

On my brow the fire is burning,
Faster, faster, grows my breath;
A coldness o'er my heart is stealing,
And it whispers I am death.

I am dying! I am dying!
For my eyes are growing dim;
And I hear the Angels crying,
Fear not, fear not trust.

Farewell Father! farewell Mother!
Soon my soul this world will quit;
But remember, there's another,
Where we all with joy will meet.

Farewell sisters! farewell brothers!
You the path of life must trod,
But when you forget all others,
Then your thoughts must turn to God.

Ode to "Mars."

In days of yore on history's page
Far back in Mythologic age
We learn this solem truth;
That "Mars," was then the God of War
And rude Bellona drove his Car
And slew both men and youth.

But modern times have changed his plans
He now with Pork and Feathers stands
Without a dime's expense;
His master saw with great surprize
And hushingly he closed his eyes
Not knowing the extent.

But many souls have felt the smart
Of this bold heathen's poisoned dart
Who always takes good toll;
Oh Gentiles! will you own this "Mars"
And pile on board his bloody cars
And dash through humble souls?

Will not this bloody God depart
And with Bellona make a start
For Hancock's gloomy shades;
Then look for aunt to fly from feet
And friends with coldness them to greet
And wish their debts all paid.

MINERVA.

Tone of the Press.

Many of the leading Journals in the States, treat the affairs of Utah in a candid and judicious manner. They express liberal feelings and sentiments: Yet there are some Journals, the views of which, are rather illiberal and severe. "The liberal man deviseth liberal things" and by his liberality shall he stand." We have a credit mark in reserve for those who wish to live and to let live.

Ice.—The Missouri River is now frozen over, and the Indians can cross at any point. They are now strolling about among us. Look out for them. They have killed several head of cattle on the rushes, as we heard yesterday, when up at North Pigeon Branch. Look to your stock, all concerned.

Doctor Evans, Surgeon Dentist, whose advertisement may be seen in another column, has arrived in our place, and comes to us recommended in a manner that leads us to believe him him well qualified to operate in the line of his profession.

Pursuant to previous notice, a meeting of that portion of the citizens of Kanesville, commonly denominated GENTILES, (in contradistinction to the MORMONS,) was held at the Bluff House, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 24, 1851. The meeting was called to order, by J. C. Mitchell, Esqr.

On motion, J. B. Stutsman, Esq., was called to the chair; and C. Voorhis, was appointed Secretary.

On motion of Gen. Brown, a committee of three was appointed, to draft resolutions expressive of the feelings of the meeting, to be reported when they should again meet, pursuant to adjournment.

The Chair appointed, H. D. Johnson, Esq., Arch'd. S. Bryant, Esq., and J. C. Mitchell, Esq., said Committee.

On motion, of Rev. Wm. Simpson, the meeting adjourned, to convene at the Court House, January 5th, 1852, at 4 o'clock, P. M.

Riot in Cincinnati.

The cabinet makers of Cincinnati are on a strike, and on Monday afternoon, some of them were engaged in a disgraceful riot. Madge's bedstead factory had reduced wages ten per cent until next spring, and a number of the hands continued to work under the reduction. The others endeavored to prevent and a mob of about four hundred appeared in front of the building, and assaulted it with brick bats and stones, breaking in the windows, &c. Mayor Taylor soon appeared on the ground with the police, and succeeded in suppressing the mob, after a most desperate fight, in which several watchmen were knocked down and severely injured, and several of the rioters wounded by pistol shots. Most of the rioters were Germans, and a number of the ringleaders were arrested.—[Louisville Courier.

From the last Frontier Guardian, we are led to infer that a disposition is manifested, on the part of some of the Gentiles of Iowa, to drive the Mormons from that State. We do not know that this is the fact, but if it is, it is to be deprecated. While the Mormons at Kanesville and elsewhere are peaceable and law abiding, they should not be molested. Mobocracy, except in extreme cases, should not be countenanced. The Mormons in this country should not suffer for the treasonable conduct of their brethren at Salt Lake. We think we speak the sentiments of the people of this community when we say that no countenance or aid will be extended from this section, to those who manifest hostile purposes toward the people of Kanesville, as long as they respect and obey the laws of the land.—[Platte Argus.

From the N. O. Bulletin, 19th.

Later from the Rio Grande--Failure of the Insurgent Movement.

By the arrival of the steamship Fanny, from Brazos Santiago, we have the Brownsville Rio Bravo of the 5th and 12th inst.

The report that the siege of Matamoros has been raised is confirmed. The Rio Bravo, of the 5th, announces the fact. That paper is in the interest of the insurgents. It states that Carvajal had 800 men under his command, and a six pounder, and that Avalos, the Mexican commander in Matamoros, had a force of about 600 men, sustained by nine pieces of artillery. Five companies of American volunteers, aided by a portion of the Reynosa, Mier, and Guerrero battallions, commanded by Col. Ford, made an assault on Avalos' position, and reached to within a few houses of the main plaza of the City. The same night, by order of Carvajal, for some reason unknown, they were withdrawn from their advantageous position. This movement was followed by a succession of skirmishes, for seven or eight days. On the morning of the 1st inst., Carvajal ordered a retreat. The Mexicans were in the advance, and a company of American volunteers, under the command of Capt. Walker, formed the rear guard. The Mexicans had got some four miles in advance of the rear guard, when the latter were attacked by a body of Avalos' cavalry, commanded by Col. Portilla. The latter were repulsed with considerable loss. Carvajal and his Mexicans proceeded up the river, and left Walker and his rearguard to bear the brunt and defend his rear.

The Rio Bravo adds:

"For the present Carvajal's forces are dispersed, and can only be re-organized at Camargo, or some other internal point, to resist the forces of the Central Government.

"Vigorous measures have been taken to re-unite and re-animate the scattered troops in this vicinity. Col. Ford's wound is so far healed, as to justify the hope that he can put himself at their head in a few days. A junction can be easily formed with Gen. Carvajal, and a far stronger and better organized body of men, be held in readiness for action, than any which has yet appeared under the banner of the Liberating Army."

It appears that the hasty flight of Carvajal and his fugitive forces, when once they commenced to retreat, was caused by a report that a large re-inforcement for Avalos was about entering Matamoros, and that Carvajal and his followers would be surrounded and cut off.

In another paragraph, the Rio Bravo says that Carvajal had reached Reynosa, where he was strongly posted and daily receiving reinforcements.

The Rio Bravo of the 12th inst., has the following paragraphs:

"The forces of Gen. Carvajal are still at Reynosa, where they are daily receiving reinforcements. They will soon be completely organized and ready for the field. His auxiliary forces will be very numerous and efficient. As we stated in our last we believe the war has but just commenced. Up to this time Gen. Avalos has received the Ranchero forces of Canales only, numbering but about two hundred men. General Uragas, with a force of regulars, variously estimated at from four to fifteen hundred men, (probably the first number is nearest to the truth,) is shortly expected. He is now, as is believed, with part of his force, at Victoria, in the State of Tamaulipas.

Since writing the above, we learn by the steamer Comanche, that Gen. Carvajal has removed his forces to a point where he commands all the roads leading from Matamoros. He has also a force of Rangers in the near neighborhood of that City. There will be stirring events shortly.

When Gen. Carvajal retired from before the city of Matamoros, and a large portion of his auxiliary troops crossed the river, in addition to Capt. Walker's company, several American officers remained with him."

So it appears that the great body of the American volunteers left Carvajal when he commenced his retreat.

So much for the Rio Bravo's account of the present failure of the insurgent movement. We have a letter from Brownsville, but have not room for it to-day.

Storm on the Plains---One Man and 275 Mules Frozen.

We regret to learn, through a reliable source, that a Government train, numbering 275 mules, on its way into the States from Santa Fe, was out in a snow storm a short time since, about 40 or 50 miles beyond Council Grove. The stock were some that Col. Sumner was sending to the States to be wintered, in order to economise a little. Twenty-five of the wagons and fixtures were left at the Grove.

After the snow storm had somewhat abated as was supposed, three men started on in advance to the settlements, one of whom, when within five miles of the Grove, became so completely chilled that he was unable to proceed farther, and before help could be obtained, he was frozen to death. He was a passenger in the train, and from Kentucky. Mr. Withington at the Grove, has his effects, and has written to his friends.—[Independence Messenger.

A Cardinal in America.

ROME, Oct. 20th, 1851.

Archbishop Hughes is to wear the scarlet cap after all. His Grace has been made a Cardinal at last, in spite of all opposition. The important fact, was made known, as I am well assured, to the "congregation," on Friday the 10th inst., so that the effect of his late visit to the Holy See has been under estimated. The appointment is said to have been made, with that degree of truth I do not know, without the approbation, if not in face of the express protest of all the Roman Catholic Bishops in the United States, save one, and contrary to the opinion of Chief Justice Tauney. However, the fact may be, the statement is current here, and is generally believed.—[Cor. of the Newark Adv.

BANKS IN ILLINOIS.—Several applications have been made to the Auditor of the State of Illinois, for authority to do a banking business, under the law recently approved by the people of the State.

Thirty-Second Congress--First Session.

WASHINGTON, December 1st.

SENATE—The Senate was opened at 12 M., by an appropriate prayer by the Rev. Mr. Butler.

All the Senators present, except Mr. Bradbury, Hunter, Stockton, Mangun, Badger, Butler, Rhett, Jef. Davis, Soule, Downs, Bell, Jones of Tennessee, Douglas, Borland, Sebastian, Houston, Rusk.

The credentials of new members were then presented and the oath administered.

The cretificate of election of Mallory, as Senator from Florida, from 4th of March last, was presented by Mr. ——. A copy of the Journal of the Legislature of Florida, with a record of certain proceedings, which were considered as evidence of his having been elected, was also presented by ——. The two papers having been received, the Chair said it was a question for the Senate to decide, whether the papers entitled either to a seat.

Mr. Bright moved a reference of the papers to select committee, on which considerable debate ensued, in which Messrs. Clay, Foote, and others took part; finally Mr. Bright withdrew his motion, and Mr. Mallory was admitted to his seat. Subsequently the papers were referred to a committee to be selected to-morrow.

HOUSE.—The House met at 12 o'clock, 218 members were present.

Mr. Jones, of Tennessee, nominated Mr. Boyd, of Kentucky, as compromise candidate for Speaker, and as such should support him.

Mr. Campbell nominated Thadeus Stevens, Pennsylvania, as a good Whig.

Upon these nominations, a spirited debate ensued, involving the soundness of Whigs and Democrats upon the Compromise question.

The House then proceeded to ballot for Speaker. Lynn Boyd received 113 votes of 212 votes cast, and was declared elected; he was conducted to the Chair, and made a short speech.

Forney was elected Clerk.

Congress.

The organization of the House of Representatives, by the election of a Speaker and Clerk, was effected on Monday—the first day of the session.

LYNN BOYD, of Kentucky, a Democrat, was elected Speaker of the House, we presume, on the first ballot; and Col. FORNEY, of Pennsylvania, was elected Clerk of the House. Mr. Boyd is one of the oldest members of the House, and although a man of less than average ability, may yet make himself a useful presiding officer, on account of long familiarity with the rules of legislation, acquired as Chairman of the committee of the Whole; Of his disposition to do justice to the west, in the arrangement of Committees, we shall be better able to decide when we see them. He is opposed, if we mistake not, to all appropriations for the improvement of our Rivers and Harbors, by the General Government, and if this be so, a dangerous power has been placed in his hands.

Mr. Forney is a Buchannan man, and is elected after several struggles, in years past, to a very lucrative office.—[Republican.

RECEPTION OF KOSSUTH.—The city has been full of excitement from the dawn of day, in consequence of the preparations to receive the illustrious Kossuth. He landed at Castle Garden, about 1 o'clock, where he was received and welcomed by the Mayor, Mr. Kingsland. Kossuth replied in a speech of great eloquence. The procession moved at 2 o'clock; the city is in a perfect uproar. Kossuth, on his way up from Staten Island, was saluted by the fort, and by boats of every class, and by artillery on shore. The day was beautiful and the reception magnificient; there were not less than 200,000 persons in the streets; on coming up the bay in the steamer Vanderbelt, Kossuth expressed his delight at every thing he saw. The steamer passed up the north and down the east and back. The shipping, forts, heights and steamers were decorated with flags, and salutes were fired from the batteries and ships of war, while the air was filled with cheers. The ship of war, North Carolina, fired a salute as the steamer passed; it was responded to by cheers, and a salute from the steamer. The Williamsburg and Brooklyn piers were filled, and greeted the steamer with salutes. The military were upon the battery, and in the back ground there were not less than 100,000 persons. Kossuth, in attempting to speak in reply to the Mayor's cordial reception and welcome, after proceeding a few minutes, found it impossible to go on in consequence of the confusion, and desisted, promising his notes to the press. The procession moved up Broadway; the streets were filled with people, and the buildings covered with flags, and streamers, and mottoes; and as the procession passed, Kossuth was every where greeted with the waving of the handkerchiefs and deafening cheers from the multitude. The procession was three hours in passing, and by five o'clock it was all over and quiet.

Three hundred Germans serenade Kossuth to-night.

The True Star.

"There is one Star that will never disappoint the hope it awakens; its ray is never dimmed, and it knows no going down; its cheering light streams on through ages of tempest and change. Earth may be darkened, systems convulsed, planets shaken from spheres, but this star will still pour its steady, undiminished light. The eye that is turned to it will gladden in its tears; the countenance that it lights, sorrow can never wholly overcast; the footstep that falls in its radiance finds no gloom even at the portal of the grave"

Mob Law.

There is great excitement in Clarke county, Ill., growing out of the arrest of five or six persons suspected of belonging to a gang of thieves and scoundrels who have long infested that county. A few days since, Tim Burch, who had been for some months confined in jail on a charge of larceny, made his escape by the assistance of outsiders; and in their search for him, and for Bob Burch, the ringleader in the murder of Col. Davenport, at Rock Island, some years since, and who was known to be in the neighborhood, the "Vigilance Committe" fell upon the persons now in confinement. This Committee consists of two or three hundred persons, and they are said to have applied such arguments as to induce a confession of the place of concealment of Tim Burch, and his subsequent capture; and the Committe were in hot pursuit of Bob Burch. The town of Marshall as well as county, is said to be in a state of great excitement; and it is hoped that the capture of Burch, and a general clearing out of all his aiders and abetters will follow.

New Doctrine.

At the great dinner given to Kossuth by the Corporation of Southampton Mr. Croskey, American Consul at Liverpool, is reported to have said in reply to a complimentary toast of this country, alluding to the conduct of Russia, in interposing and crushing the struggle in Hungary: "The time would come, if it had not already come, when the United States would be forced into taking more than an interest in European politics."—[Miners' Express.

International Magazine.

The December number of this truly interesting work is on our table. It is embellished with good engravings of several of the most interesting features connected with Mormon history. We give the authors credit for the exact fac-simile of the Nauvoo Temple, and no doubt the whole is designed to represent the labors of an innocent, but persecuted people. Heretofore we have spoken in the highest terms of this ably conducted magazine, and we still feel to publicly acknowledge merit, irrespective of the private views, or cogitations of its conductors, towards us as a people.

This work is published monthly, by Stringer & Townsend, 222 Broadway, New York, at the rate of $3 00 per year.

FROM Bybee's Camp, North Pigeon, in Pottawatamie County, in the early part of October last, One yoke of three year old steers. One a bright red—nigh horn lopped and a little broken at the end,—the lower part of his ears had the appearance of being bitten by dogs: the other a red and white one,—more white than red—spotted upon his sides and neck. They were purchased in St. Joseph in Sept. last. Whoever will return said Steers to the owner or give information that will lead to their recovery, shall be rewarded for their trouble, and receive the gratitude of the owner, residing at the above camp.

POETRY.

Onward and Upward.

My rest is in heaven, my home is not here!
Then why should I mourn when trials appear?
Be hushed my sad spirit! the worst that can come
But shortens the journey and hastens thee home.

A pilgrim and stranger, I seek not my bliss,
Nor lay up my treasure, in regions like this;
I look for a mansion that hands have not reared;
I long for a city by sin unimpaired.

The thorn and the thistle around me may grow;
I would not repose me on roses below;
I ask not my fortune, I seek not my rest,
'Till seated with Jesus, I lean on his breast.

Though foes and affliction my pathway oppose,
They only make heaven more sweet at the close;
Come joy or come sorrow, the worst may befall,
One moment in glory makes up for it all.

No script for my journey, no staff in my hand,
A pilgrim and stranger, I pass to that land;
The path may be rugged, it cannot be long,
With hope I'll beguile it, and cheer it with song.

Song for Thinkers.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Take the spade of Perseverance
Dig the drift of Progress wide;
Every rotten root of Fiction
Hurry on and cast aside;
Every stubborn weed of Error;
Every seed that hurts the soil;
Tares whose very growth is terror—
Dig them out, whate'er the toil!

Give the the stream of Education
Broader channel, bolder force;
Hurl the stones of Persecution
Out, wherever they block its course;
Seek for strength in self-exertion;
Work, and still have faith to wait;
Close the crooked gate to fortune;
Make the road to honor straight!

Men are agents for the Future!
As they work so ages win
Either harvests of advancement,
Or the product of their sin!
Follow out true cultivation,
Where Education's plan,
From the majesty of Nature,
Teach the majesty of Man!

Take the spade of Perseverance;
Dig the drift of Progress wide;
Every bar to true instruction
Carry out and cast aside;
Feed the Plant whose Fruit is Wisdom,
Cleanse from crime the common soil,
So that from the throne of Heaven
It may bear the glance of God.

MISCELLANY.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER DANIEL WEBSTER.

Eleven Days Later from California.

Favorable accounts from the Mines—Agricultural Prospects—Steamboat Disasters and Loss of Life—Movement for a Division of the State—Alarming Progress of Crime—Flattering Commercial Advices—Increasing Receipts of Gold—Later from Oregon, China, and Sandwich Islands—Deaths, Shipping Intelligence, Markets, &c.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—11 P. M.

The steamer Daniel Webster arrived at her wharf here to night at 11 o'clock. She brings four hundred passengers and one hundred and seventeen thousand dollars worth of gold on freight, and about a half million dollars in the hands of the passengers.

The Daniel Webster has come via San Juan. She brings California dates to the 15th of October, being eleven days later than what has heretofore been received. She experienced terrible gales for several days, in which her paddle-boxes were carried away. She, however, weathered the storm nobly, to the praise of all on board.

The steamer Central America, at last accounts had made twenty-five miles up the San Juan River.

The steamer Director had capsized on the San Juan river, and seven persons were unfortunately drowned.

The general news from California is now very important. Business generally was dull, and purchasers were holding back for a future reduction in the prices of goods.

Flour was steady. Bricks dull. Provisions drooping. Lumber firm. Dry goods active. Seamen's wages very low.

The money market was variably at three to six per cent. per month. Gold dust $17 per ounce. Sight drafts on the Atlantic cities two per cent.

Agriculture was in a flourishing condition, and the mining news was very favorable. New discoveries of gold were daily being made. Quartz mining attracts great attention.

The steamer California, from San Francisco, took out $1,000,000 in gold dust. Two other steamers took large amounts.

The receipts into the treasury for fine taxes, and licences, were $60,000.

Crime was increasing, and many criminals were returning from the interior.

Five of the Fort Oxford exploring expedition had been killed by the Indians.

The steamer Mora had been destroyed by fire, and several lives lost. The boat was a total loss.

The yield of gold for the present year will exceed that of any previous one.

Steam communication between San Francisco and the Sandwich Islands was about being accomplished.

Movements were on foot for a railroad to Sacramento.

Real estate was active and advancing.

The sloop-of-war Vincennes left San Francisco for a cruise southward.

The Alto California thinks that the movements for a division of the State amount to but little.

Wells & Co.'s liabilities are stated at $200,000.

The project of supplying San Francisco with water seems to be falling through.

The steamer Republic, on her voyage from Panama, struck a rock twenty miles from San Francisco, and the water rushed in rapidly as to extinguish the fires. The passengers were rescued and the steamer subsequently gotten off, but it is feared she is seriously damaged.

Effort are on foot to revive the Chamber of Commerce, which had been broken up since the May fire.

The papers of the 9th are filled with duels, murders, and outrages, and there is strong talk of reviving the Vigilance Committee.

Major Reading, the Whig candidate for Governor, was badly wounded by the accidental discharge of his pistol while out hunting.

The Methodists had started a new paper called the California Christian Advocate.

Lynching was still practised at the mines.

The Mormons have purchased Rancho del San Bernandino for $100,000, and intend to build a large city there, to connect the Great Salt Lake City with it by railroad and secure a port in San Diego for their maritime intercourse with the world.

News from Southern California was of the utmost importance. The southern counties are coming out strongly for a convention to divide the State. Santa Barbara is the place fixed on for holding it. The various counties were engaged in selecting delegates. An address will be prepared for circulation, and a petition presented to the Legislature at an early day in favor of the division.

News from the mines at Carson's Valley are very discouraging. A company of sixty were taking but two ounces daily. Miners at Middle Fork were doing exceedingly well. Several new discoveries had been made at Cold Spring.

The Calamo Damming Company had proved a failure.

The steamer North America had arrived from Panama in thirteen days, being the quickest trip on record.

The rainy season was about commencing. Financial affairs in California was highly flattering.

A letter from San Francisco says the mines are yielding good returns and the miners are daily increasing in numbers, and confidently anticipate a larger yield of gold than upon any previous season. The commencement of another year it is believed, will find our obligations much reduced, and a large proportion of the receipts of the mines will remain invested with us.

Much more confidence being felt, City and State securities have improved.

Our city has recovered in a great measure from the disastrous fires, and merchants are on their feet with renewed vigor. Many foreign house have been permanently established here, and a large amount of capital is seeking investment.

The California Courier says a gentleman called on us yesterday, and exhibited a letter from a friend at the mines, dated Sandy Bar, or Yankee Slide, giving glowing accounts of the success of the miners in that region; some $30,000 per week was being taken from the Slide, and it was not uncommon for a claim of fifteen feet to yield $1,000 to $2,500 per day. From every region is heard the most cheering accounts.

The Marysville Herald thinks the possibility of navigating the Feather and Yuba rivers is no longer problematical.

The El Dorado News is offered for sale, the proprietors desiring to return to the States.

The rapid run of the Baltic had excited great rejoicing.

The President has appointed a commission of three scientific gentlemen to test thoroughly the strength, &c., of the various descriptions of marble, proposed to be furnished by the several bidders, for the marble work of the addition to the Capitol.—[Organ and Reveille.

More than half the people in the world are foolishly imagining evils at a distance, thus bringing upon them real disappointments by not taking care of the present.

THE subscribers take pleasure in returning their most sincere thanks to their friends and customers, for their liberal patronage bestowed on them, and take this method of informing the public, that they are now receiving their very extensive stock of FALL & WINTER GOODS.

most of which have been selected by one of the firm, from

First Hand Manufacturers

in the cities of New York, and Boston. Our stock is complete, and is one of the largest in this place; for fabric, taste, variety, style, and cheapness, we flatter ourselves that we cannot be surpassed by any house in the West.

Our Stock consists in part of

DRY GOODS,

of
French, English, and American Manufacture;
Also a large stock of

GROCERIES,

of all kinds, and

Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, Hardware, Cutlery, Iron, Nails and Castings, Queensware;

A large stock of

Ready made Clothing, Leather, Foreign and Domestic Liquors,

Ladies' dress goods, embracing almost every style, together with articles not enumerated; all of which we will sell positively at the very LOWEST PRICES.

We call the attention of Country Merchants, to our large and complete stock, which we offer at Wholesale Prices; our facilities now, for purchasing goods, are such, that we can sell at the very LOWEST RATES.

All kinds of produce taken in exchange for goods. Cash paid for hides, wax, furs, &c.

SIGN OF THE MAMMOTH A.

Kanesville, June 13th, 1851.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned having been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

Refrences.—Messrs. R. C. Wetmore & Co., N. Y. City; Dr. P. Merryweather, Cinn. Ohio; Messrs. Bacon & Hyle, William North, and Wolf & Hoppe, St. Louis, Mo.; Middleton & Riley, St. Joseph, Mo.; Major L. Bissmon, and William McLennan, Esq., Nauvoo, Ill.; L. E. Johnson Esq., Keokuk, Iowa; J. C. Hall, Burlington, Iowa.

Terms.—Half cash advanced on all orders, and three per cent commission on all purchases.

Letters of inquiry, or containing orders, must be post paid to receive attention.

All order should specify the kind, and quantity, also quality, of articles; also at what time they will be required.

BLUE MORTAR

St. Joseph, Missouri.

E. H. HAYCRAFT, having purchased the interest of Dr. J. B. HOWARD in the Drug Store of Haycraft & Howard, still continue the Drug business at the old stand where he will be much pleased to see all the former customers of the house.

He wishes it to be distinctly understood that he will sell as cheap as good articles in his line can be sold in Upper Missouri; and if an article is not as is represented it may be returned.

As all of his sales are made for cash in hand he can afford to sell very low, and he invites the attention of his customers to this particular fact.

He is the wholesale agent for JOHN BULL'S and S. P. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA. Receiving his supplies directly from the Proprietor's, and can furnish them at St. Louis Wholesale prices, thus saving the expense of freight, and risk in transportation.

The celebrated Mexican Mustang Liniment is also offered by the dozen or gross at the wholesale rates.

Remember the original "Mammoth Blue Mortar," on the West side of Main street.

Storage, Forwarding, and Commission Business,

At Kanesville, Iowa, by

ORSON HYDE.—Editor of this paper.

IT is our design to enter into the above business, and having already made partial arrangements for receiving and forwarding heavy stocks of goods, wares and merchandize hence, to the Valley of the Salt Lake in the Spring, he flatters himself that his position and facilities will enable him to give general satisfaction, and thereby secure a liberal patronage.

He will receive in store all kinds of goods from the East, West, North or South; also shipments of produce by boat or wagon, and sell the same on commission if desired. Groceries received and sold on commission at wholesale only. Liberal cash advances made on all property left in charge. Flour, Bacon, &c, &c.

Sympathy.

I have always observed, says a certain writer, that the most exalted characters have been those who, together with strength of intelect and power of capacity, have possessed and ardor of spirit and glowing sentiment, which has led them on to great and glorious victories; and it must be perfectly obvious to every one who contemplates human nature with impartiality, that man is a being who necessarily, or in a great measure depends on external objects, and that the human species must be capable of enjoyment and exertion in proportion to the power of the impression these are enabled to make on the feelings. What is, in fact, the very essence of enjoyment, but an agreeable perception of impression made upon the senses bodily or mentally?

Thus it were easy to refute the sophistry of those who, having obsorbed their feelings in abtruse speculations, or benumbed them by solitude and inactivity—have been desirous of depreciating enjoyments which they are no longer capable of relishing, and denouncing pleasures which their pursuits have rendered unattainable; but false philosophy is not the only enemy to pure and unadulterated delights; they meet with still more powerful opposition from that tyrant to which all the world are disposed to pay such implicit obedience—fashion. From an affectation superior wisdom, or perhaps through envy of pleasures which their souls, debased by criminal indulgence could no longer enjoy. Some individuals have pronounced it a proof of ill-breeding to melt in sympathy at a tale of distress, to shed a tear of sorrow for those with whom we are associated, or give way at all to any of the natural expressions of tenderness which ought to flow out after the afflicted sons and daughters of earth; the crowd, to save themselves the fatigue of thinking, and to avoid as much as possible the discredit of being singular, take up their opinions with the customs of the day and easily pass from the extreme of the false and absurd delicacy, to that of affected insensibility;—and now it seems to be the fashion to assume an air of indifference upon the most interesting occasion, when perhaps the foreboding cloud of the Lord of Sabbaoth is hanging over them, or when their present, future, and eternal well-being is at stake, every appearance of tenderness and sympathy is ridiculed; those natural expressions of sensibility which give the first charm to virtue, excellence, and beauty, and the highest polish to the youth of our land are disguised, and nature is abolished to introduce a kind of stoicism, of which the Father of the sect might be ashamed. Sensibility is not only enjoyment, but an aid of virtue and religion.

We invariably regard the first appearance of this temper in youth, as the dawning of an honest, nobly, and excellent character. Where the Father observes his child discovering a tender heart, not in weak fears and alarms of imaginary dangers, but dropping a tear at hearing a tale of sorrow and distress, by entering with ardor into the feelings and interest of his companions, by giving impromptedand unsolicited aid to the poor and afflicted, and by treating the brute creation with humanity. These indications of generosity, kindness, and affection, are viewed with inexpressible delight. From these indications the fond imagination frames the most pleasing hopes and brightest prospects.

However, the gay and dissipated may try to treat this principle with scorn and contempt, yet its value is known and appreciated by all who have retired from the public walks of pleasure to the tranquil abodes of domestic life. In the cottage of the desert the precious gem is found, affording the poor and unlettered peasant delights which a statesman or philosopher might envy. A portion of this treasure, it has been said is sometimes given to the roughest men, who might live at the base of the towering apanines, and those who might live in the forests of America, and happy is the cottage where the charm resides without this principle the satirest and the novelist would write in vain. The poet would sweep his Lyre and its tones would find no echo in our hearts; for the halo of beauty, grandeur, and delight which is thrown around literature, is imparted by sensibility. In the most interesting concerns and the most trying situations of life, the man who possesses a tender heart is one in whom we may repose our confidence and to whom we may look to for comfort and consolation in the hours of adversity.

We do not wish to connect ourselves in business with a person whose cold heartedness would allow him to pursue the strait road to selfishness without regard to the calls of honor or generosity, but rather with him whose feelings prompt him to consult his neighbors interest as well as his own. In the hour of misfortune when cast down in the vale of poverty, we wish not as a friend, him, who through insensibility, or an affectation of wisdom, would bid us laugh at the caprices of fortune or despise her frowns; but with tender sympathy, who could make our case his own, and, by acts of delicacy, which a spirit dictates, to assist in relieving our burden. And when disease or decay shall bring us to the verge of the tomb, what is so enrapturing as the presence of a friend, whose tender heart will instruct him to listen with interested attention to our tale of life; whose gentle hand will soothe the bed of death, and whose calming accents will whisper repose to our departed spirits.

If such be the value of tenderness, surely it ought to be our constant care, in the pursuit of pleasure to cultivate it for it will prevent the intrusion of selfishness and its train of sordid passions. Why should we blunt our native feelings, or tinge their hue at the shrine of avarice or ambition for there can be no room for tender feelings when the avenues of the heart are corrupted with unlawful desires, or the genial current of the heart is frozen by self-indulgences. We should never repent doing good to our fellows; generosity brings its own reward if not in this world in the world to come, for the summary of the Bible is love thy neighbor as thyself and how can we do this without sympathy. COLLEGE HILL, O.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCHES,

HALIFAX, Dec. 20th.

The steamer Europa from Liverpool arrived at Halifax this morning. Left Liverpool on the 6th. Affairs in France had reached the crisis so long dreaded. The grand move was made on the 1st ult. The President seized the reins of Government—dissolved the Assembly—declared Paris in a state of seige—arrested the leading opponents, and appealed to the people. The preparations were effected with consummate skill and secrecy. Everything was consumated before the Assembly had the least idea of the President's intentions. An entire new ministry had been formed. At daylight on Tuesday morning, the President's proclamation had been distributed throughout the City, in which he ordered the dispersion of the Assembly and the restoration of universal suffrage. Also proposing a new system of Government, in favor of the election by the people and the army. The President to hold office ten years, supported by a council of State, and by two Houses of the Legislature; pending the election, the Executive power to remain in the hands of the President. The election will take place during the present month, and he promises to bow to the will of the people. He says he has been forced into this present attitude. It is certain that Theirs, Changarnier, and others of his appointments had decided to demand his arrest, and imprisonment on the second inst., and were almost in the act of moving in the matter when they and their proposed friends, were arrested. Wherever members of the Assembly have attempted to meet officially they have been ordered to disperse, and if refusing to do so, have been arrested. Two hundred members had been arrested, but many subsequently released, but all the leaders are in prison. Two hundred members of the Assembly had given in their adhesion to the President; and telegraphic dispatches from the Department, state that the President's demonstration had been hailed with the utmost enthusiasm. These reports however were contradicted. Several barricades had been erected in different quarters of Paris, but were speedily broken up by the troops. At one of them, two members of the Assembly occupied prominent places and were killed. Troops were placed in the houses of the ex-officers of the Assembly, who were exempted from arrest. The full vigor of martial law prevailed against all persons concerned in the barricades and a large number shut up to Thursday night. The success of the President seemed certain. The London advices of Friday do not materially vary the prospect, but new elements are constantly arising.

Further from France.

PARIS, Friday, Dec. 5th.

The decree of the President appeared today, ordering the voting which is to take place on the 20th inst., to be secret instead of public. The latest published accounts from the Provinces are generally favorable for the President. The movements of the troops are rapid, silent, and firm. During Thursday many barricades were thrown up in various parts of Paris. While a body of five thousand troops was passing the Boulivards several shots were fired from the neighboring passages and houses. The fire was returned by the troops, and the combat continued with spirit about half an hour. Further down the Boulivards cannon and muskets were freely employed until four o'clock, when the fighting ceased in that quarter but was continued with vigor in other sections. No definite particulars have been published and little is known beyond the fact that a conflict has taken place and many persons have been killed or wounded.

LONDON, Friday Evening.

The latest account received from Paris represent that the troops are successful at all points — several hundred French refugees left London on Thursday for Paris. The French Government had entire control of the Telegraph lines, and had stopped the transmission of messages. Starsburg and Rheims are said to have risen. The daily news states that General Newmonger is marching from the North with four regiments, to oppose the President. The most reliable accounts from the Provinces are favorable to the President's cause. There is no important news from the rest of Europe or India.

Louis Napoleon announced, on Tuesday, "the existence of a Democratic conspiracy in Europe." Louis Kossuth, the day before announced a "Monarchial conspiracy in Europe." The Frenchman and the Magyar were right. Both announcements are perfectly correct. Each side now knows the other; both are on their guard. One dozen middle aged gentlemen declare war against one hundred millions of men. One hundred millions of men have renounced fealty to the divine rights of one dozen middle aged gentlemen. Will not the conflict be dreadful! —[Liverpool Journal.

Public Meeting.

At a large meeting of the citizens of Kanesville, held at the Court House, on the Evening of the 27th of December, 1851, for the purpose of taking such steps as may be necessary to procure from Congress a grant of land covering the town site. After having the object of the meeting fully set forth by Elder O. Hyde; C. Voorhis was elected Chairman, and J. S. Huff, Secretary.

When Messrs. Hyde, Green, Bryant, and Kelting, who were appointed a committee at a previous meeting, to prepare and report resolutions expressive of the feeling of the community relative to the above subject; submitted the following memorial and resolutions, which on motion were unanimously adopted.

To the Honorable, the Senate, and House of Representatives, of the United States of America, in Congress, assembled.

Your petitioners, citizens of Kanesville, the County seat of Pottawatamie, and State of Iowa, would respectfully represent to your honorable body: That whereas, the present town of Kanesville, in the County and State aforesaid, began to be settled and built in the fall of one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, previous to the Indian title becoming fully extinct, and before any statute law was extended over the said State of Iowa; and whereas, at that early day, the people who settled and improved the land, regarded their stay and improvements only as temporary, and consequently built without regard to the place being surveyed or laid off in any regular form; and whereas, all the subsequent buildings and improvements have been erected and made upon said lands upon a similar principle; and whereas, the said town of Kanesville, now number nearly one thousand inhabitants; and whereas, there are now many good and substantial buildings erected, much capital invested in merchandize, mechanism, and general improvements which has tended to enhance the value of the adjacent and surrounding lands to considerable extent; and whereas, the Government survey of this portion of the public domain is now nearly completed, and at an early day may be brought into market; and whereas, this location is central in Western Iowa, and is destined to be one of the most important outfitting posts to Oregon, California, and Utah, on the Western Frontier. Therefore we, your petitioners, respectfully ask your honorable body, for the better regulation and security of our respective claims upon which we have expended much labor and money, to secure the said bona fide claimants, by law, one section of land, or one mile square covering the town of Kanesville, to be taken by the following legal subdivisions, at the rate of the minimum price of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, to wit: S. E. quarter of section 25, and the N. E. quarter of section 36; the east half of the S. W. quarter of section 25; the east half of the N. W. quarter of section 36; township 75 N. range 44 west; also, the west half of the S. W. quarter of the section 30; west half of the N. W. quarter of section 31, in township 75 N. range 43 west.

Your petitioners further ask, that your honorable body, will appoint Archibald S. Bryant, H. D. Johnson, Esq. and J. B. Stutsman, a board of Commissioners or Trustees to superintend the survey of the town, with power to hear evidence, and determine all claims to lot or lots—to administer all necessary oaths, and to decide accordingly, and to do all other things and acts that your honorable body may deem expedient and necessary to be done in the premises. Believing as we do that the justice and liberality of Congress will suggest the propriety of granting this prayer as a consideration in part, for the inconveniences and losses by Indian depredations, incident to the settlement of a new and frontier country, at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre; and your petitioners will pay all necessary expenses of survey and of making titles, and as in duty bound will ever pray:

Resolved, That our senators and representatives in Congress, be requested to use their utmost exertions to procure, at its present session, a grant of land as described and set forth in the foregoing memorial, for the uses and purposes therein named.

On motion Messrs. H. D. Johnson, A. S. Bryant, and J. B. Stutsman, were elected by a large majority as a Board of Trustees in trust, for any grant that may be made in accordance with the prayer of the above memorial.

On motion of G. P. Style, Esq.—Resolved that we the citizens of Kanesville, impelled by motions of Justice and Right, we fully determine to assist and protect each other in procuring titles to our respective claims and lots situated upon the town section.

On motion—Resolved, that the Frontier Guardian be requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting.

On motion—Resolved, that this meeting do now adjourn to meet again in this place on the Evening of the 29th inst., for the purpose of taking such such steps as may be necessary to advance the claims and advantages, and to secure our interest in the contemplated Rail Road from Davenport, via, Iowa City, and Fort Demoines, to the Council Bluffs.

The Democratic Caucus.

From Democratic and neutral sources we derive the following accounts of the proceedings in the Democratic caucus held in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Saturday evening last:

WASHINGTON, November 30.

The Democratic Caucus and Tabling of the Compromise Resolutions — Withdrawal of Members — Only one Majority Candidate for Offices of the House—The Votes.

There was considerable animation in the Democratic caucus last evening; and contrary to all expectation, the Compromise resolutions were voted down; that is to say, they were tabled, though a motion was pending to refer them to a committee. A motion to adjourn was also voted down, though that would have given absent members a chance to be heard.

But fifty members voted against the Compromise—that is, for tabling it—and thirty-one or thirty-nine for it—that is, against tabling it. The short sense of the long story is, the Compromise was kicked out of caucus by about nineteen majority.

A number of members then withdrew, or abstained from voting. Among them were Judge Bayly of Virginia, Gorman of Indiana, Geo. W. Jones of Tennessee. Freeman and Wilcox of Mississippi, and a good many others.

Among those who remained and voted were Messrs. Rantoul of Massachusetts, Preston King of New York, Governor Cleveland of Connecticut, and others of that persuasion of politics.

None of the caucus nominations received a majority of the Democratic vote in Congress but Mr. Johnson, the present postmaster of the House, who was re-nominated without opposition.

Colonel Forney received 60 votes for Clerk, and Linn Boyd 51 or 57 for Speaker. Yet both these men are known to be staunch Compromise men; so that, after all the intentions of the majority of the Democratic party has been faithfully carried out in their selection.

What effect the voting down, or kicking out, of the compromise resolutions will have on the country, remains to be seen. An effort will, no doubt, be made to offer similar resolutions as soon as Congress shall organize; and some think they will pass, but that may safely be questioned. If they pass, they will pass by the joint vote of Union Whigs and Union Democrats.

Mr. Glossbrenner was, of course, renominated for Sergeant-at-Arms. Mr. McKnew, whose name I forgot to mention in my last letter, was nominated for Doorkeeper. The selection is, no doubt, a good one.

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.]

WASHINGTON, November 30.

The Democratic Caucus—A Union Organization of Resistance—Further Proceedings—A Senate Caucus "to take the Pledge"—Adherence to the Nominations.

The ground on which the Southern Union men have fought and conquered is rejected by the Democrat House in caucus.

Mr Richardson, of Illinois, acted as chairman of the meeting, and Messrs. Stanton of Tennessee, and Hall of Missouri, as Secretaries.

Major Polk, of Tennessee, offered the resolutions declarative of the purpose of the body to maintain the Compromise measures as an adjustment of the slavery question. The meeting was held with closed doors, but I learn that considerable excitement was manifested, and that a smart discussion ensued. The result was soon reached, and this "stumbling block" was, some how, got over. The resolutions were laid on the table, but whether to be taken up again is not stated. But some of the members withdrew upon this movement, and it is openly and confidently stated that the Union men will resort to a seperate organization, if the Democrats persist, as a body, in refusing to adopt the Compromise pledge.

We shall witness some further proceedings on the subject very soon.

To-morrow morning a caucus of Democratic Senators will be held, in which the Compromise pledge will be offered and strenuously insisted upon. It may meet with a better reception in the Senate than in the House.

Mr. Boyd received 57 votes as speaker, and Disney 22 as Clerk, [meaning as Speaker,] both together amounting to about two-thirds of a majority of the House.

The finality of the Compromise being brought into doubt, the finality of the caucus may also be questioned. If there is any bolting from one nomination there will be from both. But the nominations will be adhered to by all who took part in them, and, for the sake of harmony, by the whole party.

The Union men cannot object to either of the nominations, but they may possibly be willing at once to manifest their independence of all party ties in some suitable manner, perhaps by refusing to vote at all, and also by holding a seperate meeting, and issuing a manifesto of their grievances and purposes.

Garments without Seams.

We have sewing machines not a few in number, now-a-days, and there can be no doubt but they are a benefit to mankind—but would it not be a far greater improvement, and thereby a greater benefit, to make garments without seams, and thus obviate the necessity of cutting up the cloth into small pieces, just to be united again by needle and thread. At a glance it appears to be an erroneous principle of manufacturing garments, to cut up fine whole cloth into small pieces, and then sewing them together by process both troublesome and expensive. Samuel M. Perkins, of Springfield, Bradford County, Pa., has invented improvements in the manufacture of garments, whereby we shall be enabled to wear coats, and all such habiliments, independent of the weaver or tailor. The nature of the improvement consists in causing the bat, or fleece of wool, cotton, or other fibrous material, as it issues from the carding machine, to be wrapped on a "Former" of the required shape of the desired garment. The "Former" is made to revolve, and at the same time, it has a reciprocating motion in a direction at right angles to the feed, so that the fleece will be wrapped spirally in contrary courses upon the "Former" for any number of layers in succession, according to the thickness of the garment required to be made. Measures have been taken to secure a patent. From the days of darkest obscurity and barbarism, in almost all nations, cloth has been and is made first of threads, then woven, then cut up, then sewed piece by piece again. Surely modern inventive genius has something yet to do to improve on the most approved process, which finally results in the garments we wear. Mr. Perkins has made a move, and his machine is an engenius one in the right direction. Felt, we know has been used for coats, &c., but seamless felt cloth garments, we presume, will soon be new articles entirely in our markets. The felting qualities of certain kinds of wool are well known, but whether cotton or linen can ever be felted in the same, time alone will determine.

The Science of Going to Bed.

The earth is magnet, with magnetic currents constantly playing around it. The human body is also a magnet, and when the body is placed in certain relations to the earth, these currents harmonize, when in any other position they conflict. When one position is to be maintained for some time, a position should be chosen in which the magnet currents of the earth and body will not conflict. This position, as indicated by theory and by experiment is to lie with the head to the north pole. Persons who sleep with their heads in the opposite direction, or lying crosswise, are liable to fall into various nervous disorders. When they go back to the right position, these disorders, if not too deeply impressed upon the constitution, soon vanish. Sensitive persons are more refreshed by sleep when their heads point due north. Architects, in planning buildings, should bear this principle in mind.

A Marine Non-Descript—Not a Mermaid.

The Augusta (Maine) Age gives the following description of one of the piscatory genus recently taken near the mouth of the Saco river:

"The monster was captured at sea by some fishermen, a few weeks since, about twenty miles from the mouth of the Saco river, in Maine. He is sixteen feet long, and when taken weighed 800 pounds. Anything like an intelligent description of the monster is impossible—or he is emphatically a non-descript. He has a head somewhat resembling that of a tortoise, fins like a whale, and tail like a lizard. His body commencing back of the head, grows "small by degrees and beautifully less," until it finally terminates in a flat tail about six feet long, resembling the flat portion of an oar, and undoubtedly serves the purposes of propulsion. What is most singular, it had no bones whatever, except its teeth. Its tail and fins are a sort of cartilaginous substance. It is supposed to be very young. Altogether it is a wonderful—we cannot say fish—but THING. Mr. Clemens will exhibit it in several towns on the river, when he proposes to carry it to Boston or New York. The monster is worthy the attention of Barnum; he would make a fortune out of it.

Mr. Young of Manchester, England, has succeeded in solidifying gas—a result which Liebig said, sometime ago, was "one of the greatest wants of the age."—[Mo. Statesman.

"It Must Needs be that Offences Come."

From the above language of our Savior, it would seem that his doctrine was peculiarly calculated to bring offences against its adherents: and we presume for two reasons. First, His precepts and doctrines do not accord with the views, interests, and feelings of the world: and entertaining jealousy, as they ever have, and probably ever will, concerning the extent and destiny of this "delusion," and its "base and fanatical dupes and leaders," their jealousy can ever discover and point out a pretext, to arouse a vindictive spirit against the chosen of God, that can only be satisfied by exterminating the Saints, spoiling them of their goods, and working constantly for their injury and overthrow. There appears often to be a malignant feeling in the breasts of men against God's people, which in their sober and reflecting moments, they can assign no real or substantial cause for. But it is the spirit of that "wicked one," working in their hearts, even in the hearts of the children of disobedience; and they know it not. Hence the dying exclamation of the Savior: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do!"

Another reason why offences must come is, that the followers of Christ may be tried and proven; and if they endure hardness and tribulation as good soldiers, they will, like their Master, become perfect through suffering; and become eligible to a place in the Eternal Kingdom of God that will more than compensate them for all their trouble and affliction. Therefore it must needs be that offences come, and gladly would we avoid repeating the remainder of the sentence, if we could in justice to the cause of humanity and truth: but solemn as it is, it stands recorded: "Woe unto them by whom the offence cometh."

It has been our constant aim and exertion by day and by night, and our fervent prayer to High Heaven, that as the Presiding officer of this Branch of the Church, we might have wisdom, moral force and energy to manage and conduct all things committed to our charge in a manner loyal and upright before God and all just and good men. If we have failed in any material point, we are not conscious of it. We do not claim perfection however; but we do claim that we have done the best we could: The result is, that our people are orderly, loyal, and free from crime. We do not claim perfection for them. Yet we wish we could. The weaknesses and follies of human nature, we have not fully overcome; but we are doing our best to accomplish this victory. Still the weakness and folly under which all men, more or less, labor, are not without their influence in imparting information and wisdom: for if man should always act up to the Standard of perfection, he would not know the spirits of many other men around him. For there are always more or less that seek an occasion against a good man, and would gladly make him an offender for a word. If he never spoke that word, and never gave a shadow of occasion, he might not get at the root of the dispositions around him. A good, charitable, and friendly man has little disposition to make his fellow an offender for a word, unless his general character is of a suspicious cast. If, therefore, a good man should, per chance, be guilty of speaking a word unadvisedly, his real friend will take no advantage of it, because he feels confident that no evil was intended: But he who is not his friend, will make him an offender for a word. While, therefore, we have to grapple with the weakness and follies of men, we should profit by every transaction; and learn human nature in the School of experience. When man has learned, pefectly, himself and his fellow, he has learned his Maker, in whose image he was created. The week is generally a faithful index to the ability and skill of the workman.

It has been our object since we have been on the Frontier, to procure for the world, an additional testimony of the truth of Mormonism. We were fully resolved that our section should be no harbor for thieves, counterfeiters, or rogues of any kind if we could prevent it. We were resolved that honesty and uprightness in dealing should be most rigidly observed, and faithfully enforced; and that even-handed justice should be meeted to every person, so far as our influence would tend to that object. Also that the laws of the State should be faithfully kept and honored on our part; and that as little cause of offence should be given by our people as possible.

It affords us pleasure to be able to declare, without the fear of successful contradiction, that our exertions have been seconded by our people, as a body, in a manner that becomes an honest, upright, and law-abiding community. Persons who have been excluded from our Church for bad conduct and are no longer under our influence or spiritual oversight, we cannot be responsible for, neither should the Church be held responsible or stigmatized because of their improper deeds.

Now for the testimony: Jesus once said to his disciples, "If ye were of the world, the world would love you: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world,—therefore the world hate you: and it must needs be that offences come." If, therefore, the Mormons in Iowa have done nothing worthy of death or of bonds; it must be their religion that renders them objectionable: and if precisely the same feeling that was aroused against Christ and his early disciples, be aroused against the Mormons here, we are forced to the conclusion that it is the same cause that produces the same effect. Let every Latter-day Saint, and every real friend they have; be cautious and not provoke any schism or broil; but treat all people according to the law of kindness and good-will, and bring not a stain or a blot upon the victory that lies before us; and if you will listen to our counsel in this respect, and commit no overt act,—and our enemies succeed in raising an excitement against us by which sacrifice and trouble are brought upon us; settle the matter in your hearts that all is right; and we will prophecy to you, not politically, but spiritually, that Mormonism will flourish in a ten-fold ratio more than it ever has before. Remember the words of a heathen philosopher when unjustly condemned and compelled to drink poison to end his days: His disciples came around him full of sympathy and indignation, and complained that their Master should be compelled to drink the poison when innocent. The high-minded Grecian smilingly replied: "Would you have your Master die guilty?" Let this be your pride and ambition that no Mormon die or live guilty!

Have You Forgotten?

That it is often customary for people throughout the Christian World to pay their ministers salaries for the support of themselves and their families? It is also said that the laborer is worthy of his hire: But hirelings whose care is more for the fleece than for the flock, are not very favorably spoken of. Br. Hyde has been your principal preacher, presiding officer, and counselor for the last five years. Before he established his press, he traveled and preached among you day and night,—attended all your Councils, Conferences, and important meetings, and labored with his own hands for his support. He kept himself free from being burdensome or chargeable to any; and from the year, 1846 to the present time, forty dollars will cover every thing that has been given or donated to him in this county, to the present time; and probably twenty dollars might cover it. Some money was collected for his expenses across the Plains year before last, as he went as a public messenger for the good of the cause; but this last year, he went at his own expense and charges, which amounted to more than a thousand dollars cash, besides his time.

Since his press has been in operation, he has labored with the quill, axe and hoe, only while preaching or crossing the plains. He has not speculated to the injury or harm of his brethren; but has ever held himself ready to give the best counsel that his wisdom would allow him in matters of Church and of law, alike free of charge. He attends all the principal councils, preaches every Sabbath day, almost, and attends all meetings of public interest—does a good deal of printing and advertising; writes many editorials for individual benefit and sectional good without fee or reward, while he has to pay cash down for every type that is set, and for every line that is published. He has devoted his services to the good and accommodation of almost every body: But who thinks Br. Hyde wants anything? Many think he ought to give; but it is not necessary to reward his toils and labors with anything to make his heart glad.

Br. Hyde does not take this course because he lacks any thing, for he has plenty; and with a capital stock of good health and strength, and with the use of his hands and tongue, he ever will have enough, though he should not have a dollar beforehand in the world. But to be modest and unoffending: Br. Hyde does think that there are many who ought to take the Guardian and pay for it, who do not now take it. Inasmuch as his labors in the Church are free, he thinks that those who share the benefit of his toils, ought, at least, to give him the chance to support himself, by taking his paper and paying for it. This is not meant for those who have subscribed and promptly paid in advance: but for those who, like a pious old gentleman, once said in a social meeting. "Brethren our religion, bless God, is the cheapest and best in the world. I have enjoyed it now, more than twenty-five years, and it has never cost me twenty-five cents, thank God." The minister, listening attentively to this economical lecture, coolly remarked at the close of the old gentleman's testimony. "Lord save your poor stingy soul!"

The Guardian has done much to settle and improve the country,—to make a town—to create business and draw trade, to keep the wheels of increase and improvement, oiled and rolling. The importance of a town is often judged by the amount of advertising done in its journals. There is much advertising done here, for which patronage we feel thankful—trust it will be to the advantage of all who are thus liberal. "The liberal man deviseth liberal things;" and when you want to buy cheap goods, look at the paper and see who advertises, and in these stores you will doubtless find the very things you want, at a much lower rate than at those places which are not advertised. Remember the Guardian, and support it; and it will defend you and your interests, and enable Br. Hyde to travel and preach much more than he does. If every male member of our Church, and friend to our cause, will subscribe for the Guardian for themselves, and procure no more than one additional subscriber; what an extensive circulation they might give the Guardian; and thus become faithful promulgators of the truth—advance the cause, and finally reap the reward of well-doing. Suppose all our friends make, at least, one grand trial and see if there cannot be something handsome done. This will compensate Br. Hyde for his toil, and he will complain no more. But, by the help of his Master, he hopes to continue to write, preach and pray, until truth becomes triumphant in the earth, every fortress of error abandoned and demolished, and death swallowed up in victory.

Omaha Indians.

Since our return from the plains, we learn that F. J. Wheeling and H. W. Miller Esqrs., Joseph E. Johnson, Merchant in this town, and others, have left with a party of the above Indians, and gone East, with a view of letting them see the extent and greatness of the white man's dominions,—together with the improvements and, to them, curiosities of civilized life. We learn that they intend to take them to Washington, and present them to their great Father, the President.

Their tribe is miserably poor, and have lived upon the stock of the settlers on this Frontier to a great and serious extent. If Government would give them an annuity, however small, and abate therefrom the amount of whatever they might steal and plunder, it might be a partial protection to the Frontier, and at the same time benefit the Indians. We hope Congress will help them. We, on the Frontier, have paid a heavy tax to them; or rather they have taxed us most severely.

First Page.

Our citizens may see the particulars of the movements made in relation to securing titles to our lots and claims on the town section, by looking on our first page.

The Mormons of Western Iowa.

What has been their conduct since they have been located on this Frontier? They are the oldest white inhabitants, and are now, far the majority. Of necessity almost, they have had to elect their own officers, and have been the main spokes in the wheel to support and maintain a political organization under the Statute laws of the State. This applies more particularly to all the country North of Fremont County. Can the charges of crime, immorality, or dishonesty be maintained against them? We answer boldly; No! There may be individual wrongs that could not be controled: but we speak of the community as a body. Have they been oppressive with the power they have had? Again, we answer boldly: No! Many a poor Mormon has paid his tax upon his only cow, while some who are not Mormons, but have heavy stocks of goods, have refused to pay their taxes, thinking that a little corrupt popularity, sanctified by wealth, and defended by a few oaths, would excuse them. This does not apply to any of the citizens of Kanesville. Our neighbors are all good and loyal.

If any man of known integrity and responsibility in this region, thinks we have not told the truth, as it is; our columns are open for his correction, over his own signature.

If there is to be any difficulty, we would like to know what we are to meet, and to start upon a fair and understanding basis. We have not much fellowship for those political prognosticators that prophecy fire and sword, and then to bring it to pass, leave no stone unturned to get up an excitement by the most inflamatory speeches. We think that such men have just piety enough to carry them handsomely to a place similar to that which Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego were cast into, but we fear, not enough to bring them out, without the smell of fire. But every man must give an account for his words and works. The former should be few, unless good; and the latter also.

Query.

What kind of a Latter-day Saint must he be who feels not interest enough in the Mouth Piece and defender of his creed, to give fifty cents for the Guardian for the term of six months previous to his going to the Valley? This is more particularly for the consideration of home subscribers who may not be able or willing to pay one dollar. Feed the mouth that speaks for you and defends your cause, lest his voice be weak and faltering.

Cheese.

Mr. A. S. Stanly brought us a fine Cheese last week, weighing thirty-two pounds, and in justice to Mr. S., or to his good lady; and probably to both, we must say that it is decidedly the best cheese we have ever tasted in Europe, Asia, Africa, or America. Pottawatamie, in this respect, is ahead of all nations according to our experience. Who would not come and buy a farm and live in Pottawatamie! Mr. Stanly has several tons of just such cheese for sale, we hear. It is worth fifty cents a pound to real epicures; but we, not belonging to that class, purchased at ten cents per pound.

Doctor Dewit C. Bishop.

We hear that the above named gentleman is lecturing in St. Joseph against the Mormons. This news is quite satisfactory here to the Mormons and to many who are not. The most anxiety that we have heard expressed concerning him seems to be that the Doctor may prosper in his lecturing, and make a raise that will enable him to come back here and pay his debts.

Land Claims.

We hear that several claims have been sold of late at fair and living prices. This is right and good. The more that sell, the more can emigrate. That portion that cannot sell their claims, and can raise the means to emigrate without the avails of their Farms, can leave them in the hands of their poorer brethren which will make them good homes until they can sell and also go. So that no farm will be abandoned or left without a consideration, unless left in the hands of the Bishop and the poor.

Every man should keep his claim and improvements in good condition,—save every rail and every stick of timber that you can, and that will make your place valuable.

Complaints.

We often hear our subscribers complain that their neighbors borrow the Guardian before they get the chance to read it themselves! We can only suggest one remedy; and that is this. Say to your neighbor, that Br. Hyde keeps the Guardian for sale, at only one dollar a year. Tell them to go rather to them that sell and buy for themselves, and be foolish virgins no longer.

Col. Benton's Speech.

We have glanced hastily over the above gentleman's speech in the St. Louis Union. Its leading feature is all about what "he did." He proves himself a prophet beyond all contradiction of sinners; and among those born of women, there hath hardly risen a greater! When prophets are plentiful, and prophecy boldly, important events are at hand. So, look out for the consequences of rejecting so great a prophet as Mr. Benton! He is, indeed, a great man: but if the second person plural of the personal pronoun, had been more frequently employed by him than the first person singular, he would have been still greater than he now is. But he is a great and strong minded man, and will yet rise.

Not Fitting out for Salt Lake.

As the Brunswicker has turned Mr. Miles over into our hands, we publish, for his special benefit, the following: clipped from the "Iowa State Journal," published at Fort Des Moines. For this trouble and information, our charges will be, that hereafter, he attend to his own delinquents, and turn no more over to us, for we have plenty already.

"Mr. Noah Miles has purchased the Albia House, in the flourishing town of Albia, the County Seat of Monroe County, and fitted it up in good style. The public will find this a comfortable place to stay, and in Mr. Miles an attentive and accommodating landlord." (Go there friend Brunswicker and Board it out.)

The following items are cut from the Alta California:

Silver Mine Below Monterey.—A correspondent writing to this paper from Monterey, dating October 25, relates the discovery of a very rich silver mine eighteen miles from that place, at a point known on the Aliral. It was discovered by parties engaged by Mr. J. P. Leese.

The Poor.

Blessed is he that considereth the poor,—the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble.—[David.

That the poor may not be omitted or forgotten in the festivities and recreations of the season,—Thursday, the 15th inst., is the day fixed upon for the poor to have their feast and amusements. It will be given at the Court House. Those who may feel it a duty if not a privilege to show their liberality and kindness to the poor, are respectfully invited to bring to the Court House, on Thursday, the 15th inst., between the hours of twelve o'clock M., and four o'clock P. M., the following articles cooked and ready for the table. Fresh meat, fowls, fresh fish, bread, cakes, pies, butter, cheese, sweet meats, fruit, or any other little article that may set out a table to cheer and gladden the hearts of the poor. Also any kind of provisions or groceries, clothing or money that may do the poor good during the remainder of the winter. We do not think that any person who makes a free-will offering on this occasion, will be any worse off in purse, in character, or in spiritual treasures and comforts, by so doing; and it will make the poor much more comfortable and happy; and Blessed is he or she that remembereth the poor, &c.

Therefore, forget not, that on Thursday next, the 15th inst., between twelve o'clock at noon, and four o'clock afternoon, to bring your offerings, for the poor, to the Court House. We will try to act our part on the occasion: and we trust that every family who can, will go about and prepare some nice and good things for the table, and as many other things to comfort the poor with through the balance of the winter as their circumstances, inclination, and generosity will allow them. And may Heaven reward every generous soul.

One favor more. You who take the paper and read this article, be kind enough to inform your neighbor who may not take it. If all will take an interest, much good may be done, and many wants relieved.

For the Frontier Guardian.

Mails.

Mr. Editor:—You have, in your paper, noticed favorably, Fitz Henry Warren Esq., First Assistant P. M. General. This is perhaps all well enough; but before this community is prepared to endorse your opinion of him, en masse, they would like to be informed why it is, that whilst he is increasing Mail facilities at other points, he has reduced ours from a semi-weekly mail from St. Joseph to this place, to a weekly one.

Although Kanesville is a point of great importance, and doing a heavy business: we have at present barely two mails per week, one from Fort Des Moines, traveling at the rate of twenty-five miles per day, and one from St. Joseph.

Why this neglect! What have the people of Western Iowa done, to deserve a withdrawal of the ordinary mail facilities to which they feel justly entitled!

Let the Department give us two mails per week from Fort Des Moines, increasing the speed to what it ought to be, and two from St. Joseph, and then we will be prepared to accord to Mr. Warren, all the praise to which we think him entitled.

NEBRASKA.

The foregoing is from a known and responsible source. The reason of mail service being reduced to once a week between this place and St. Joseph, Mo., we think is in consequence of some informality in some former contracts. We cannot think that it is the design of the Drpartment to retrench mail facilities in Western Iowa; but to establish the service upon a more permanent footing, and then to give to the citizens all they need, which on petition of the people, we believe, will be granted them. Try it and see. "Ask and you shall receive." We cordially agree with Nebraska, that the condition and wants of the country, require two mails a week from St. Joseph, and two a week from Fort Des Moines. Especially two a week from St. Joseph.

Strangism.

It will be necessary for our Strangled friends, if they would prosper, to explain, fully, the fact of the phosphorus endowment, and the nature, purpose, and design thereof, which Strang did administer to his deluded followers, the evidence and testimony of which have been given us personally by those who saw and felt its effects. If they deny this, they deny the truth: If they confess it, they confess their leader, to be a blasphemer against the Holy Ghost. For what else can He be called, who puts Phosphorus upon the heads of his followers in the dark, and tells them that it is the Holy Ghost in cloven tongues of fire. Our friends need go into no argument with them, any more than God did with Satan after he was cast out of Heaven. For Strang and his followers stand in just about that relation to this Church. If our friends use any argument at all, let it be no argument more potent or brilliant than phosphorus, and you will not long be troubled with such agents. But do not make matches of them, for it may be that their heads have not been fully dipped in the explosive or igniting matter. If they have not, they had better go back where they can pass through that operation. Talk nothing to them but Phosphorus, and they will soon leave you. If they do not, then say that Brother Hyde has not prophecied truly.

We feel ashamed to hold out such a specimen of human depravity and wickedness, which is a burlesque upon the sacred principles of truth and righteousness: yet it is sometimes necessary to answer a certain class of men according to their folly, which it has been our design to do in this instance; and if our readears will pardon us this once, we will try to do better hence forth.

Godey's Lady's Book, for '52.

With the new year, comes to us the January number of the above named popular and much esteemed magazine. Its pages are stored with choice literature, and chaste engravings of a class much to be admired. To Beaux, Belles, Amateurs and the public in general, more especially to the ladies, this work cannot fail to be a welcome and interesting monthly visitor. We respectfully solicit its continuation to our table, and wish its able editor and proprietor much success in their sphere of usefulness.

Madame Kossuth in reply to a woman's rights address presented to her while in London, replied that she found her proper position in the domestic circle, and that she was satisfied to follow the guidance of him whom all others acknowledged as distinguished.

Read.

If you please, the opinion of the Gentiles of this County concerning the Mormons. We tender them our thanks for their generosity, frankness, and candor; and it shall be our pride and ambition to merit the good-will of those whose confidence is worth possessing. We have lived in peace and harmony from the beginning, and we do not intend to give any cause or provocation to change previous and present feelings. The term Gentile, has inadvertently crept into our sectional affairs, the true definition of which, we have not given before; but we now feel inclined to do so: No man can be called a Gentile, who possesses a generous and liberal spirit towards his fellow or neighbor. If he possess a disposition to do unto others, as he would that others do unto him, he is not a Gentile. The meeting, therefore, that is published as a Gentile Meeting, we think unappropriately named. Judging from their sentiments, and from the well known character, and reputation of the Chairman and Secretary, and of many others who attended the meeting: we pronounce it, a meeting of the honorable, high minded, and responsible men of Pottawatamie county, who wish to do to others, as they would that others do to them. Gentile, when fairly defined: means a narrow contracted soul, whose petty prejudices and ungenerous and niggardly sentiments make him hate his neighbor, because he prefers his eggs roasted, while his neighbor likes his boiled best. A purely full blooded gentile, is one who feels devilish towards the Mormons because they are Mormons,—one who would be glad to get their houses and farms for nothing,—one who would like to crush them without cause or provocation,—one who says he has driven them and broke their sculls and intends to do so again,—one who thinks he is doing God service to vex, threaten, torment, drive, rob and plunder them because they are Mormons: and because they are going away in the Spring, will take every advantage of them to get their farms at their own price. Give them an old blind horse, perhaps, for a farm worth five hundred dollars: and if they won't take it; notify them in a threatening manner to leave.

Those who come under this head are Gentiles: possessing gizzards and not souls. The proceedings of the meeting referred to, forbid us applying the name Gentile to them. They are good men, created in the image of God, and their sentiments dishonor not their maker. Long may they live and prosper: and should we be so fortunate as to find favor at the last day, we shall be happy to testify in favor of our friends, that our master may say unto them, also: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have don it unto me; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Won't we have a good time when we get there! Let us try it.

Erratta.

On our first page, under the head of "Public Meeting," in the Preamble, for; "and before any Statute law was extended over the said State of Iowa;" read,—over this portion of the said State of Iowa. Haste in proof reading, the cause of the error.

Public Meeting.

At an adjourned meeting of the Gentile citizens of Kanesville, held at the Bluff House, on the evening of 7th inst., the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, a false report has gone abroad, to wit: that there has been considerale difficulty and contention in this town and vicinity, (viz: Kanesville, Pottawatamie Co., State of Iowa,) between the Mormons and those not belonging to their Church.

Therefore, we, the so called Gentile portion of this community, do assert that the above reports are false, and that there is no truth in them, and that there has not, nor is there likely to be any disturbance in this County, between the Mormons and those differing from them in belief.

We would further represent, that the Mormons of this County, (as a community,) are a peaceful, industrious, and law abiding people; and that we are, and have been, living in peace and harmony; and we hope that no persons, either at home, or from abroad, will seek to disturb our amicable relations.

And we would farther represent that we are not Mormons, nor in any wise connected with the Mormon Church, or their people.

And whereas, some of our citizens have been stopped and mal-treated while passing through Coonville, in Mills County. Therefore

Resolved, That whilst we disclaim all right to interfere in any difficulty, which may exist in Mills and other counties, between any portion of the citizens thereof and their officers, or to meddle in any shape manner or form with their domestic affairs, we do claim the right to protest against citizens or residents of our own County, of whatsoever faith, creed, or sect being abused, or prevented from peacefully pursuing their journey or exercising their rights and privileges guaranteed to them by the Constitution and laws of the Country, in any part thereof. And we also claim the privilege of expressing our feeling of deep regret, that anything disagreeable should have taken place, calculated to interrupt the harmony heretofore existing between the Mormons, and the so called Gentiles of our sister counties.

Destructive Fire at the Capitol.

Washington, Dec. 24th, 9 o'clock, A. M.
The Capitol now burning!
By Morse's Eastern Line.
Second Dispatch.

Washington, December 24.

The flames in the Capitol are subdued—The library and rooms above completely burned out. Three fourths of the library is consumed, including the most valuable portion embracing many rare works, which can never be replaced. No serious damage in any other portion of the Capitol Fire supposed to have originated from the flues connecting with the furnace of the main basement of the Capitol. The fire was discovered about sun-rise by the watchman. The mechanics at the Navy Yard, in a short time severed the burning room, the dome, and thus prevented the extension of the flames to the roof and domes of the Senate and House of Representatives. The whole building is completely flooded with water. There is still a great deal of fire in and about the Library. The dome of the rotunda was at one time in great danger. Both, that and the two halls of Congress, are uninjured except by water. The entire library contained 55,000 volumes; of these about 20,000 in an adjoinining room were saved. All the busts, paintings, and elegant fixtures, have been destroyed. The loss is estimated at over $100,000, a great portion of it is irreparable. As soon as President Fillmore heard of the fire, he repaired to the Capitol, accompanied by several members of the Cabinet and personally supported the exertions made to save the building.

A novel project is in contemplation in New York City. Plans have been prepared and estimates made of the expenses for building a mammoth steamer, five hundred feet in length, to be furnished and finished in the most luxurious style, and to be every way equal for comfort and accommodation to the best hotels in the City, to be put upon the Hudson River in opposition to the Railroad on its eastern bank. In a word, it is a proposition to place comfort and luxury in competition with a moderate gain of time for the northern travel.

Wholesale Only.

A large stock of Sugar, Teas, and JAVA Coffee, for sale at this office. This stock was purchased in New York, with the design of sending to Salt Sake, but orders to this effect have been countermanded, and the goods ordered to be sold here. They are the choicest lot ever brought up the Missouri river, we presume. Coffee by the sack—Sugar by the barrel—and Tea by the chest or half chest. Merchants and Epicures, now is your time to buy superior articles at reduced prices. Call at this office and examine.

Railroad Meeting.

At a meeting of a respectable number of citizens of Kanesville, held at the Court House, on Monday evening, Dec. 28th, 1851, W. B. Ferguson was called to the Chair, and J. A. Kelting was appointed Secretary.

The Chair stated the object of the meeting, to be, to take into consideration the propriety of taking such steps as may be best adapted to procure a donation of Public land to aid in the constructions of a railroad from the Mississippi to the Missouri river.

The meeting was addressed at some length by L. M. Kline, G. P. Styles, J. A. Kelting, A. J. Hanscom, and H. D. Johnson.

On motion of Dr. J. S. Huff, a Committee of three was appointed, to draw up a Preamble and Resolutions, to wit: Orson Hyde, G. P. Styles, and H. D. Johnson.

On motion, the meeting adjourned to meet again, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 6th, 1852.

January 6th, 1852.

Pursuant to adjournment, a meeting was held at the Court House this evening.

The Committee appointed for that purpose reported the following, which was unanimously adopted, to wit:

Whereas, there seems to be at the present time, a deep interest felt by the public in regard to rail road enterprizes generally; and whereas, much has been said and written about a railroad through the State of Iowa, from the Mississippi to the Missouri river; and whereas, at a recent meeting of sundry citizens of the State, held at Fort Des Moines, a company was organized, styled we believe, "The Iowa City, Fort Des Moines and Council Bluff Railroad Company," the design of which is ostensibly, to construct (with the aid of a donation of Public lands,) a Road from Iowa City, via Fort Des Moines, to Council Bluffs.

And whereas, on the 25th November last, a Convention was held at Oskaloosa, composed of persons favorable to the object of the Iowa Western Railroad Company, which convention adopted, and has published, a memorial to Congress, setting out the design of said Company to be "to establish and build a railroad from Davenport, on the Mississippi river, by way of Muscatine, in Muscatine Co., and Oskaloosa, in Mahaska Co., to Trader's Point, at the foot of Council Bluffs, on the Missouri river; and also asking a grant of a portion of the unoccupied public domain, to aid said Company in that design.

And whereas, from indications, it would seem that Congress is called upon to aid—by donations—to construct Roads, especially with a view of building up a few particular towns, which to us, seems not quite proper, believing as we do, that if the Government does grant a donation, it should be so arranged, as that the bounty shall be invested upon that route, which shall, on due examination, be found most practicable, and the most beneficial to the public at large, irrespective of the interest of any towns now in existence.

But if such disinterested course shall not prevail, and if the interests of the towns are to be looked at, we hold it to be unjust to overlook one of the most important places on or near the proposed line; and inasmuch as the persons composing the two Railroad Companies above alluded to, may be ignorant of the existence of places, other than their respective cities, for the purpose of rendering all possible aid in our power, to enlighten them; it is hereby resolved, that said Railroad Companies, be, and they are, hereby informed, that in addition to the towns represented by them, there is also in the State of Iowa, a small village, at the very foot of Council Bluffs, and near to the Missouri river, called Kanesville; which town, contains, we believe, more inhabitants than Oskaloosa, or Fort Des Moines, and does more business than Oskaloosa, Fort Des Moines and Trader's Point together, and as much as either Davenport or Muscatine. That this village is of some years standing, and that it promisses fair to live for many future years, and that its citizens might possibly be induced to take some stock in a Railroad Company that would recognize their claims to a Passing Notice; and would also aid in petitioning Congress, to grant a donation of land for a proper object.

Resolved, further, that as the citizens of Iowa, cannot expect Congress to grant two donations to aid these rival Companies in their designs—as we presume—but as we believe, that a donation for one Road might be obtained. We therefore suggest, to said Railroad Companies, the propriety of a union of effort for one specific purpose, which shall be, the building of a Road from the Mississippi to the Missouri river, upon which route as may be determined upon.

Resolved, that Kanesville should be made a point on said Road.

On motion, a committee was appointed to correspond with the officers of the above Railroad companies; said Committee consists of Orson Hyde, L. M. Kline, John S. Huff, and H. D. Johnson.

On motion, the meeting adjourned.

W. B. FURGUSON, Chairman.
J. A. KELTING, Secretary.

Congressional.

We clip the following from the Globe which has not appeared in our former reports. The proceedings are of the 3rd Dec:

Notices of Bills.

By Mr. Henn: A bill creating three new land districts in the State of Iowa.

Also, a bill providing for the correction of errors in the location of military bounty land warrants and the entry of lands.

By Mr. Clark: A bill providing for a grant of public lands to the State of Iowa, to aid in the construction of a railroad from Dubupue to Keokuk, and from Davenport to Council Bluffs, in said State.

Petitions.

By Mr. Henn: The petitions of the Land Officers at Fairfield, Iowa City, and Dubuque, asking additional compensation for locating military bounty land warrants,

Also, the memorial of a convention of 294 delegates from the States of Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, and Missouri, and the territory of Minnesota, assembled at Burlington, in the State of Iowa, on the 23d and 24th days of October, 1851, asking the removal of the obstructions in the Mississippi river, at the Des Moines and Rock river Rapids.

Also, the petition of R. W. Steele and 29 others, citizens of Warren county, Iowa, asking for the establishment of a mail route, &c., from Oskaloosa, via Knoxville and Indianola, to Winterset.—[Des Moines Courier.

Conclusion of Friday's Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12th.

SENATE—The resolution extending a welcome to Kossuth was debated at great length by Messrs. Mallory, Badger, and Seward. The question was then taken on the first branch of Mr. Berrien's amendment extending a welcome Kossuth and his associates, when it was reported nays 26, yeas 24. The second branch, declaring that by this welcome to Kossuth, Congress did not intend to intimate an intention to depart from the policy of non-intervention, &c., which was also lost—yeas 15, nays 26.

Mr. Shields then moved as a substitute for the whole resolution, the resolution introduced by Mr. Foote, and subsequently withdrawn.

Mr. Borland moved the following as a substitute for Mr. Shields' amendment.

That the Congress of the United States, in the name and in behalf of the people of the United, cordially sympathize with the people of Hungary, in their recent heroic struggle and in their present misfortunes. That it recognizes and cordially welcomes Louis Kossuth, late Governor of Hungary, and his associate exiles, who have landed on our shores, as worthy representatives of their country, and invites them to the capital of the Union—that it requests the President to receive and entertain them in such a manner as may be appropriate, and that the sum of —— dollars be, and the same is hereby appropriated and placed at the disposal of the President, to pay the expenses of the reception and entertainment of said guests during their sojourn at the Capitol.

PHILADELPHIA, 11th Dec.

The trial of Hannaway for treason, for being concerned in the resistance of the laws at Christiana, was concluded to-day. Mr. Cooper having finished his closing argument about 10 o'clock, Mr. Gettin charged the Jury at great length; after being absent 10 minutes, they returned a verdict of "not guilty," and the prisoner was discharged—all other indictments for treason had been abandoned.

The State Gazette says a decision has been made by the Post Office Department that subscribers living in a county where a newspaper is published, are entitled to receive it free of postage, notwithstanding the post office through which they receive it may be out of the county.

The courts have decided the steamboat owners are responsible for losses that arise in consequence of their failing to leave port at the advertised time, in all cases where proof is not forthcoming that such failure was caused by unavoidable accidents.

Grammarians have discovered a new gender, viz: the "Bloomer"—half way between he masculine and feminine, with a touch of the neuter.

Woman's Rights.

A Mr. Stark has introduced the following amendment to the bill defining misdemeanors in the State of Tennessee. It is time to look out now, boys, the matter is growing serious:

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That in case any young gentleman, or bachelor, makes any advancements towards any unsuspecting and unsophisticated lady, by making love, or pretending to make love to her, and having no real, or serious intention of matrimony, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished accordingly.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned having been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

THE undersigned begs leave to inform his friends and the public generally, that he will be prepared to furnish wagons, cattle, and transportation to Salt Lake or Oregon by the overland route. Wagons made of the strongest material, and particularly adapted to cross the plains, will be furnished to order, by one half being paid in advance. Persons wishing to get wagons should send their orders to this place this Fall or Winter, if they wish to get them cheap.

COMMISSION.

I am prepared to receive and sell all kinds of merchandize and wares, on commission.

STORAGE.

I still have plenty of room where I can store any amount of goods, I will be responsible for all goods placed in my charge.

FOR SALE.

Groceries, flour, corn, meal, potatoes, oysters, sardines, cigars, matches, vinegar, liquors, and wines of all descriptions.

Money advanced on every kind of goods, whether for sale or stored. JOHN GOOCH Jr.

POETRY.

The Sound of Industry.

BY FRANCIS D. GAGE.

I love the hanging hammer,
The whirling of the plane,
The creaking of the busy saw,
The creaking of the crane,
The ringing of the anvil,
The grating of the drill,
The clattering of the turning lathe,
The buzzing of the spindle,
The whirling of the mill.
The rattling of the loom,
The puffing of the engine,
And the fan's continuous boom—
The clipping, of the tailor's shears,
The sound of busy labor,
The driving of the awl,
I love, I love them all.

I love the ploughman's whistle,
The reaper's cheerful song,
The drover's oft-repeated shout,
As he spurs his stock along,
The bustle of the market man,
As he hies him to the town,
The waving of the tree top,
As the ripened fruit comes down,
The busy sound of threshers,
As they clean the ripened grain,
And husker's joke, and mirth and glee,
'Neath the moonlight on the plain,
The kind voice of the dairy-man,
The shepherd's gentle call—
The sounds of active industry,
I love, I love them all.

The Editor's Advisers.

Says one, your subjects are too grave—
Too much morality you have—
Too much about religion;
Give me some witch or wizard tales,
With slip-shod ghosts, with fins and scales,
Or feathers like a pigeon.

I love to read, another cries,
Those monstrous fashionable lies—
In other words those novels,
Composed of kings, and queens, and lords,
Of border wars and Gothic hordes,
That used to live in hovels.

No—no, cries one, we've had enough
Of such confounded love-sick stuff,
To craze the fair creation;
Give us some recent foreign news,
Of Russians, Turks, the Greeks and Jews,
Or any other nation.

Another cries, I want more fun,
A witty anecdote or pun,
A rebus or a riddle;
Some long for missionary news,
And some, of worldly carnal views,
Would rather hear a fiddle.

Another cries, I want to see
A jumbled up variety—
Variety in all things;
A miscellaneous hodge-podge print,
Composed—I only give the hint—
Of multifarious small things.

I want some marriage news, says miss,
It constitutes my highest bliss
To hear of weddings plenty,
For in a time of general rain,
None suffer from a drought, 'tis plain—
At least not one in twenty.

I want to hear of death, says one,
Of people totally undone,
By losses, fire, or fever;
Another answers full as wise,
I'd rather have the fall and rise
Of raccoon skins and beaver.

Some signify a secret wish,
For now and then a savory dish
Of politics to suit them;
But here we rest at perfect ease,
For should they swear the moon was cheese,
We never would dispute them.

Or grave or humorous, wild or tame,
Lofty or low, 'tis all the same,
Too haughty or too humble;
And every editorial wight,
Has nought to do but what is right,
And let the grumblers grumble.

MISCELLANY.

Emigration to Oregon—New Discoveries of Gold.

We clip the following from the San Francisco Picayune:

We learn from the Oregon papers, that the emigration had nearly all arrived from the Plains, and that there was little sickness among them this year. They were subjected to great hardship and sufferings and privations in consequence of the loss of stock, &c., by the depredations of the Indians. In some cases all the cattle and horses of a whole party were taken, leaving men, women and children to walk five or six hundred miles to their journey's end. The Statesman gives the following statement of this emigration to the Territory during the present season, on the authority of a gentleman who has just arrived: 3,600 persons, 800 wagons, 6,400 work cattle, horses and mules, and 4,500 head of loose stock. Ten persons were killed, and about $18,000 worth of property stolen by the Indians.

A Washington Incident.

A Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, tells the following story:

The freshest story of the season runs thus. Last night, as the passengers from the cars were rushing into one of our principal hotels, a man, attired as a traveler, announced himself as a newly elected member of Congress from one of the far-off States. He was surrounded by the friends of a certain candidate for the clerkship, and his vote solicited. The stranger intimated that "he thought pretty well of that gentleman from what he had heard of him, but as he had just arrived could not say any thing positive untill he had changed his dress and refreshed himself." "Besides, his friends were out, and could not draw his mileage until to-morrow, he must seek some friend to help him, and that $50 would answer for the present." The arrangement was quickly made to put the member into funds, and $50 was handed him—but on the following day, behold! the assumed member was amongst the missing, and has not been heard of since.

Kendall, of the Picayune, complains of the want of guide-posts on the Plains, and calls on the several Legislatures, south and west of the Alleghanies, for liberal appropriations in this respect. While on the road from Council Bluffs to St. Joseph, Kendall and his party were repeatedly lost, and turned from the right road, for want of a guide-board. For the benefit of emigrants to California, why should not Congress establish these posts along the entire route!—[Dubuque Tribune.

The revolution in Northern Mexico has been brought to an end. Col. Caravajal, after waiting for reinforcements for several days, had been compelled at last to raise the siege of Matamoras. The Brownsville papers state that at one time the insurgents had advanced to within two squares of the plaza, and that they were then ordered to withdraw; that many of his men had deserted him, and there was not the slightest chance of Caravajal's success. His retreat from Matamoras was a disgraceful flight.

The Mexicans are making the most extensive preparations to defend the city in case it is again attacked.—[Hawk-Eye.

By Morse's Eastern Line.

WASHINGTON, December 2.

SENATE.—Mr Hunter appeared and took his seat.

Mr. Foote gave notice of his intention to introduce a joint resolution expressing sympathy with the Irish Patriots

Messrs. Bright, Berrien, Mason, John Davis and Pearce, were appointed a select committee on the Florida contested election.

Mr. Foote introduced resolutions for a joint committee to make arrangements to receive and entertain Kossuth.

Mr. Foote also gave notice that he would introduce resolutions declaring the adjournment of the last session of Congress on the slavery question, as permanent.

Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—A debate arose on resolution allowing newspapers to members. It was finally agreed, that $30 be allowed each member for papers.

House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.

Mr. Bayly offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling upon the President for information respecting the imprisonment and conviction of Mr. Thrasher.

The resolution from the Senate, extending a welcome to Kossuth, in behalf of the people of the United States, was then taken up and passed without debate, under the operations of the previous question—yeas, 181; nays, 16.

Mr. Fitch gave notice of a resolution reversing the declaration of Congress of 1848, that the Mexican War was unconstitutionally begun. He desired the unanimous consent to introduce the bill, but objections were made.

Several resolutions were then introduced: one calling upon the President for information as to the condition of Utah affairs, &c.

Mr. Marshall introduced a bill authorizing the payment into the treasury of California, all monies collected in the ports of that State, on imports since the treaty with Mexico and prior to her admission into the Union. A debate arose on the reference of the bill, and before taking the question into consideration the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18th.

Mr. Gwynn introduced a bill granting the right of way to aid in the construction of a telegraph line from the Mississippi river to the Pacific Ocean.

House.—Mr. Marshall of Ky. introduced a bill for purchasing outstanding stock in the Louisville and Portland canal, and enlarge it to suit the wants of commerce.

Nothing of importance done in either House.

The Intelligencer expresses surprise, that no toast was drank at the Press dinner in N. York, to the President, and adds that Mr. Webster's letter was received with hisses; it says the first movement towards the release of Kossuth, was made by Mr. Webster.

The Republic says, Kossuth is in the hands of a few officious individuals in N. York, who are using him to advance their own interests, in fulfillment of that purpose, are laboring to place him in a position antagonistic to Congress and the Administration.

Hon. Henry Clay, has resigned his seat in the Senate. He will spend the winter in Philadelphia, and return to Ashland in the spring.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.

The Republic this morning publishes a letter from the Spanish minister to Mr. Webster communicating the pardon of Mr. Wilson; one of the Cuban prisoners, in consequence of an affecting appeal in the behalf of his mother to the President, which was forwarded to the Queen of Spain, who liberated him and sent him home with funds from her private purse.

Sponge Made into Broad Cloth.

A Key West letter estimates the value of the sponge which has been or will be gathered in that vicinity this season, at $50,000, and says that some French manufactuers are using the article for making their finest broadcloths. It is either mixed with wool or cotton. At any rate the cloth made from it is very beautiful; its lustre is unsurpassed by the finest Saxony, and it has the strength of linen.

A Grand Archaeological Discovery.

Alexander Von Humbolt publishes in the Gazette de Spener, some particulars of his interesting discovery at Athens, of the Council Chamber where the Five Hundred held their deliberations. At the depth of one foot below the surface, he had come upon a large mass of inscriptions, columns, statutes, &c., which forbid a doubt that there had been the seat of that building. The explorations have not gone on as rapidly as they might, on account of the expense. There is little doubt, however, that the discovery is of extraordinary importance.

The Sea Diminishing.

Lieutenant Wm. D. Porter, of the navy, has an interesting communication in the Intelligencer, in which he undertakes to show that all the phenomena of change in the ocean line of sea coast, and appearance of rocks above the water, which have been observed and commented on from time to time, are caused by a diminution of the waters of the ocean; and that a process is at all times going on by which the substances held in solution in the ocean waters are converted into solids.

It is said that since Liquor Law went into operation in Portland, Maine, crime has decreased in the City seventy per cent.

The Democratic Caucus at Washington on Saturday night, before the meeting of Congress, refused to adopt the compromise resolutions of Mr. Polk, (brother of the late President,) by a vote of nearly two to one.

The Whigs met in Caucus, on Monday morning, and adopted the resolution which the Democrats had rejected. It is as follows:

"Resolved, that we regard the series of acts known as the adjustment measures as forming, in their mutual dependence, and connexion, a system of Compromise, the most conciliatory and the best for the entire country that could be obtained from conflicting sections, interests, and opinions, and that, therefore, they ought to be adhered to and carried into faithful execution as a final settlement, in principal, and substance, of the dangerous and exciting subjects which they embrace."

It will be seen that the resolution is almost in the words of President Fillmore's Message to Congress, one year ago. We are glad to see the views of the President endorsed, and we are more rejoiced at the prospect that we shall have peace and quiet on the subject of Slavery during the present session of Congress. Whether the prospect will be realized or not, time only can determine.—[Hawk-Eye.

Election of President by the People in South Carolina.

From a telegraphic despatch in the Charleston Courier we learn that, in the House of Representative of South Carolina, on the 28th ultimo, on motion of Mr. B. F. Perry, of Greenville, the bill giving the election of electors of the President and Vice President of the United States, to the people, was referred to a committee of the whole House, and made the special order of the day for to-day. Considerable discussion ensued on the, motion evincing indications that a hot debate will take place when the bill comes up.

From Utah Territory.

INDEPENDENCE, December 5.

The Salt Lake Mail reached here yesterday, having been much impeded in its progress by the snow. Mr. Johnson Tutt came as passenger in the Stage from Fort Laramie, and Paul William, Prince of Wurtemberg, was also a passenger, having been taken up about 235 miles from here. Four of his mules were frozen to death a few days before the Stage came along.

The news from Salt Lake City is unimportant. The Indians about Fort Kearney were troublesome, and had robbed the Farmer, Fox Booth. The troops were sent to his assistance.

The Cheyennes and Pawnees are at war with each other.

Ward and Geary's wagons were met at Chimney Rock. The snow on the Plains was in many places fifteen inches deep.

An honest Irishman, fresh from Hibernia, caught a bumble bee in his hand, supposing it to be a humming bird. "Och," he exclaimed, "devil burn you! how hot his little fut is."

The Thieves' Detector.

The London Times speaks very favorably of a new and ingenious invention which is intended to detect thieves and burglars, when engaged in evil work. It consists merely of a double-shaped hollow wedge, and can be placed to window shutters, or doors, charged with an electric ball, and upon the slightest pressure a report as of a pistol takes place, and at the same time bidding a resisting defiance to an entrance. It is likewise so constructed that a wax taper can be affixed to the wedge, and on the explosion taking place a light will be extended to it. The trials of the patent before the worthy magistrate were of the most satisfactory description, and elicited a high eulogium from Mr. Tyrwhitt, as a useful invention, applicable to many purposes.—[Organ and Reveille.

South Carolina Legislature.

The Legislature is in session, and the Governor has sent in his message. The folly of the secessionists, although it received a severe check in the late election, has not been entirely cured. Governor Means says, — that, whatever action the State may choose to take in the present state of affairs, he will sanction; but he solemnly adjures the Legislature that since it resolved upon resistance and ordered the State to be armed for the emergency, when the hour should come, no wrong that had been complained of had been redressed—no indemnity offered for the past—no security given for the future—that under the much vaunted Fugitive Slave Law, it cost the owners, in some instances, four times the value of the Slave to recover him, while attempts of reclamation had cost others their lives.

He appeals in strong terms to the pride and patriotism of the people. He says that Government troops have been stationed on the coast to overawe or coerce them; that guns upon Pickney Castle and Fort Moultrie are frowning upon Charleston; and concludes that the present condition of the country demands the burial of all party feelings, which have so much distracted them, and a union of their energies against the common enemy of their institutions.

When will men of a little common sense be found occupying the high places in South Carolina!—[Republican.

Interesting Correspondence.

The Washington papers contain an interesting correspondence between the Department of State and the British Government, in reference to the recent visit of the Governor General of Canada to Boston. Lord Palmerston states that her Majesty's Government has noticed the warm and cordial reception of Lord Elgin by President Fillmore and the citizens of Boston with the highest pleasure, more especially as it is a proof of the friendly relations between the people of the two countries, which her Majesty is desirous to encourage and confirm. Mr. Webster, in reply, expresses the gratification of the President that the British Government should have been so favorably impressed with the reception given to Lord Elgin on the occasion referred to.—[Republican.

SOUTH CAROLINA LEGISLATURE—THE SECESSION QUESTION.—COLUMBIA, S. C., November 30.—In the House of Delegates, on Saturday, Mr. Ayres gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill calling the proposed State Convention to take measures for the secession of South Carolina from the Union. Mr. Owens thereupon offered a resolution virtually opposing the call, and declaring the question of seperate secession as finally and conclusively settled by the recent vote of the State. The resolution lays over for future consideration and action, and will, it is believed, be adopted.—[Republican.

The Kossuth Resolution.

The resolution in reference to Kossuth, assumed the shape below, and has finally passed both Houses of Congress in the following words:—

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled; that the Congress of the United States, in the name and in behalf of the people of the United States, give Louis Kossuth, a cordial welcome to the capital of the country.—[Des Moines Valley Whig.

NEW ORLEANS, December 12.

There was a great Thrasher meeting at the Arcade on Thursday; resolutions were passed calling upon the Government to demand the instant release of Thrasher. Enthusiastic speeches were made both by Whigs and Democrats and the meeting was constantly interrupted by cries of war! war!! war!!!

The Postmaster General's report recommends a uniform rate of one cent on newspapers weighing less than two ounces, distance less than 2000 miles, and over it, twice that amount. The revenue of the Department has fallen off twenty-five per cent. under the new Post office law.—[Republican.

A Big Lump.

Dates from New South Wales to the 2d of August, show that the gold discoveries at Bathurst are still creating a great sensation in that quarter of the globe. One lump of gold had been found, weighing 106 pounds. It is stated to be the largest ever obtained anywhere. In the Museum at St. Petersburgh there is a piece of gold weighing seventy pounds, and twenty-eight pounds is the largest lump found in California.—[Times.

Whooping Cough.

A gentleman of this City, who has tested it, says the following is a certain remedy for whooping cough, always breaking it after the use of medicine for three days, viz: 4 ounces flaxseed, 3 ounces honey, 1 ounce liquorice, 4 ounces lemons, boiled together in half a gallon of water. To be well strained, bottled tightly, and kept in a cool place. Dose—a tablespoonful six times a day, to be given always after the coughing ceases.—[Col. Telegraph.

The African City Abeokuta.

Notices of this place have recently appeared, for the first time, in our missionary journals; and as it is quite unknown to most persons, the following facts, which have cost considerable research, may be useful to our readers.

Abeokuta stands on the Ogee river, in latitude 7 deg. 8 min. north. It is the capital of the Yariba country, lying contiguous on the eastward to Dahomey, and about 140 miles eastward of Liberia in nearly the same latitude. Abeokuta is 50 miles from Badagry, and about the same distance from Lagos, in the Bight of Benin, where Clapperton, and both the Landers, landed on their exploring expeditions to the river Niger. The Inhabitants of this kinghom are called Yombas.

The city of Abeokuta is about eleven miles in circuit, and contains according to some authors 50,000 inhabitants. Others give it 75,000, and one, 100,000.

About 3,000 of the inhabitants are natives of this region, who had been carried off as slaves, recaptured, and sent to Sierra Leone, whence after a few years they found their way back, bringing with them a valuable amount of knowledge and civilization.

The market is daily supplied with all the necessaries of life; and an active trade is carried on with the interior, though attended with great risk of property and life. Kidnapping is very common, and the citizens are continually in danger of being seized and sold by their more warlike neighbors.

The Chief of Abeokuta seems to possess intelligence and energy. He is the man who first attempted to imitate our mode of building houses. His doors will admit a person to enter erect, he has windows, and rooms floored with boards, and paint on his house. His example and influence will doubtless be felt for good by his people. They are already greatly ahead of the tribes around Sierra Leone in intelligence and civilization. Arrangements were in progress, at our last advices, to establish a "model farm."

Three black clergymen of the Church of England are settled here, viz: D. H. Trotter, S. Crowther, and Mr. Townsend, all well educated men. There is also a Methodist station and missionary here. The number of disciples to Christianity is about 300, some of whom became converts at Sierra Leone. The mass of the natives adhere to there superstition, but the existence and operations of Christian teachers is exciting much attention in the interior.

The people of Abeokuta stand in constant terror of the people of Lagos; as the latter are devoted to the Slave trade, and often seize and sell citizens of adjacent regions. The Abeokutans have a law prohibiting kidnapping under the heaviest penalty; but the chiefs are not able to enforce it fully, and never will be, while Lagos is under the influence of the Portuguese and Brazilians.—[Colonization Herald.

A man was sent to the Penitentiary for two years, in Mississippi, lately, for stealing thirty cents worth of wool.

Music is a great substitute for muscle. March a soldier out of breath on "Roslin Castle," and the moment the band strikes up "Yankee Doodle," he is just as good as new.

Storage, Forwarding, and Commission Business,

At Kanesville, Iowa, by

ORSON HYDE,--Editor of this paper.

IT is our design to enter into the above business, and having already made partial arrangements for receiving and forwarding heavy stocks of goods, wares and merchandize hence, to the Valley of the Salt Lake in the Spring, he flatters himself that his position and facilities will enable him to give general satisfaction, and thereby secure a liberal patronage.

He will receive in store all kinds of goods from the East, West, North or South; also shipments of produce by boat or wagon, and sell the same on commission if desired. Groceries received and sold on commission at wholesale only. Liberal cash advances made on all property left in charge. Flour, Bacon, &c., &c.

From the Savannah Sentinel.

Br. Hyde and the Guardian.

On our first page may be found, an Extract from the last "Frontier Guardian," headed "Br. Holly and the Sentinel," which is such a curious compound of philosophy and nonsense, legal lore and the merest twattle, assumed piety and startling blasphemy; and withal so remarkable, as well for the admission it contains, as for the audacity, which those admissions are attempted to be sustained, that we have inserted it entire, verbatim et literatim.

Emanating from so respectable a source, it will arrest the attention of the country, and command its utter astonishment! An attentive reader of Guardian for near three years, we have never noticed so barefaced an exposition of Mormonism as applied to the domestic relations: and we claim the credit of having at last "smoked it out." The facts stand confessed—Mormonism, at the Lake—whatever it may do elsewhere—practices and sanctions POLYGAMY!

But we have neither the inclination, time or ability to enter into a theological warfare with our Prophet Brother. So far as his Scripture argument is concerned—if that can be called argument—which appears but a tissure of reckless assertions—we consign him to the hands of a clerical friend, who, at our request, has kindly furnished us an article on the subject.

Who that reads Br. Hyde's missive, will not understand—if he can comprehend nothing else—that the Mormons practice Polygamy! Why attempt to conceal it any longer! It now stands confessed in all its hideous deformity.

True, the large body of the converts to Mormonism have been deluded into the belief that this charge was false! That it originated with the avowed enemies of the New Faith, to lower it in the estimation of the moral and the upright! What will they say now! It may be—such is the corrupting influence of example—that, what would once have startled them with indignation, will now claim their approbation. We have heard that

> "Vice is a monster of such fearful mein,
> That to be hated needs but to be seen;
> But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
> We first despise, then pity, then embrace!"

Alas, what must be the extent of that corruption, which could have induced so virtuous a man as Orson Hyde—and we do not accuse him of libertinism—to prostitute his pen and his precept in its defence! Not only so, but to drive so skillful a logician to the wretched absurdity of palliating the practice of the Prophets at the Lake, by reference to the vices of the Jewish Patriarchs—which were suffered under a system, so long since exploded!

But whatever may be the sentiments now, of these deluded fanatics, we venture the assertion, that had they been apprised of the real condition of things at the Lake, before they abandoned their virtuous homes, and honorable callings—if, indeed, they ever had any—few or none would have consented to become parts of a system, which debases and degrades both sexes alike!

Because wicked men have violated the laws of good society and "kept women secretly," is that to be offered as a reason why this "Prophet of the Lord" should undermine, by his example and teachings, the very foundations of all social government! To assert that our Savior had a plurality of wives—what matchless impudence! As though the pure spirit of the meek and lowly Jesus could have tolerated such abominable licentiousness! Were such, indeed, the case, we confess we would not only "drop the pen in disgust, but paper, hat and press," and fly from such Christianity!

Br. Hyde proposes a bargain with us—He must excuse us. We confess our knowledge of Scripture is rather limited; and if it were ever so extensive, we flatter ourselves we could put it to a better use than thus to "cast pearls before swine!"

He assures us that if we would turn Mormon, we should "float on a sea of light to a haven of immortality!" That may be true. But we do not aspire after such "immortality" as Mormonism may give us. And even had we—as insinuated—a proclivity towards it, hitherto; after this public avowal of its abandoned licentiousness, they would be most effectually eradicated.

Blessed with a family of growing daughters—and nothing else—is it to be supposed, that we should be so lost to what is due to their destiny—even were he to offer us, not by way of "Gas," but with the power to give, the whole realm of Mormonism, with its highest "haven of immortality" thrown in—as to throw over them the pall of a system, which would wither their every virtuous aspiration, and make them despised, even by the "pale daughters of rottenness," by consigning them to a place worse, than a Turkish Seraglio!

But, Br. Hyde is afraid the use of the term Bro. to us, might induce our friends "to discard us wholly" unless properly explained—that it is used not in an ecclesiastical, but editorial sense—and he informs the world we have not "yet been baptised, however predisposed in favor of the Mormon cause!" Ah! that is the unkindest cut of all! We confess the "corn" and quit!

Madame Kossuth's Appearance.

Madame Kossuth is more like a Magyar than her distinguished husband. She is rather smaller in stature than he is, in proportion, but of stronger frame. She appears to be about the same age.

She is a brunnette, with a good complexion, and fine dark lustrious eyes. Good sense is the prevailing idea suggested by her countenance. She is plain and unostentatious in her dress. She is reserved in her manner, and looks like a matron worthy to be the wife of Kossuth.

From the Savannah Sentinel.

Ma. EDITOR:—Having been requested, I beg leave to offer a few thoughts in reply to the arguments of Orson Hyde in defence of Polygamy.

As to the case of Abraham, I would suggest that if he were guilty of Polygamy, as assumed, there is no evidence on which to suppose even the Divine Jurisprudence sanctioned his conduct in this particular. If it were necessary I would disown fraternity with him whose anxiety would lead him to desire to be called his son, for this reason.

Again, sonship is not reckoned in this way when the Gospel traces Abraham's descendents.

Galations, 3. 7—Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. As to David, we negative the assertion that he "had wives and concubines without number." The declaration is supported by no proof.

He, in addition to his wife, had concubines, but not in accordance with any sanction of law. He could have had them under no condition, except that of a bare permission of Jewish law, which Moses suffered on account of the hardness of men's hearts.

He suffered, in the mean while, the present consequences of these iniquities.

As to Solomon, we suggest like remarks. Solomon's wisdom may be approved, not because "he followed in the footsteps of his father, David, in this respect," but for wisdom's sake.

As to Jesus Christ, we confess that we are more than shocked in our "nerves," when it is assumed that "at the marriage of Cana of Galilee, Jesus was the bridegroom and took unto him Mary, Martha, and the other Mary whom Jesus loved." This construction of this passage is a wicked pervertion, as we believe.

The account is found in the 2nd chap. of John. Jesus Christ was not the bridegroom on that occasion, if so, he would have gone uncalled, as he was with his disciples.

There is quite as much reason to presume that Peter, Andrew, Philip or Nathaniel, were either, or all of them, bridegrooms on that occasion, as that Christ was.

These men he had discipled when in Judea—it was the third day after his conversation with Nathaniel.

Whatever practices may have obtained under Jewish law, it is clear, that originally, that is from the beginning, the strictest care was taken to guard against Polygamy, Gen. 2. 21—24.

At first God made but one man and one woman. Their posterity could have known that the original intention of marriage was that a man should have but one wife. The first design in the marriage relation was reasserted, by Christ and the Apostles.

This we find in the 19th chap. of Matt. 4—6 verses. In the 9th verse of the same chap. he proclaimed it to be the law of his kingdom ever thereafter.

Whatever indulgence, on account of the hardness of men's hearts, had been allowed, under the law of Moses, that indulgence was to cease.

Thus the 7th commandment of the law was incorporated in the New Testament Scriptures. This is the teaching of Christ and the Apostles.

What is fornication? Has it no turpitude in itself? Let the Apostle Paul answer.

"Nevertheless to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband." 1 Cor. 7. 2. No plurality here.

In the 11th verse, we have this language "And let not the husband put away his wife." Also 33rd "He careth how he may please his wife."

The Scriptures speak of the wive, but do not even suppose a plurality. Eph. 5. 2. 8. "He that loveth his wife loveth himself. 31. Shall be joined to his wife. 33. So love his wife."

These passages refer to men generally.

Let us inquire whether an office bearer in the Church of God is privileged above other men?

Let us select the deacon. How many wives may he have, at the same time? We answer but one, and no more.

1 Tim. 3. 12, "Let the deacon be the husband of one wife."

If an officer in the Church may not have more than one wife,

Query—May a Prophet—may the Supreme Visible Head of a Church have sixteen, and yet be sustained by men—Shall he be able to acquit himself before God, the Church's great law-giver.

Let no one so presume. ***

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Courier, writing with an air of authority, says:

Mr. Webster will not withdraw from the cabinet, as has been affirmed. The present state of our foreign relations demand his presence at Washington and it is the desire of prominent men of all parties that he should remain. Mr. Webster himself, feels that however desirable retirement would be to him, this is not the moment to withdraw from the government. There is to be another "talk,"—if not something more serious—with the British government, concerning the rights of American vessels, and particularly upon the recent firing into the steamer Prometheus at Nicaragua.

The American Character.

An American writer says: "we are born in a hurry, educated with speed; we make a fortune with the wave of a wand, and lose it in like manner, to re-make and to re-lose it in the twinkling of an eye. Our body is a locomotive, traveling at ten leagues an hour; our spirit is a high-pressure engine; our life is like a shooting star; and death surprises us like an electric stroke."

From the New York Courier and Enquirer.

The Dead Sea of Sodom.

Dr. Graves has written a communication to the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal, in which he states "there is another Sea in the world just like the Dead Sea of Sodom. This is the Great Salt Lake of the Mormon country, discovered and explored by Lieut. Fremont. The waters of the great American Salt Lake are nearly of the same composition, and present similar phenomena to that of the Sea of Sodom." He also states, "the surface of the Dead Sea is 1,300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean," &c.

Dr. Graves has been mis-informed in reference to the great American Salt Lake of the Mormon country. That Lake is 1,200 feet above the surface of the Gulf of Mexico, and its water is wholly unlike that of the Dead Sea.

The water of this Lake makes the best quality of salt by simple evaporation. It is similar to the brine made at the Salt mines in southwestern Virginia.

The water of the Dead Sea contains but a small proportion of the Chloride of Sodium, and a very great proportion of the Chloride of Calcium and Magnesium, and is wholly unfit for making salt.

We have a bottle of the water of the Dead Sea, presented to us by Fisher Howe, Esq.; he obtained it from the Sea of Sodom, less than two years since. We have not yet analyzed it, but from careful examination, it appears to be like water obtained from the deepest salt well at Montezuma. That well is 694 feet deep. A well has been sunk at Lockpit to the depth of 406 feet from which similar water was obtained. The water of both these wells contains more Chloride of Sodium than the water of the Dead Sea. In sinking the Lockpit well a subterranean river of fourteen feet depth was passed having a current so strong as to cause the stem of the auger to vibrate. In striking a second body of water in that well, the mingling of the two brought the fluid to the point of saturation, which caused the Sulphate of Lime held in solution to chrystalize instantly, forming flattened eight-sided prisms, producing a beautiful transparent Selenite. We use this water for the condensing cisterns to our Meteoric Wires. It is not affected in the least by the most intense cold.

The Sea of Sodom is wholly unlike any other body of water of which we have any record, and the Scripture History of its formation need not be questioned, nor need we look beyond it. E. M.

The Poetry of the Bible.

We wonder not at the simple faith of the old Pangan Pantheists who saw their God in the glorious sun, heard him in the winds whispering through the forest groves, and felt him in the silent beauty of the earth and sky. To this the Greek added the classical mythology which spring from the cultivated brain of that highly civilized people; and the Hebrews, whose religious ideas were far in advance of the Greeks and all other ancient nations, added the sublime conception of God himself, as the active ruler and governor of nature, riding upon the wings of the wind, shaking the earth and making the pillars thereof tremble, quieting it by the South wind, and making the morning stars sing together for joy, wrapping himself about with thick darkness, and employing the lightning and the thunder as the ministers of his judgement. Thus in all the aspect of nature did the Hebrew recognize his God; and alike in the sunshine, the rain, the fire and tempest, did he hear "the voice of the Lord." Hence the sublime grandeur of the inspired Israelitish poets stands out with startling brightness from the material Pantheism of remote times, and their great thoughts have descended through the circling ages of the world, to beacon the way of truth and life to all men.—[Eliza Cook's Journal.

The young ladies of the Damariscotta, in the State of Maine, have recently formed themselves into a society for mutual improvement and protection. Among the resolutions adopted at a regular meeting, we find the following:

"That we will receive the attention of no "so styled" young gentleman, who has not learned some business or engaged in some steady employment for a livelihood—for it is apprehended that after the bird is caught, it may starve in the cage.

"That we will promise marriage to no young man who is in the habit of tippling, for we are assured his wife will come to want and his children go barefoot.

"That we will marry no young man who is not a patron of his neighborhood paper, for we have not only strong evidence of his want of intelligence, but that he will prove too stingy to provide for his family, educate his children, or encourage institutions of learning in his vicinity."

Elegant Comparison.

The following beautiful extract we find floating like a waif upon the waters:

"The American Constitution—Like one of those wondrous rocking stones reared by the Druids, which the finger of a child might vibrate to its centre, yet the might of an army could not move from its place, our Constitution is so nicely poised that it seems to sway with every breath of passion, yet so firmly based in the hearts and affections of the people, that the wildest storms of treason and fanaticism break over it in vain."

Have any wounded you with injuries, meet them with patience; hasty words rankle the wound—soft language dresses it, forgiveness cures it, and oblivion takes away the scar.

From the "Churchman's Companion," Oct. 1850.

Guardian Angels.

When daylight has departed, and earth is hushed to rest,
When little birds are folded safe within the parent nest,
When on the closed flowers the blessed night dews weep,
And stars look down in beauty upon the slumbering deep.

Unseen by mortal eyes, in the stillness of the night,
There are those who wander o'er the earth in robes of airy light;
Sweet messengers of love and hope, they journey to and fro,
And consolation follows in their footsteps as they go.

What are the heart's presentiment of coming joy or pain,
But gently whispering warnings of that guardian angel train?
The signals of their sympathy, the tokens of their care,
The sighings of their sorrow o'er the ills that flesh must bear!

We hear them in our slumbers, and waking fancy deems
That busy thought was wand'ring in the fairy land of dreams;
But the low sweet strains we listed, were the strains that angels sing,
To tempt our souls to soar, bright gleams of Heaven they bring.

When morning breaks above us, and we wake to busy day,
These angels "go before," to guide and "keep us in the way."—
When our feeble footsteps falter, all a weary and alone,
In their arms they gently bear us, "lest we dash against a stone."

In our journeyings, in our restings, on the land or on the sea,
In our solitude and sorrow, in our gatherings and glee,
In the day of degradation, in the hour of joy and pride,
Those pure and watchful ministers are ever by our side.

Oh Thou! whom angels worshipped, ere time or we began,
And whose divine compassion gave their guardianship to man,
Throughout this mortal warfare, let them still my champions be,
And in the last stern conflict, give them "charge concerning me."

Religious.

The editor of the Shepherd of the Valley, a Roman Catholic sheet published at St. Louis, Mo., in an article on religious toleration, thus answers the question, "Will the Pope allow Protestants in his dominions?" "The Holy Father undoubtedly believes that Almighty God has made and preserved a revelation, and that that revelation is the Catholic religion, in which his subjects have been educated and to which they are attached. He knows that this religion is true, and, of course, that all others are lies. He knows that this proceeds from God, and that all others are false, are from the devil, who is the father of lies, and false systems of religion. For him, then, to grant to Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, and Socinians, a free license to propagate their detestable errors in his dominions, while it is in his power to exclude them therefrom; for him to pull down the fence which guards the vineyard over which he is set, and to invite the wild boar out of the forest to destroy the vine which he is commissioned to guard, would be no less than to enter into a compact with the enemy of the human race for the ruin of his subjects. The Pope, as a Catholic prince, has a religion, and in this respect differs greatly from a Methodist or Baptist, who has none; who begins every instruction by announcing that he has no truth to teach, that true religion has perished from the face of the earth, and that the human race is condemned henceforth to guess-work and uncertainty in the matter of religion."

Aristocracy of Intellect.

We bow to no other aristocracy, we recognize no other. We spurn the scorn, with our whole soul, the contemptible narrowness and littleness of spirit which some men exhibit in doing homage on account of wealth or appearances. A man is no better than we, because he can drive a span of horses, or because he can give a more costly party, or drink a dearer drink than we, or that he lives in a richer house, or has more maids or men servants. A peasant may be as good as a President. Not what a man puts on without, but what he has within him, proves to us his manhood. To the aristocracy of mind and heart we bow; we reverence the intellect for what it has done and for its possibilities; but the outward proves nothing, it is nothing in comparison with mind. —[Ex. Paper.

The Boston Bee states that the gold fever is again raging in that city and vicinity. The recent return of persons with "pockets full of rocks," sufficient to secure competence and ease has inspired many to seek the same comforts.

In the West the fever is beginning to burn again also. Quite a number of persons have left this place and vicinity in the last few months for California. The emigration over the plains in the Spring, it is understood will be large. Many familes are now wintered on the Missouri, with a view of making an early start in the Spring. Gold in California is more abundant than ever.—[Hawk-Eye.

The seat of Government is now on its way from Vallejo to San Jose. The seat came down on board the Senator last night, in the shape of all the clerks of the various departments, with their valises their trunks and band-boxes, and their bundles, containing the archives of the government, shirts, trowserloons, and several other et ceteras. The crowd is on its way to San Jose, the now capitol of the blessed State of El Dorado, California.—[Post.

Election of Committees in the Senate.

Mr. Bright moved that the 35th rule of the Senate which required the election of the standing committees by ballot, be suspended. No objection being made the rule was suspended.

A Receipt.

There being so many applications for our celebrated receipt for curing pork and beef, we think we shall best subserve the interests of all by again publishing it.

To one gallon of water, take one and a half pounds of salt, one half pound of sugar, and half an ounce of saltpetre. In this ratio to be increased to any quantity required. Let these be boiled together until all the dirt from the salt and sugar, which will not be a little, rises to the top and is skimmed off. Then throw it into a tub to cool, pour it over your beef or pork to remain the usual time, say four or five weeks, according to the size of the pieces. The meat must be well covered with the pickle and should not be put down till at least two days after killing, during which time it should be slightly sprinkled with powdered saltpetre.

Several of our friends have not boiled the pickle and found it to answer well.—[Germantown Telegraph.

Kossuth's Personal Appearance

The editor of the New York Times says of Kossuth's personal appearance: "He is not tall, but robust; with a calm, clear, and somewhat abstracted countenance—fine, mild eyes, a high forehead, small hands, not a heavy beard and great dignity and ease of manner. He speaks English with less volubility than we expected, but with idiomatic accuracy and great strength.

His manner in speaking is superb—every gesture is graceful and effective—his voice is sweet and strong—there is no monotony in manner or in matter. He speaks with great power, and with perfect grace. His whole soul is in his cause: and he therefore exerts commanding effects."

Important from California.

A letter from California states distinctly that the object of a large company of emigrants who recently left for the Sandwich Islands, is to establish a Republican State there.

To this end a Constitution had been formed in San Francisco prior to their departure, containing a clause providing for the introduction of slavery.—[Monroe Democrat.

Br. Holly and the Sentinel Again.

We little thought our weakness and folly contained wisdom and strength sufficient to force a learned Editor to "confess the corn and quit," acknowledging his inability to enter into a theological warfare with his "Prophet Brother," and declining any bargain with us on account of a lack of scriptural knowledge. We deem it unnecessary to say a great deal upon this subject at the present time; because Br. Holly thinks that our "nonsense, twattle, legal lore, assumed piety, blasphemy, impudence," &c., &c., will arrest the attention of the country, and command its utter astonishment; emanating, as he says it does, from so respectable a source. We would like to see and hear what all have to say; and then we may answer all under one head. If there is nothing said of more force than has been said against our "twattle," it will be readily and easily answered.

What Br. Holly calls our "mixture" was only calculated to operate on bilious stomachs; and if, under its influence, some should throw up, we should not be surprized; and throw up, too, what, indeed, was not believed to be in them. A Reverend clergyman, we are told, threw up, last Sunday, in this town, what we will not shock the modesty of our readers with, by laying it before them: so far as we have learned, our mixture works to a charm. At the end of the year, when the laborers come to gather in their harvest or flocks, they may then be able to determine whether the blessed Savior, whose character they appear so zealous to defend, (calling him Lord! Lord! and doing not the things which he has commanded,) has blessed them with a flow of spirit—with revivals of religion, and accessions to their numbers; or whether he has manifested his displeasure at their zeal which is not according to knowledge by giving them leanness of spirit—lean congregations, and few to respect or do them reverence.

But to be a little humorous. When one minister has set his time to give us an overhauling, and then another comes in and does it before the time—takes the glory and spoils the field by running over it, and trampling it down, &c. We Mormons should think it not exactly according to the nicety, of brotherly etiquette. But these little things may all be lost sight of in a war against the common enemy.

We have sometimes heard it remarked that it was not considered gentlemanly or honorable to beat your antagonist after he had cried "quit." But as Br. Holly has called in his man, it may not be out of character for us to say a few words at this time. We have not the pleasure of an acquaintance with his Reverend friend; but from what we have seen, we think Br. Holly's cause far safer in his own hands; and the public will also pass the same opinion in our view.

We are requested to publish entire, Br. Holly's article; and also that of his fellow helper. We comply with the request out of respect to the wishes of a Br. Editor. Not that either of the productions touch the point in question. Br. Hyde never asks any one to publish his articles, being conscious that sensible editors will copy them if they want them, and discover real pith and merit in them. But should he request other Editors to publish his productions, he thinks it might be tantamount to a fear that others might not think as favorably of his writings as he, himself; and thereby diminish their force upon the public mind.

Our opponents, we presume, have not understood our position. If they have, we shall be forced to look at them in a point of light, which, at present, we are unwilling to entertain, except in the case of the Reverend Friend. Our reasoning was based upon the admissions and declarations of others; and it will be hard for any one to point out an admission or declaration of our own, particularly if any respect is paid to the spirit and tenor of the article. Others have admitted and declared that Abraham, David, Solomon and Brigham were guilty of polygamy; but we never have. We have never adduced one argument in support of the doctrine, neither in its defence, unless the admitted practice of men approved of God in former days goes to support and defend it. We have only argued, that if polygamy was practised by men of God in olden times, it was no reason why we should discard them, or reject their writings. If our statesmen, politicians, and law-makers were guilty of all that rumor says of them, it was no reason for us to reject the laws made by them;—and that if Brigham Young had sixteen wives, we regarded it as an insufficient reason for rejecting Mormonism. For if Mormonism be true, his having sixteen wives does not make it untrue; but if it is untrue, it ought to be rejected, though Brigham Young have but one wife, or even none at all. This is an age and country of thought; and Heaven has raised up this nation and government where thought may rise from an untrammelled press and fly on the wings of liberty, in the face of twenty-three millions of Japheths children who are crowding hard on the tents of Shem. We have no warfare with Abraham, David, Solomon or Brigham; or with the rulers of our land on account of their having many women, or none at all. The only question with us is—have they taught us good things? Are they inspired from on high? Have they enacted just and equal laws? These are questions between us and them. Their own individual acts are between themselves and their God.

Br. Holly tells us he has a family of growing daughters and "nothing else,"—that he feels for them, and wishes to guard their destiny, &c. (The pale daughters of rottenness, we will not consider.) Of this we entertain no doubt; being a kind hearted and an affectionate man, as we have heard, we should calculate that he had an interesting family, and that he felt to guard, with care and anxiety, their every step. We, also are blessed with a family of growing daughters, and likewise something else. (Sons.) We do not feel like boasting a great deal; still, we have sought to give them a virtuous and an enlightened education; and we should be quite willing for them to pass an examination before Judge Holly, and if they come behind his daughters of a similar age, in science, history, general reading—a knowledge of correct moral principle, and of almost every religion that ever was in the world; and if their virtues are not as well protected by the fortress of sterling precept, as that of his own daughters, then we will acknowledge ourself under compliment to his theory of training up a child; but if ours are ahead of his in these respects, he should intimate no more, that the pall of our system thrown over our daughters, would cause them to be despised by the pale daughters of rottenness. But now Br. Holly, we will consider thy Rev'd Friend. His article begins with a false and wicked insinuation. Who but a willing perverter of the statements of another, could draw the inference from our reasoning, that we wished to be accounted as Abraham's son, because he was guilty of Polygamy? The man who has done it, has reason to repent, lest the publicans and harlots go into the Kingdom of heaven before him with all his piety and "divine jurisprudence" thrown in.

Our statement was this; "If Abraham was guilty of Polygamy, we are none the less anxious to be accounted his son." Why? Because he had more than one one wife, and one of these wives, his own sister? No! "But that we might be an heir according to the promise." If it were necessary, we would disown fraternity with the author of such pervertions until he would learn better than to ascribe a false principle to his neighbor which he knows his neighbor never owned or avowed, and then abuse him for that principle. If an enemy attempt to run up a piratical flag at the mast head of our ships, and then fire into us for a piratical vessel, we shall return the compliment while we have a shot in the locker, and a gun above water. We would advise Br. Holly that if he finds it necessary to call for help again, to try to get an honest man who will not willingly pervert the statements of his neighbor. Br. Hyde does not care how many epithets, adjectives, "twattles or nonsense," are applied to his writings. He generally calculates that his articles will speak and answer for themselves in the ears of the wise, being confident that wisdom will be justified of her children. But to have a principle palmed off upon him that he never owned, is as unwelcome to him as a rag baby would be to you, instead of your own living child.

Integrity of a U. S. Judge.

Soon after our departure from this town to cross the plains last year, we were overtaken by Mr. Stiles, a lawyer, with an account against Mr. Hunt, an emigrant, for legal services rendered. Mr. Hunt was just ahead of us. Mr. Stiles handed us the account and wished us to collect it when we overtook him, and returned to Kanesville. We all soon came up in company, and we had some few words with Mr. Hunt, on account of his dodging Stiles in a dishonorable way in Kanesville: But agreed to submit the whole matter, upon its merits, to Judge Perry E. Brocchus who was with us; and to abide his award. The case was heared, the facts and evidences all adduced, and the Judge awarded to Mr. Stiles seventeen dollars and fifty cents. Mr. Hunt agreed to it, and placed his watch in the hands of Judge Brocchus as security for the payment of the said amount when he arrived in Salt Lake, which if he, the said Hunt, failed to do, the watch was to be Stiles', and subject to us. A few days before we left Salt Lake, we called on the Judge for the seventeen dollars and fifty cents, or the watch. The watch had not been redeemed, though Hunt had been in town some ten or fifteen days. The Judge told us that Hunt could not redeem the watch, and said that he had broke the glass and had sent it to be repaired. If it was repaired in time, we should have it; but if not, he would bring it with him, and give it to us on the road, as it was expected that he would overtake us. We therefore left the watch with him, and came away. He did not overtake us. But we left a line for him with Capt. Wharton, at Fort Kearney, requesting him to leave the watch at that post, or give it to Mr. Holliday of St. Joseph, Mo., who, we supposed, might be in company with the Judge. Thus, after, a settlement is made, the Judge having been the umpire, the parties being satisfied with the award, and he became the holder of the property, not "to await a settlement," but to secure the debt after the settlement was made, to write to us such a letter as he has from Cumberland, Md., dated December 16, 1851, forces us into a similar opinion of him that the good folks at Salt Lake entertain, which is, that Judge Perry E. Brocchus, is fit for almost any station that requires neither moral honesty, integrity, virtue, or honor. This affair is no concern of ours. We acted only as an agent; and though the Judge is legally responsible for the seventeen dollars and fifty cents, he may receive this notice as his discharge in full. We could just as readily believe him capable of receiving the seventeen dollars and fifty cents of Hunt privately, and then bring him before Mr. Harris, deliver up the watch and take his receipt, as we could believe him capable of giving up the watch at all, unless honorably redeemed.

The following is an extract from the Judge's letter:

"The watch left in my hands to await a settlement between you, on behalf of Mr. Stiles and Mr. Hunt, was delivered by me into the hands of Mr. H., upon his demand for the same, after your departure from the City of the Great Salt Lake.

You will remember that I called your attention to the subject, at least twice while you was in the City. Mr. Hunt being also there at the time. Upon your departure without having attended to the matter, I delivered the watch to Mr. Hunt and took his receipt for the same in the presence of B. D. Harris, Esq., and Mr. Slayton, who in writing, attested the delivery. I did not under the circumstances feel myself under obligation, or, indeed, authorized to pursue any other course."

Collection of the County Revenue.

There is too much delay in the collection of the revenue. We are not disposed to be diddled out of a thousand dollars which we have accommodated the County with, and allow it to be in the hands of individuals in the shape of unpaid taxes, while there is any virtue in the writ of Mandamus. All we ask of any civil officer to do is, to discharge his duty according to the letter and spirit of the code, within the time prescribed. This is all the favoritism or protection we ask, and all the influence that we have ever sought to exert upon any limb or branch of civil or political Government in this County, District, or State.

Cold Weather.

On Sunday and Monday mornings last, the Thermometer stood at eighteen degrees below Zero. It is well, perhaps, that the instruments are made no longer; if they were, there is no telling how cold it might become. A very little snow.

Hymn Books.

Whoever wants Hymn Books, Books of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, &c., had better apply soon. We have only a few, but all there are in the Country. We want to raise a little cash at this time, and those who want these Books, had better apply soon. They may accommodate themselves and us likewise. Also School Books, Cap, and Letter Paper, back numbers of the Guardian, and back Volumes: A choice lot of OLIVE OIL.

A few thoughts on hearing a Sermon.

The true doctrine of the bible has a form which every intelligent, conscientious, and enlightened person will respect, honor and obey. It also has a power which imparts life, inspires hope, and crowns with immortality its faithful votaries, in the mansions of bliss. But persons who have little or no intelligence, and never expect to have, may be content with the power without the form. Those who prefer a religion, having an intelligent and proper form, and also the power, may read the above; and those who think that form is not necessary in religion, if the substance is there, may read the following if they can, which contains the same letters or substance as the above, but lacks the form.

If God is without form or image, after what model or pattern was man created? Or why should God forbid, so strenuously, man to make anything in his image or likeness if he is without either? If the Father is without form, image or likeness, what did the martyred Stephen see in his last moments? He declared that he saw the heavens opened, and the son of man standing on the right hand of God.

If God has no form, how could Stephen tell whether the Son stood on the right or left hand of the Father? Or whether the Father was there at all? If the Son was the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person, according to the declaration of Paul, can the Father be without image, without likeness, without body, parts or passions, when the Savior had them all? Does not an attribute pre-suppose a subject? Or can an attribute exist without a subject? If so, an attribute is not the effect of a cause, but the cause itself! Here our logic ends with the cart before the horse. Attribute is a property of existing matter, and where no matter or substance exists, no attribute can be enforced, or even exist, but in name. This order may suit the traditions of the fathers, and the minds of their sons who are not disposed to improvement; but we apprehend not the God who created the heavens and the earth. Men, sometimes, in their zeal, to oppose that which they understand not, strike not at the root of an error, but at the root of their own popularity and usefulness!

We do not claim to understand many languages; yet we have read and studied a little, and have a smattering of some dead and living languages. We know this however, that what may be classically true, is not always scripturally true. Spirit is called an "immaterial substance." Immateriality is the negative of substance, and substance is the negative of immateriality. As well might a man talk of a white black bird, of dry water, of hot ice, or of black snow,—as to talk about an immaterial God or an immaterial substance.

Does any man think that true and faithful statements concerning Jesus Christ or the Father, are debasing or degrading to their dignity and honor?

Or do they think that false statements, ascribing to either, qualities which would destroy their existence, more conducive in sustaining their superior greatness, than simple truth?

Is a Spirit air? If so, who has not gazed through the regions of space and beheld it; and if he knows anything of chemistry, can he not describe its nature, power, and effects—the gases of which it is composed, &c., and tell all about it? If spirit be really air, how can a scholar plead his inability to describe it?

But Spirit, though susceptable of several definitions, should be considered, when preceded by an article, a substance; possessing some definite form. Hence it is said that God is a spirit. An angel is a spirit. He may be a spirit once tabernacled here in flesh, and he may be a spirit that has never yet taken a body. Will any man deny that angels, though spirits, have forms and features? Did not Gabriel appear to many? Have not many angels appeared to just and holy men, exhibiting human forms? "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." The disciples on one occasion, saw the Savior after he arose from the dead, and were fearful, because they thought he was spirit. They certainly had the idea that a spirit had a form. Again say the Pharisees concerning Paul, "We find no evil in this man. But if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God." Did not three angels or spirits appear to Abraham, and did he not wash their feet, and did they not eat and drink with him? These angels or spirits certainly had feet, for they were washed—they had mouths, for they ate and probably drank milk. They must have had bodies to receive the nourishment. Israel was once fed on manna from heaven, which was said to be angel's food. Angels or spirits certainly have forms, and though God himself is a Spirit, he has a form and an image; and Christ it is said, is the express image of his person.

Oh! superstition and tradition! What have you done? You have created a God which the bible does not know. You worship, you know not what—you cannot describe him. The true and living God, after whose image and likeness man was created and made, is excluded from your creed, from your faith, and from the pale of your church. He has said that you shall have none other God but him. Yet this God, without body, parts or passions, is another God; or rather, no God at all. And reminds us of one who hath said in his heart "there is no God."

We respect the man, though in error, for he is created in the likeness and image of the true God; but his errors we do not respect. His talent and learning ought to find a deeper channel of truth to flow in. We will not make God like unto man; (Such an one as thyself,) but try to make man like unto God." "Be ye perfect, even as your father who is in heaven is perfect." Then, if not before, man may talk with his God face to face, even as a man with his friend, like unto Moses in days of old. But if spirit be air, according to the Sermon, God is spirit, and consequently he must be air: But we do not wish to fight or beat the air, neither do we think it will benefit any one to worship the air. If a man form an idea of God, and ascribe in his own mind, an image or likeness to him, though he makes no picture or resemblance with his hands, is he guilty of idolatry and of violating the law of God? If so, the man who thinks of the form of a counterfeit dollar, is guilty of violating the statute against counterfeiting, though he never make or handle a counterfeit piece. Such kind of logic will do for people who never think for themselves; but it will not answer for persons possessing mental power, in our view. Happy is that man who feels at liberty to acknowledge and embrace that which his honest convictions tell him is true. He is the Lord's freeman, and in bondage to no one. But he is to be pitied who is spell-bound by the popular traditions of men, and feels compelled to stifle the convictions of truth in his own heart, to sustain a God whose only existence is in name, and in the confused and darkened imaginations of erring men.

Three Years Out.

This number closes the Third Volume of the Guardian. We have never begun a warfare with any contemporary, neither have we been driven from the field by any that have attacked us. We are grateful to a generous people, and to the Providence of our Supreme Head and Ruler, for the success that has attended our labors. Hoping that prosperity may still attend us, and all those who subscribe for the Guardian, or any other good newspaper, and pay for it,—we set out again on the Fourth Volume. Thankful for past favors, and hoping for future ones. Please hand in your dollars, and half dollars on the Fourth Volume.

We have not commenced a political or religious controversy with any Minister or Editor since we have conducted this Journal; but have endeavored to treat every stranger professing to be a minister of the Gospel, with courtesy and kindness, irrespective of creed or name. Yet when we have been attacked, we have generally done our best to defend that which we honestly believe; and we intend to put our "best foot forward" so long as we control this Press or any other, to defend that which we consider worth defending.

Governorship of Utah.

We have just received a letter from a responsible source, intimating that Mr. Babbitt is in Washington, seeking the appointment of Governor of Utah. We can hardly think so; still, we do not know. We would suggest the propriety of waiting a little, to see if Governor Young be removed. Gov. Young is the choice of that people. He has braved the dangers of the wilderness—encountered the savage foe; and still a foe more fearful,—hunger and want,—with hundreds around him, suffering the same. He and his people have endured—have overcome these obstacles,—and plenty of the staple articles of life now abound there by perseverance and industry; and the Valley of the mountains has become almost like the Garden of Eden. We trust that the Government may not find it necessary to remove Governor Young. Were he to be removed, we should not know whom to recommend to fill his place. We should be forced, therefore, to be silent touching the matter of re-appointment in case of his removal.

A Word of Counsel to Uncle Sam.

In all times of great interest or excitement, every body has an opinion. We have an opinion, and we will express it. The subject of foreign intervention is now agitated by the American people. How have the United States acquired such celebrity? How have they become wealthy and powerful? What has caused the springs of prosperity to burst out and flow in every part and section? It is by staying at home, on our own continent, and minding our own business. Sterling example at home, will break down more tyranny and oppression, than all our fleets and armies abroad. If the northern abolition States had been quiet, and raised no row; but exhibited by their domestic example, a superior degree of prosperity, who is not ready to confess their belief that several States, yet slave, would this blessed day, have been free. Would you still prosper, stay at home and mind your own business and not provoke foreign powers to cling to their despotism much longer than they would, if they were let alone. We say the same of the Mormons: Let them alone, and if they are not what they profess to be, they will use themselves up, and the Government will not get the disgrace or dishonor of doing it. If they really are what they profess to be, they ought to be let alone, and allowed to go on in their own way. They cannot run away with the world, nor burn it up! In days of old, when the rulers had resolved upon pretty rigid measures against Peter and others, Gamalial gave good advice, which we now recommend to the consideration of the rulers of our land and Nation. See Acts of the Apostles, V Chapter, from 34 to 40th verses.

"34 Then stood there up in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be some body; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counsel or this work be of men it will come to nought.

39 But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.

THE SENTINEL MAN seems, all the time, to be fearful that he will not get "proper credit" for his productions. He has charged us with taking "several" of his Editorials, to grace the columns of our sheet, without giving him credit. We have faithfully examined every issue of ours as far back as the time of the first issue of the Sentinel; and we must say that we have not found a single article copied from that paper: and we now venture the assertion, and challenge proof to the contrary, that we have never taken one of his Editorial productions until now.

It is true that we found an article headed, "Late Elections," in our paper. We cannot say whether we took it from the Sentinel or from other papers. We presume that we now have a dozen exchanges that contain the very same intelligence. If Br. Holly has clipped a little from this paper, and a little from that, and condensed it, we should hope he would not claim it as original or Editorial. When he gives credit to those from whom he borrowed "Late Election" news, we will give him credit for it, though we cannot say whether we, indeed, took it from his paper or some others. He says that he has published our "twattle, nonsense, legal lore, blasphemy, &c. &c., verbatim et literatim." If he really had done so, we should have no cause to complain. We hope Br. H. will attend to the proof and correction of our articles henceforth, himself, and not trust too much to inexperienced boys. When we are made to say what we have not said, or made not to say what we have said, it does not make us feel very proud. We would say, in justice to the Sentinel, that we have not declined copying from its columns because we consider it below par. Some other of our most valuable exchanges, we seldom copy from; yet we should dislike their discontinuance. From some papers, we select matter for the public, and other papers we keep as private property, to strengthen our own minds, and to store it with useful thoughts.

Prospects of Selling Out.

We have received from Pittsburgh, a communication purporting to be from a company or Colony, making inquiries concerning our improvements, the quality of the soil and general facilities for business. Should our description suit their views and wants, they propose to send an agent immediately to negotiate for them. We have sent a description as requested, which we think cannot fail to enlist their favorable consideration.

We would say to our friends, sell your possessions and improvements at fair and reasonable prices to any one who may offer, and at any time. But if you cannot get reasonable prices for them immediately, be not disheartened. This is a point that is desirable, and will command attention.

Who will be so stupid or ungrateful as not to subscribe for a paper, whose Editor labors thus through its columns, and by private letters, for the consummation of the wishes of the public, while others are sleeping? Many can pay their dollar for a party, but cannot pay a dollar to the Guardian.

Denouncing the Government of the United States.

Mr. Rhett, of South Carolina has made the following statement concerning the Government of the United States, in the Senate at Washinton. "The tyranny of this Government is more ruthless than that of Austria, which enslaved Hungary." If the Government wishes to punish such denunciators of its justice and honor, it need not cross the plains to Salt Lake, to find a proper subject for its chastening rod; but in the very Halls of Congress, a worse spirit towards the Government may be found than any one in Salt Lake ever dreamed of cherishing. What! A State suffered to go on, preparing arms and the munitions of war, with the openly avowed object of resisting the Government, and no notice taken of it! And because Utah's Governor had a little squabbing with some of the other officers of the Territory, many of the papers smoke with fire and brimstone about Utah—while South Carolina smokes with fire and brimstone in the nostrils of the nation, without provoking an action to suppress it.

Iowa Capitol Reporter.

The above paper is hard down upon us; though if we recollect right, it had Mr. Babbitt enstalled in our stead not long ago; and congratulated the country on the bussing of the change. Why should he fire away at us after we are dethroned and Mr. Babbitt elevated to the ruling power? Will he pounce upon a dead carcass, and feast himself by lacerating the flesh of a fallen enemy? He thinks the courts in this region are all creatures of the notorious Hyde, though we have never consented to be an attorney but in one case only, and that one case went against us by the decision of a Mormon Judge. No County order has been rejected for taxes on account of its being a later date than some others: Yet we contend, that, in justice and in equal right, orders should be received with all respect and deference to the range. It may not be strictly legal, but it is strictly just. If the Editor had advanced some nine hundred dollars cash to meet State taxes, and to build a Court House, and taken County script for it, as we have done, he might, perhaps, think with us, that some respect should be paid to the priority of orders. But it seems to grieve him very much because we take a just and honorable course to get our pay.

We are not a little pleased to see what good and kind feelings the conductor of that Journal cherishes towards us, and how much he knows of our affairs.

The objectionable notices referred to, are just; and particularly adapted to the state and condition of affairs in this County. To prevent irresponsible men from assuming the taxes of others—receiving the cash—and promising County orders which they were going to trade for, was one cause why those notices were published.

We presume the officers of this County know their duty, and understand the law under which they act; and feel under no particular compliment to the Reporter for its wisdom, knowledge, or interference in their affairs.

When our own citizens who do not belong to our Church, assembled in the capacity of a public meeting, officially say, that the Mormons in this County, are a peaceful, industrious, and law-abiding community, as they have done; we cannot see why the Reporter should be so forward to interfere in other men's matters. It seems that he would like to "mandamus" with the first syllable of that word omitted.

Query.

If a man is assimilated into the character and likeness of the God he worships; what must be the final character and likeness of him who worships a God that has "neither body, parts, or passions?" Infidelity in a nut shell! (no God at all.) Annihilation condensed! Folly exemplified, truth disowned;—eat, drink, and be merry for to-morrow we die.

The Morning Signal.

The second number of this neatly executed paper, came to hand by the last mail. We kindly welcome it to our table wishing its proprietors much success. It is published in St. Louis, by an association of practical Printers, under the firm of McDonald, Libby, Genter & Co., at the low rate of one dollar a year. To expostulate on its editorial and mechanical merits we deem unnecessary, because it recommends itself to all who are willing to sustain a sensible, and good family newspaper. Ladies and gentlemen if you do not believe us, just pay your dollar and get it yourselves

Our Table.

Of late we are privileged with more than ordinary accession to our numerous list of exchanges. Though snugly located on the Western Frontier, and the Indian savages our neighbors, news from almost all parts of the world flows in upon us like a mighty river. We hail with joy "ZION'S PIONEER," which purports to be published in Hamburg, Germany, in the German language, by our Friend and Brother Elder John Taylor,—also the "STAR OF DESERET," form France. These periodicals with several others bring to us the cheering news of the continued extension of Emanuel's Kingdom in a foreign land, and the untiring zeal, with which the Heralds of Salvation are actuated to extend, not the liberty which man too often bequeathes to his fellow, (depriving him of what he has got;) but that liberty guaranteed by obedience to truth, viz; the glorious liberty of the Sons of God. With such an influx of matter at our command besides what we manufacture ourself, we venture to say that our friends may feel safe to throw in their dollar, and take the paper another year.

THE JONESVILLE TELEGRAPH claims to have received a Book about the Mormons written by S. Slater, and the statements signed by Samuel Love and one hundred and forty-three other emigrants who spent the winter of 1850 and '51, at Salt Lake. The following are some of the charges they make against the Mormons. They will steal, rob, and plunder from the Gentiles; and their twelve apostles justify it.

The above charge rather touches our honor and integrity, being the President of the Board of the Twelve Apostles of the Church. Mr. Pratt is also a member of the same Board or Quorum. Shall we offer our defence? We deem it unnecessary when our accusers contradict their own statements, and plead our cause, as they have in this instance in another part of the story. They say: "Elder Hyde and Pratt are fine respectable men, and do not participate in these views."

"They levy a tax upon all emigrants, of two per cent, that pass through the Valley." This, we know is false, for we were there last year, and the year before when the emigration passed through; and being a "fine respectable man," it may be considered that we tell the truth.

"The Mormons are wanting in common feelings of humanity and sympathy towards suffering emigrants." During the winter of '50 and '51, many emigrants remained in the Valley; and doubtless some honorable men among them. But the thievish propensities and operations of many that did remain there, cost the Territory about twelve thousand dollars. The honest, industrious, and persevering portion of the emigrants had mostly gone on about their business; while the lazy, the indolent and thievish portion mostly remained behind in the Valley, it would seem. Many of these were arrested for their thefts. The property found in their possession; and were sentenced to work, with ball and chain, some for three years. But when Spring came, Governor Young pardoned every one of them on condition of their leaving the Territory. This they did; and more than likely that these are the very men who complain that the Mormons lack sympathy. They probably may have some grounds for their complaints.

They have never, in one instance, torn down or desecrated the American Flag. Brigham Young never said that he was raising up a people to carry fire and sword to the Capitol.

Capt. David Patten was shot in Missouri in the Fall of '38 on crooked River; But if he is now in the Valley, according to this Book, and at the head of Seventy Danites, he has risen from the dead, sure, and all the powers of earth combined, cannot conquer him. If that Book therefore be true, we would advise the Nation to hurry business as fast as possible and prepare for the resurrection of the dead and final judgment, for it has already begun with David Patten. Though we heared nothing of David Patten being there last Fall, yet he might have been notwithstanding.

The possibility is so great and clear, that we take the responsibility of advising the Nation to dispose of all their vexed question, pass all the bills that should be passed, help Kossuth redeem Hungary—chastise England and Spain, seize on Cuba and the Sandwich Islands, and get their work all done up right, and prepare for the General Judgment, the last preleminary of which, will be foreign intervention, in our view.

Perpetual Emigrating Fund.

As we are one of the agents of the above fund, we have many applications for aid from this source. There are no funds in our hands, at this time, and can, therefore, render no aid to applicants until we can control the monies to do it.

VIRGINIA is crowded out of this number; but will appear in our next.

Emigration.

From letters and papers lately received, it is expected that a great emigration will not only come to settle in this country in the Spring; but pass through here on their way to Oregon, California, and Salt Lake. We hope and trust that corn may then bring more than fifteen cents a bushel in cash. Take care of your hay and corn, and let them not be wasted.

The Weekly Phonetic Advocate.

A friend handed to us a few days ago, a number of the above named paper. Its appearance presents a neat and clean face, and although somewhat odd in consequence of the peculiar formation of the type; yet we believe, to all interested in the further advancement of this new reform in literature, that it would prove a welcome weekly visitor. It is published in Cincinnati, Ohio, by Longley & Brother, at one dollar and a half a year in advance.

The President's Message on the Prometheus Affair.

To the Senate of the United States:

I have received a resolution of the Senate adopted on the 12th inst., in the following terms:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to communicate to the Senate, if not inconsistent with the public interest, any information the Executive may have received respecting the firing into and seizure of the American steamship Prometheus, by a British vessel of war, in November last, near Greytown, on the Mosquito coast, and also what measures have been taken by the Executive to ascertain the state of the facts, and to vindicate the honor of the country.

In answer to this request, I submit to the Senate the accompanying extracts from a communication, addressed to the Department of State, by Mr. Jos. L. White, as Counsel of the American and Atlantic and Pacific Ship Canal Company, dated 2d, inst. This communication is the source of the information received by the Executive in relation to the subject alluded to, and is presumed to be essentially correct in its statements of the facts. Upon receiving this communication, instructions, such as the occasion seemed to demand, were immediately dispatched to the Minister of the United States in London. Sufficient time has not elapsed for the return of any answer to this dispatch, from him, and in my judgment, it would at the present moment be inconsistent with the public interest to communicate those instructions. A communication, however, of all the correspondence, will be made to the Senate at the earliest moment at which a proper regard to the public interest will permit. At the same time, instructions were given to Commodore Parker, commanding the Home Squadron, a copy of which, so far as they relate to the case of the Prometheus, is herewith transmitted to the Senate.

[Signed.] MILLARD FILLMORE.
Washington, Dec. 15.h, 1351.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Dec. 1851.

SIR:—The President has learned that an English brig of war, the Express, lying in the harbor of San Juan de Nicaragua, has recently fired upon the American steamer Prometheus, while in the act of departure from that harbor, and compelled its owners to pay certain demands alleged to be port charges, and claimed by persons professing to act under the authority of the local Government. The particulars of the affair will be found in a letter of the agent of the Prometheus, already published in the newspapers of New York, a copy of which is herewith transmitted.

Whatever may have been the merits of the question betwegn the Captain of the Prometheus and the authorities of Nicaragua, the United States acknowledge no right in the Government or a vessel of Great Britain to exercise any police or supervision over American merchant vessels in Nicaragua or elsewhere out of the British dominions.

On the contrary, the first article of the convention between the United States and her Britannic Majesty, relative to Nicaragua, signed April 19.h, 1850, of which a copy is also enclosed, expressly excludes each of the contracting parties from assuming or exercising dominion over Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Moquito Coast, or any part of Central America. You will, therefore, as soon as the Saranac shall be in all respects ready for sea, proceed in her to San Juan de Nicaragua, for the purpose of affording protection to American commerce and interests on that coast, against any such interferepce for the future; and on your arrival there you will notify the officer in command of her Britanic Majesty's naval forces in that harbor, or on that coast, of the object of your visit; at the same time you will assure the local authorities of the port that the United States will not justify the non-payment of any lawful and proper duties on the part of their merchant vessels, and that they desire the most friendly relations with the Government of Central America, and will faithfully maintain, on their part, the stipulations of the treaty already referred to.

The True Issue.

Kossuth, in his late speech to the Baltimore Delegation, said:

"Let me, while acknowledging the kindness and hospitality of the people of the United States, say that I came not here to seek an sylum, nor to look for a happy home. Permit me to state—it is not a compliment, for I never make compliments, it is a truth—that I would consider to be born a citizen of the United States the greatest honor and the proudest lot that a man can boast to be his own. But I, not being in the happy condition of being born a citizen of this glorious land, you will not feel offended when I say that, let my poor country be doomed to suffering and degradation even greater than she has ever endured or now endures, I still love my country more than yours. (Striking his breast forcibly with his hand amidst the applause of the audience.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.

About eighteen thousand dollars have been received by Kossuth, since his arrival here. The U. S. mail steamer Georgia from Chagres, with mails 15th Nov., has arrived bringing 400 passengers, 1,476,000 in gold dust as freight, and large amount in hands of passengers. She transferred 250 passengers to the Empire City for New Orleans. The passengers by the Georgia report the Brother Jonathan from Chagres, put into Kingston in distress, and six feet water in hold.

Lamentable Occurrence.

On Thursday last, an altercation took place, in a Store in town, between two of our respectable citizens—Mr. Samuel H. Riddle, and Mr. Wm. R. Murray—during which, Mr. Riddle discharged a pistol at Mr. Murray, which penetrated his thigh, inflicting a dangerous, if not a fatal wound. Mr. Riddle promptly surrendered himself into the hands of one the officers, to be dealt with according to law. On yesterday he was brought before Justice Clarke, and his examination postponed until the 14th inst.

Mr. Murray now lies in a precarious situation, and, his physicians, we truly regret to learn, entertain no hopes of his recovery.

As the cause, circumstances and result of this most unfortunate affair—which has thrown a gloom over our usually quiet village—will soon undergo a judicial investigation, we deem it best to forbear making any remarks, for the present.

Mr. Murray expired last night. His funeral will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon. His friends are invited to attend, at the Christian Church, at that time.

Honorable Henry Clay's Letter of Resignation!

FRANKFORT, KY., Dec. 23.

The following is Hon. Henry Clay's letter of resignation, as it was read in both Houses of the Legislature this morning:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17th, 1851.

To the General Assembly of Kentucky:

When you did the honor to confer on me the appointment of a Senator from Kentucky, which I now hold, in accepting it I did not intend or expect to serve the entire term of six years. I had previously retired finally, as I supposed, from that body, but out of the territorial acquisition resulting from the war with Mexico, momentous questions arose, seriously menacing the harmony and peace, if not the integrity of the Union. I felt it to be my duty to return again to the Senate, and to contribute my humble aid by an amicable settlement of those questions, to avert the calamities with which we were threatened. Such a settlement was attempted during the last Congress; is now in progress of execution, and I trust and hope will accomplish all the good that could be expected from any great measure adopted to heal national divisions and animosity, which has risen to such an alarming height.

On the approach of the present Congress, it was with much hesitation, proceeding partly from my feeble state of health, that I concluded to return for the last time to the Senate; but I have no thought of ever again taking a seat in that body after the close of the present session. Having come to this determination, I consider it incumbent on me to place it in the power of the general Assembly to appoint my successor during its present session. I do, therefore, hereby resign the office of a Senator of the United States, from the State of Kentucky; this my resignation, to take effect on the first Monday in September, 1852.

In dissolving this official relation in which I stand to the General Assembly, I cannot forbear renewing an expression of my great obligations and my profound gratitude for the many distinguished and gratifying proofs which it has given to me of its confidence and attachment.

I have the honor to be,
With the highest respect,
Your faithful and obd't serv't,
H. CLAY.

Neutrality of Nations.

The following are the preamble and resolutions introduced in the Senate by Mr. Walker, in relation to the principles of foreign non-intervention recognized by the law of nations:

Whereas, The signs of the times are portentous of an approaching struggle in Europe, between the Republican masses for the constitutional government on the one side, and the advocates of monarchy on the other. And whereas, it pressingly behooves the Representatives of the people of the United Sovereign States of America, to seriously consider, and betimes to inquire into the relations of the government and country to this struggle, and their duty in view of it to themselves, to foreign nations, and the international law; therefore,

Be it Resolved, &c., That the Committee on Foreign Relations be instructed to inquire into and report upon the expediency of an open declaration by Congress to foreign nations and the world, that the United States hold s rictly to the policy and principle that each individual nation, state or power, to posses for itself the exclusive right and sole power to take care and dispose of its own internal concerns without the intervention of and interference of any foreign government, state, confederacy, alliance or power, whatsoever; and thatany such intervention or interference by or on the part of any foreign government, state, confederacy, alliance or power, constitutes an infraction of the law of nations, authorizing and justifying the interposition of any or all other governments, confederacies, or powers, at their discretion, to prevent such intervention and to repair such infraction of the law of nations.

Resolved further, That the same committee be instructed to inquire also into the expediency of requesting the President of the United States to cause negociations to be opened with all other constitutional governments, with a view to the end of obtaining their co-operation with the United States in the declaration aforesaid, and the policy and principle thereof, and in the observance, defence and maintenance of the law of nations, in this respect.

The Editors of newspapers in Washington are talking of a convention for the purpose of adopting sundry resolutions for self-protection. For instance they wish to make a rule that persons wishing an advertisement and editorial notice, shall pay for such no ice in addition to the advertisment. In England an editorial notice of half a dozen lines is charged at the rate of about twenty times the price of theadvertisment to which it refers.—[Brunswicker.

Expedition against the Sandwich Islands.

The Pacific gives the following account of the plan and purpose of the expedition:

"One hundred men with large amounts of capital are to proceed thither at first in a peaceable manner, in order to make the best investments, and lay the plans. Another hundred go as a "corps de reserve," soon after. A steamer in due time will arive with 20,000 stand of arms—to be used either before or after the revolution, and declaration of independence; as shall seem to be expedient. It is not settled yet whether Hawaii shall be a State of the Union, or an independent Republic. It is supposed that the King has been bribed, and will abdicate on the first show of revolution. No serious opposition is anticipated. The men who are at the bottom of this are said to be shrewd and far-seeing, and are possessed of means and influence. Some of them are owners, of large plantations of negroes, and it is one purpose of theirs, to plant the institution of slavery in that group of islands.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—P. M.

The Intelligencer, of this morning, states that his Excellency, the minister of France, communicated yesterday, at the Department of the Secretary of State, by directions of his Government, and officially answer announced that the President of the French Republic, had adopted a great measure of public safety. That as chief of the State, he offered to six millions of Frenchmen, who had elected him, and to the world which had received his nomination, a new era in the tranquility of France, to prevent her from a revolution, which would, and might recoil. That strong in the conviction that he was repelling the dangers which threatened France and Europe, without end, he has invited the nation to a free choice and firm and durable government. That he appealed to the suffrage of all, in a moment so solemn to the country, and that this appeal ought to enlighten the world in regard to his object.

An Extraordinary Feat.

Richard Manks recently performed on the cricket ground, Kensington-oval, in England, the astonishing feat of walking one thousand miles in one thousand consecutive half hours:—

Manks went over the last 400 miles with his feet in poultices, wrapt up in handkerchiefs, and encased in loose slippers, and decidedly not the least remarkable transaction connected with his unprecedented feat is, that he walked his 1000th mile in the wonderfully short space of seven minutes and forty seconds.—[London Times, November 9th.

The Armament of South Carolina.

It appears by the report of the Ordinance Department to the South Carolina Legislature, that the State contracted for thirty-two twenty-four pounder, eight ten-inch mortars, and eight four-inch siege howitzers. Most of these have been finished and inspected, and all are to be ready by the 15th of December. The contract for small arms, was for 6,000 muskets, 1,000 rifles, 1,000 pair of pistols, 1,000 sabres, and 1,000 artillary swords. The delivery of these arms in January, 1852, and to be completed by the first of January, 1853. Besides these, there are 17,000 projectiles, infantry, cavalry and artillery accoutrements, and all the other "pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war."—[Mo. Republican.

Later from Mexico.

Papers from the city of Mexico to the 29th ult., have been received by the New Orleans editors.

Five English vessels of war have arrived before the harbor of Vera Cruz. The reason of this unexpected visit is not distinctly known. The Siglo absurdly enough contends that it is for the purpose of putting an end to the slave trade. whilst the Trait d'Union is confident that it has some reference to the English intervention in the Cuban affair.

The balance is so adjusted as to be used for twenty, ten, five, two and a half, and one dollar pieces, and no one can be deceived in the value of them. As there are counterfeits of all, or nearly all of these denominations of gold coin, every one handling much gold, and it is now cheaper than silver, ought to have one of these balances. Burning of Barnum's Museum.

PHILADELHIA, Dec. 31.

The loss by fire of Barnum's Museum was very heavy—about $200.000. The building originally cost $80,000, and it was insured for $30,000 by Mr. Spooner, he having recently purchased the establishment. Barnum's loss is estimated at $70,000, on which there is an insurance of $30,000.

C. G. Henderson & Co. lost a considerable portion of their stock. Most of the pianos and other valuable goods in the main store of F. L. Walker & Lee were removed. Their loss, however, amounts to several thousand dollars. Mr. Henderson's loss is about $10,000. Several buildings adjoining were considerably injured.

The distinguished Hungarian, Kossuth, arrived about 11 o'clock this morning, and was met at the station by Messrs. Shields and Seward, of the Senate Committee, and conducted to Brown's Hotel, from which are displayed the Hungarian, Swiss, Italian, German and Turkish flags, The American flag is flying from the parapet Upon his arrival there, the cheers of the crowd called out Kossuth to the balcony, where he bowed to the people and retired. Mr. Webster will call on him during the day, and set apart a day for introducing him to the President.

POETRY.

Trifles

A cloud may intercept the sun,
A web by insect workers spun
Preserve the life within the frame,
Or vapors take away the same.
A grain of sand upon the sight
May rob a giant of his might!
One meagre point let out his breath,
And make a banquet meal for death.

How often at a single word,
The heart with agony is stirred,
Or trifles that years come not have rived,
Are scattered to the winds of Heaven;
A glance that looks what words would speak,
Will speak the praise and blench the cheek,
Our thoughts, not spoken nor yet expressed,
Lie coiled in the breast.

A scarce of note from those we love
May be an angel from above;
A whisper welcome to our ears
Be as the music of the spheres.
The presence of a gentle hand
Worth all that glitters in the land;
Our trifles are not what they seem,
But fortune's voice and star supreme!

A True Gentleman.

The distinguished Governor Morris, of Morrisiana, near the city of New York, who was a gentleman by birth, education, and the most lofty bearing, being asked for his definition of a gentleman, replied in the words of the Psalmist:

"'Tis he who every thought and deed
By rule of virtue moves,
Whose generous tongue disdains to speak
The thing his heart disproves.

Who never did a slander forge,
His neighbor's fame to wound;
Nor hearken to a false report,
By malice whispered round.

Who vice, in all its pomp and power,
Can treat with just neglect;
And piety, though clothed in rags,
Religiously respect.

Who to his plighted words and trust
Has ever firmly stood;
And, though he promise to his loss,
He makes his promise good.

Whose soul in usury disdains
His treasure to employ,
Whom no rewards can ever bribe
The guiltless to destroy.

[This Psalm was copied by Mr. Jefferson, in the smallest hand and neatest manner, in his common pocket book.]—Wilmington.

MISCELLANY.

I Saw the Drunkard Die.

I was lately called to visit a drunkard in his dying condition. On entering his room, I found him in the agony of despair. Thinking it perhaps arose from the guilt of a sinful heart, I began to point to Jesus, the drunkard's only friend. With an awful look of horror he said, "Ah, sir, but I have rejected that Jesus, and now he rejects me; and will have no mercy on me." I offered to pray for him, but he said, "It is all in vain to pray for me." Then, with a dismal groan, he exclaimed, "I am dying, and ere the morning's sun shall rise, my lost spirit will be enduring the miseries of a drunkard's hell."

I took hold of his hand, and true it was, he was fast sinking under the hand of an insatiable disease, brought on by intemperance. Poor man! he was dying in the true sense of the word, and no human agency could save his soul from the darkness of its awful destiny. He told me that "they who were seated around his miserable bed, were the only remaining relatives he had on earth." He said "he had brought his aged Father and Mother in sorrow to the grave; and she who is weeping by my side, is my broken-hearted wife, and those hungry and ragged little ones are my children. Here I am a picture to behold! A father of a family, stretched on a drunkard's bed, and near a burning hell. My wife must weep in misery, and my little children must seek a stranger's care, and beg a stranger's protection." These words were uttered in a feeble voice, as the last throb of the pulse told that he was dead.

One or two reflections naturally arise from the facts above stated.

1st. O! there is constancy in a woman's love; herein it is eminently displayed. Behold the wife of a drunkard weeping at the couch of wretchedness and want; administering in vain the drugs of the doctor; earnest in her efforts, to supply every want; untiring in her attemps to save her miserable husband's life. Did he deserve such attention from one whom he had so deeply injured? Whether he did or not, this woman would not forsake the object of her youthful love. No; her loving heart throbbed with increased tenderness, as she wept around his dying bed. Although a dying drunkard, he is still her husband, and the father of her children. She cannot forsake him; O no, she loves him still.

2nd. The questions necessarily arise: why did this woman unite her destiny with a drunkard? Why did she thus cloud her sunny days, while as yet in the morning of beauty, and forsake the comfort and joys of a sweet home, for the sake of this drunkard?

Why did she leave the residence of a mother's love and a father's kindness, to center her hopes of happiness upon a drunkard's love! These questions are answered by the wife herself. "My husband," says she, "originally was but a moderate drinker. The time has been when morality and rectitude of conduct influenced his motives; when his spirit would have trembled at such a death. When he married me, the companion of his choice, it was doubtless his intention to support, protect and cherish me through every vicissitude and trial. But he has not done so." She could say no more. The throes of her sick heart filled her eyes with burning tears; her countenance was pale; and her frame was thin and weak—her husband had been cruel to her children, and had not guided their infant steps in the ways of the Lord. He is now gone and left them to the drunkard's fortune—misery and rags. God bless them and save them from their father's ways and fate.

Discoveries in the Last Half Century.

There has been no period since the commencement of the world, in which so many important discoveries, tending to the benefit of mankind, were made as in the last half century. Some of the most wonderful results of human intellect have been witnessed in the last fifty years. Some of the grandest conceptions have been perfected. It is remarkable how the mind of the world has run into scientific investigation, and what achievements it has effected in that short period. Before the year 1800 there was not a single steamboat in existence, and the application of steam to machinery was unknown. Fulton launched the first steamboat in 1807. Now there are 3000 steamboats traversing the waters of America, and the time saved in travel, is equal to seventy per cent. The rivers of every country in the world, nearly are traversed by steamboats. In 1800 there was not a single railroad in the world. In the United States alone there are now 6,737 miles of railroads costing $226,000,000 to build, and about 22,000 miles of railroad in England and America. The locomotive will now travel in as many hours a distance which in 1800 required as many days to accomplish. In 1800 it took weeks to convey intelligence between Philadelphia and New Orleans; now it can be accomplished in minutes through the electric telegraph, which only had its beginning in 1843. Voltaism was discovered in March, 1800. The electro magnet in 1821. Electrotyping was discovered only a few years ago. Hoe's printing press, capable of printing 10,000 an hour is a very recent discovery, but of a most important character. Gas light was unknown in 1800; now any city or town of any pretence is lighted with it, and we have the announcement of a still greater discovery, by which light, heat and motive power may be all produced from water with scarcely any cost. Daguerre communicated to the world his beautiful invention in 1839. Gun cotton and chloroform are discoveries but a few years old. Astronomy has added a number of new planets to the solar system.

Agricultural chemistry has enlarged the domain of knowledge in that important branch of scientific research, and mechanics have increased the facilities for production, and the means of accomplishing an amount of labor which far transcends the ability of united manual effort to accomplish. The triumphs achieved in this branch of discovery and invention are enough to mark the last half century as that which has most contributed to augment personal comforts, enlarge the enjoyments, and add to the blessings of man. What will the next half century accomplish? We may look for still greater discoveries: for the intellect of man is awake exploring every mine of knowledge, and searching for useful information in every department of art and industry.

Address of Kossuth,

To the People of the United States.

New York, Dec. 13.

The following address, by Kossuth, to the people of the United States, is published:

Having come to the United States to avail myself, for the cause of my country, of the sympathy which I had reason to believe rested in the hearts of the nation, I found it my duty to declare in the first moments of my arrival, that it is my mission to plead the Independence of Hungary and the countries of the European continent before the great Republic of the United States.

My principal position, I repeat, is, that every nation has a sovereign right of its own—a right to manage its own affairs, without any foreign intervention.

Friends of my cause do not do anything that will throw difficulties in my way, and while expressing freedom for the cause do not prejudice it in the eyes of the nation. It is with regret that I feel the necessity of again making that appeal to the public opinion of this country, particularly to those who profess themselves to be friends of my cause to give me that proof of their sympathy by avoiding every step that might entangle me into difficulties and especially in respect to that rule I have adopted and which I declare to be my leading principle, viz: not to mix nor to be mixed up with any domestic concerns.

Solidified Milk.

A sample of an article lately patented in England, and exhibited at the Crystal Palace, called "purified solidified milk," has found its way to this country. It is sold in the form of cakes, which resembles in color, weight and consistency, cakes of white soap. From one pound of this substance which cost a dollar, six gallons of milk can be made, by grating it into boiling water, and letting it stand a few minutes. It warranted to keep any number of years, and is said to be free from those properties of milk in its natural state, which render it unfit for the use of invalids or infants. For sea-voyages, it must be an invaluable article. A friend of mine, whom curiosity led to import a small quantity, has tried it: and he assures me it is all that it claims to be. If some enterprizing, dairy farmer could find out or purchase the secret, he might find the manufacture of the solidified milk a very profitable way of disposing of the surplus of his dairy.—[Cor. Hawk Eye.

A Capital Idea.

It has been proposed that the Government cause envelopes to be manufactured with the pre-payment stamp engraved on them. there are but few people who send letters without pre-payment now, and those which are not pre-paid ought not to be taken from the post office. Therefore if the envelope could be purchased with the stamp already upon it, a great deal of trouble and vexation might be saved.—[Milwaukee Jour.

Age of Candidates for the Presidency.

Mr. Clay is seventy-five. Mr. Webster and Gen. Cass are about sixty-eight. Gen. Scott is sixty-seven. Gen. Houston, Gen. Wool, Gov. Marcy, and Gen. Butler are each about sixty. Mr. Buchanan is sixty-two. Gen. Lane is upwards of fifty. Mr. Fillmore is fifty-three. Judge Douglas is thirty-nine.—[Indiana Sentinel.

Indian Outrage.

We learn through the Burlington Telegraph, that a party of Indians have attacked the settlers on Boyer river, some 200 miles west of this place, and that a Mr. Carpenter and his wife were taken captive by the savages. A party of troops had started from Ft. Dodge in pursuit of the Indians, but did not succeed in overtaking them. Occurrences of this kind are truly lamentable and measures should be taken at once to prevent their recurrence in future.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned has been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating publics as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

References.—Messrs. R. C. Wetmore & Co., N. Y. City; Dr. F. Merryweather, Cinn. Ohio; Messrs. Bacon & Hyde, William North, and Wolf & Hoppe, St. Louis, Mo.; Middleton & Riley, St. Joseph, Mo.; Major L. Bidamon, and William McLennan Esq., Nauvoo, Ill.; L. E. Johnson Esq., Keokuk, Iowa; J. C. Hall, Burlington, Iowa.

Terms.—Half cash advanced on all orders, and three per cent commission on all purchases.

Letters of inquiry, or containing orders, must be post paid to receive attention.

All order should specify the kind, and quantity, and quality, of articles; also at what time they will be required. J. E. JOHNSON.

COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.

THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satisfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.

Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrived at Sacramento, this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, whilst on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

Reading of Novels or Fiction.

MR. EDITOR:—Although much has been said and written upon this important subject, yet the field for thought and remarks, upon a matter so worthy of our candid consideration is still open wide before us; and I cheerfully and hopefully proceed to pen a few of the cogitations of my head upon this growing evil, with an anxious wish of doing good.

We are informed in sacred writ that he that converts an individual from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death and hide a multitude of sins. We are therefore encouraged to seek the welfare of others although many may turn a deaf ear, and mock at our charitable entreaties, for charity rejoices in the truth, and seeks the good of all mankind.

Under the considerations that God is the Father of the spirits of all mankind, that He is a God of truth, and desires that his creatures would be like himself, being filled with "light and truth," who, that is a lover of truth can look upon the increasing anxiety for, and practice of the reading of fiction;—more especially by those who profess to be Saints of God,—without feelings of sorrow; and a deep solicitude, that a course more wise and ennobling might be pursued!

Paul tells us that truth will make us free, and that if we are thus made free then we are free indeed. We are also admonished as made known in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants to train up our children in light and truth, but it appears that some have disregarded these holy injunctions and lightly esteemed the councils of the Almighty.

Novels, or fictitous writing, being clothed in the semblance of truth, are like the Ignis Fatuus, or Jack o'lantern; calculated in their nature to deceive the unwary, and lead them into quagmires of error, falsehoods and deep depravity. Who would be a slave to error? Who a bondman to a depraved mind? If any, let them speak, for such, perhaps, I may offend. The mind of the human family in general seem more willing to grasp error than truth, and to revel in the field of fiction, than to rejoice in facts, and it is not strange that the minds of the young, (if left to their own choice,) should be led astray, while presented with a profusion of novels, and romantic writings as are extant at the present day. We read that,

"'Tis education forms the common mind.
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

We may not wonder, that without a proper guidance, or under an erroneous education that the minds of the young are led step by step from the path of science, and the light of truth, and all useful knowledge; and become fit subjects for vice and destruction.

Under a false training, certain organs of the brain, perhaps already too strong and active; are over excited and enlarged, while others that should be aroused and stimulated to activity are left in a dormant state, until the individual, or individuals, seem to be led by an irresistible impulse, from which it is hard to reclaim.

Hear what Burns says upon this subject:

"O leave novels, ye Maucline belles,
Ye're safer at your spinning wheels;
Such witching books are baited hooks,
For rakish rooks, like Rob Mossgiel.

Your fine Tom Jones, and Grandisons,
They make your youthful fancies reel;
They heat your brains, and fire your veins,
And then ye're pray for Rob Mossgiel.

Beware a tongue that's smoothly hung,
A heart that warmly seems to feel;
That feeling heart but acts a part,
'Tis rakish art in Rob Mossgiel.

The frank address, the soft caress,
Are worse than poison'd darts of steel;
The frank address, and politesse,
Are all finesse in Rob Mossgiel."

We should study to know the world, and all things as they really are, that our judgment may be correct, and our minds undeceived, or void of deception, and contamination of evil.

Readers of novels frequently justify themselves by saying that they learn to read with ease and facility by reading such works. Were such the only books to be obtained, there might be a shadow of justification in such a course, but as good and useful books abound, and the Saints are required to search diligently for wisdom and knowledge out of the best books. I consider such an apology futile, and unworthy of a L. D. Saint. By some we are met with the following declarations. "I have acquired some of the most noble sentiments; some of the most sublime expressions and ideas, from writers of romance that ever I acquired in the perusal of any works in all my researches in the field of literature.

I know that such writers often aim at sublimity, or endeavor to throw around their writings, an appearance of truth and grandeur, which in its nature is the better calculated to deceive.

But such arguments in favor of novel reading, might remind one of the fabled story of the Jackdaw being arrayed in the brilliant and beautiful plumage of the Peacock, endeavored to palm himself off for a bird of that kind, but was detected, disrobed, and cast out in shame, in his true character and color, a black bird of the Crow kind.

The subject under contemplation would admit of many remarks and I might point out many evils both physical and mental which I have not touched upon, but these are probably sufficient, and I will bid my friends of romantic lore, adieu with the following conclusions.

That as a practice of novel reading, must in its nature bring disquietude, disappointments, and a train of evils, so the pursuit of truth brings joy and consolation. Truth elevates the mind on high, calmes and soothes the troubled bosom, promotes health and happiness, leads man to love his neighbor, his fellow, and his God, is calculated to sooth the thorny path of life, and to happify him here and hereafter.

All things have their opposites, every cause produces its effects, and every effect is surely the product of some cause. Then tell me, can a fountain yield both salt water and fresh at the same time? can a bitter fountain send forth sweet water? or do we look for precious fruit from thorns or thistles?

It is written that the wise shall inherit glory.

My Native Land.

My native land; how sweet the sound,
The best to me on earth;
It brings a hallowed joy around,
The home's domestic hearth,
My native land, I'll love thee still,
Wherever I may roam,
And cling to thee in good or ill,
For 'tis my native home.

How cold are they who do disdain,
The love of country dear,
And hold it has no binding claim,
Upon their pride sincere.
My native land, I'll ne'er forget,
Thy rivulets and glades,
Thy proud and lofty hills, nor yet
Thy deep secluded shades.

There is a love about my heart,
That stays through every ill,
Nothing will cause it to depart,
It clings forever, still—
It is the love of native land,
That flows forever pure,
In all her troubles 'tis on hand,
Which makes it firm and sure.

In ev'ry land where dwells a spark
Of patriotic fire,
The prattling child will stop to hark,
The tale told by its sire,
About its native land so true,
Its hills and valleys fair,
Its streams so wide and skies so blue,
Its pure and healthful air.

I love my native land full well,
The dearest on the earth,
And there I'll be content to dwell,
Until removed by death—
But should I leave this land, a tear
Will course from either eye,
God's blessings on my country dear,
And pour them from on high.

BY MYSELF.

The State of France---Alarm in England.

The New York Tribune gives the following extract from a private letter, Dated Dec. 12, from an American gentleman now in London:

I heard, day before yesterday, from Lord Clarence Paget, the director of the Ordinance, that a Government Messenger had arrived from Paris, saying that there had been 8,000 killed, instead of 800, as stated, and that the majority were innocent persons, who had taken no part in the Revolution. Another, gentleman who has arrived from Paris, an Englishman who has resided there, says that if shots were fired out of one house in a block, cannon were fired into the whole block, and soldiers then rushed in and bayonetted indiscriminately all within. This gentleman says he escaped from one of those blocks of houses, but that his clerk and wife were killed by the bayonets of the soldiers. I also learned through Lord Paget that the Britsh Government are a good deal alarmed at the supposition that Louis Napoleon will unite with Austria and Russia to put down England and Liberty in Europe, and that the Government dockyards are live with as many men as can get around the ships, getting them ready for sea.

THE UNITED STATES MINISTER IN FRANCE.—A statement has appeared in the Paris semi-official papers to the effect that all the "diplomatic corps appeared at the President's levee, on Monday night, and congratulated him on his success." This, says the Paris correspondent of the New York Commercial, is incorrect so far as the Representative of the United States is concerned, as he was not at the Levee, nor has he yet formally recognized the present Government.

While coffee is very low at this time, it may be well to notify our merchants that the estimated production of the past season will not meet the estimated consumption by a fifth or sixth part, consequently we may look for a rise in the market on the opening of navigation. Dealers will not be apt to forget the rise of almost 100 per cent which took place from the same cause in the summer and fall of 1849.—[Brunswicker.

A Valuable Tree---It will do for Stone.

There is a tree in Mexico called the Chijol, a very fine wood, which become petrified after being cut, in a very few years, whether left in the open air, or buried. From this timber, houses could be built that would in a few years become fire-proof, and last as long as those built of stone. The wood, in a green state is easily worked; it is used in building wharves, forts, etc., and would be excellent as railroad sleepers, or plank road stringers.

Bustle is not industry, any more than impudence is courage.

Evening Thoughts.

Thoughts of home come stealing o'er me,
At the solemn twilight hour;
And fond mem'ry pictures to me,
Every well known truant flower.

Then come thoughts of childhoods pleasures,
Like a sweet yet transient dream;
When my only wish'd for treasures,
Were but like a noonday gleam.

The fire upon the hearth is burning,
As it did in days of yore;
And I feel a restless yearning,
For the home I'll see no more.

And then I think of her that left me,
When my life was only spring;
She died and in the tomb we laid her,
A faded, withered, lifeless thing.

And as I sit and ponder sadly,
On my hard and lonely lot;
And upon the Cedar leaning,
Is a form that's unforgot.

In the Garden leaves are falling,
From our favorite willow tree;
And I hear her sweet voice calling,
Sister turn and follow me.

Follow me to yon bright heaven,
There your pilgrimage is o'er;
Follow me to yon bright heaven,
Where your cares are felt no more.

VIRGINIA.

ARRIVAL OF THE ATLANTIC.

NEW YORK, January 5th.

Steamer Atlantic arrived from Liverpool yesterday, at 5 o'clock, P. M.

The news from England is of very little importance. The reception of Kossuth in New York, is the theme most commented upon in the English Press.

France.

The balloting closed in Paris on Sunday evening, the 21st., amid complete tranquility, and without any undue excitement of any kind. The result of the balloting in twelve of the Arondisements of Paris was as follows:

For the proposition,	132.217.
Against,	80,161.

At 6 o'clock on Sunday, the returns from the departments received at Paris, gives the following results:

Yeas,	1,760,000.
Nays,	207,000.

Numerous deputations representing trades and manufactures of Paris, headed by M. Lemoureux, presented on Saturday an address to the President, expressive of their gratitude for the mensures he had adopted.

At Rouen, the votes were, affirmative, 28,095; at Lisle, affirmative, 50,272, nays 9,152; at Angiers, affirmative, 9,897, nays 1,625; at Amiens, the Bishop, clergy, and religious denominations voted openly in the affirmative.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, says, that in the arondisements of Paris, the inhabitants, more particularly the working men, are for the President, while in other quarters the nobles, &c., neutrality has been strongly manifested. The working classes generally manifest a strong trust in Louis Napoleon, believing that he is a Socialist in the proper sense of the word; that he is already contemplating, and that he will soon execute orders testifying his solicitude for them, and that he will apply doctrines that have their sympathies, and will give them a material well being and cheap existence.

The Burgeoise believe that the advantages to them for the prolongation of the power of Napoleon will be equally great.

The Bishop of Strasburg, addressed a letter to the clergy of his diocese, urging their vote in the affirmative. M. d'Moriny; Minister of the Interior, commanded the attendance of the Printers of Paris, and informed them that the intention of the Government was, to prohibit the publication, unless previously approved, of any pamphlets less than three sheets.

Victor Hugo made his escape out of France by means of a false passport.

PARIS, Monday, P. M.

The result of the election gives 2,900,000 votes for, and 600,000 against Louis Napoleon; a definite majority of 700,000 is expected for the President.

Gen. Cavagnac arrived in Paris on Saturday night, having been liberated that afternoon. As the election is now over the President thinks the time has arrived, with safety to himself, to set free the other generals. The report was current that they will be liberated.

The latest accounts represent the President as continuing in his determination to propose his abolition of the octrol duties. He is also determined to make some experiments in the protective system.

Extent and Locality of Minnesota.

Minnesota is about four times the extent of Ohio, and reaches six hundred and seventy-five miles from S. E. to N. W., and lies between N. latitude 42 deg. 30 min. and 50 deg. The centre of the Territory is about twelve hundred miles in a direct line, from each ocean, one thousand from the Gulf of Mexico, and eight hundred from Hudson's Bay.—[Pioneer.

A portion of Mountain in Tennessee, called Walden's Ridge, sunk with a tremendous noise a few days since. The gap in the timber is sixty or seventy hundred feet wide, and some two miles long, and reaching to an unknown depth. It is supposed to have been caused not by any convulsion of nature, but by the giving way of a portion of the foundation of the mountain.—[Dubuque Herald.

Thirty-Second Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2—P. M.

Senate—The galleries of the Senate were crowded at an early hour, and it was found necessary to lock the doors of the Senate Chamber to keep out the crowd who were expecting to see Kossuth.

Quite a number of petitions were presented, among these were found the Industrial Congress of New York, asking the recall of the Minister to France, and the suspension of all diplomatic and Commercial relations. After considerable debate it was laid on the table.

House—The speaker announced the appointment of Messrs. Colcock, Fitch and Meccham as Regents of the Smithsonian Institute.

The House then went into Committee of the whole, and took up the resolution for the appointment of a committee to wait upon Kossuth and introduce him to the House; the question being on the amendment offered by Mr. Yates on Wednesday, that the House could not look with indifference on Russian interference, it was rejected—yeas, 71; nays, 111.

WASHINGTON, January 14th.

SENATE—The Chairman laid before the Senate, a communication from the Department of the Interior, enclosing an estimate of the appropriations to meet the deficiencies in the expenses of that department, for the year 1852.

A bill making land warrants assignable was taken up and made the special order for to-morrow.

Numerous petitions were presented, and private reports made.

Mr. Banbury from the select committee, reported a bill providing for ascertaining and paying the claims of American citizens, on account of spoilations by the French, prior to 1801. He gave notice to call it up the first Monday in February.

Mr. Seward offered a resolution, calling for a copy of the inquiry, and all correspondence relative to the loss of the steamer Edith in 1849.

Mr. Dorland introduced a bill granting lands to the State of Arkansas, for Railroad purposes.

A resolution allowing the Post Office a clerk, was taken up, and debated at length.

HOUSE—After a personal explanation from Mr. Bernhisel, relative to the report of returned officers from Utah, the House renewed the consideration, to refer to the committee of the whole, a bill explanatory of the Bounty Land bill of 1848.

Reserved Lands in Iowa.

HOUSE OF REP., WASH., Dec. 16th.

Mr. Henn, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill, of which previous notice had been given, to relinquish to the State of Iowa lands reserved for salt springs therein; which was read a first and second time by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. H. I have also a resolution which I wish to offer, and I hope that it may be put upon its passage immediately, as it is a matter of importance to my constituents. It is a resolution, I apprehend, that will not be objected to by any one.

Mr. Evans. I object.

Additional Land Districts.

Mr. Henn. I have also another bill which I wish to introduce, and of which previous notice has been given. It is a bill creating three additional land districts in the State of Iowa.

Immensity of London.

If the streets of London were put together, they would extend 3000 miles in length; the main thoroughfares are traveled by 3000 omnibuses and 3500 cabs, employing 40,000 horses. In 1849, the metropolis alone consumed 1,600,000 quarters of wheat, 250,000 bullocks, 1,700,000 sheep, 28,000 calves, 35,000 pigs, and one market alone supplied, 4,024,400 head of game. London, the same year, ate 3,000,000 salmon, which was washed down by 43,200,000 gallons of porter and ale, 2,000,000 gallons of spirits, and 65,000 pipes of wine. 13,000 cows are yearly required to furnish London with milk; and reckoning two gallons a day from every cow, we have say 72,000 gallons of London peculiar consumed, if not enjoyed, by the London inhabitants. 360,000 gas lights fringe the streets. London's arterial or water system supplies the enormous quantity of 44,383,328 gallons per day. A thousand sails are employed in bringing annually to London 3,000,000 tons of coal; and to clothe and wait upon London people, we have no fewer than 23,517 tailors, 26,579 bootmakers, 40,000 milliners and dressmakers, and 168,601 domestic servants.

American Crystal Palace.

Edward Riddle and associates, propose to erect on Madison Square, New York, a building commensurate with the size of the ground, constructed with iron and glass, for the purpose of and Industrial Exhibition of all nations, and cause the same to be open to the public on the 15th of April next. "The building to be at least 600 feet in length, with a width of 200 feet, and the whole surmounted with a semi-cylindrical roof or dome made of glass, and of a sufficient height to make it one of the most imposing edifices ever erected in this or any other country, and involving an expenditure of at least $150,000." A memorial was on Monday evening referred to a special committee of the New York City authorities.

Great Discoveries of Gold near Quartzburg.

We understand all Mariposo county is in a state of excitement in consequence of the recent discovery of an auriferious hill on Bear Gulch, about six miles from Quartzburg, that has already yielded an account of gold almost surpassing belief.

It appears that there were indications of a quartz vein upon the hill, which attracted several Mexicans to the spot, who set about opening the ledge. They continued quietly at work for some time, when it was rumored around that they were working something richer than quartz mines.

Small parties of miners repaired to the spot who found them taking out the gold by the pound. Of course the news spread at once, and a general rush was immediately made, to take up claims on and around the hill.

The soil of this hill, we are informed, consists of quartz and slate, so much decomposed as to crumble in the hand like slaked lime, containing an astonishing amount of gold.

Our informant, for instances, states that the few Mexicans who first worked it, are believed to have taken out $550,000 before the Americans discovered it. Samples of this auriferious soil are now in the city, said to contain 20 per cent. of gold.

The gold is frequently found connected with, and adhereitg to decomposed scales of slate, a formation in which we have seen few accounts of its ever before having been found in this country, although very common in Russia.

The Mexicans have already sunk their holes in the spot upon which they first pitched, to the depth of twelve feet, and the yield is getting richer as they descend.

The gold bearing soil is evidently very deep, a circumstance that leads to the belief that the new discoveries are what are termed cayotte digings.

The whole hill, and in fact several hills around, are taken up. A town of some three hundred tents and houses has sprung up in a few days.

The vein or lead was discovered on the 4th of this month, and there must be from two to three thousand persons on the ground at this time.

A lump of gold, weighing sixty-nine and a half ounces, was taken out of Wood's Creek last week.—[San Francisco Herald of late date.

Sandwich Islands.

The only news of importance from these Islands is the following resolutions passed by the Parliament and signed by the King:

Be it resolved by the Nobles and Representatives of the Hawaiian Islands in the Legislature assembled, That in the sense of this House the demands of France are so clearly unjust and contrary to the laws of nations and to treaty, and the course pursued by her is so incompatible with the existence of a regular, independent government in these Islands, if France persists in such a course it will be the duty of the King to shield himself and his government from insult and oppression, by placing it under the protection of a friendly State, and should an emergency be so urgent as not to admit of the convening of the Legislative Assembly, it shall be left to his Majesty, and to the advice of his Privy Council, to consult the honor and safety of his kingdom according to his and there best judgment, and whatever he may so do, will be binding on the nation.

The Polynesian says that the United States Commissioner called officially at the foreign office, October 14th, and made known the views of his Government in regard to the past, present and future position of these Islands. The communication was of a nature tending to fortify the King in the permanent enjoyment of his sovereign right, and its purport was immediately forwarded to the King by a special messenger.—[Mo. Mr. Clay's Health.

A dispateth from Washington dated Jan. 1st., says that Mr. Clay's health is much worse. Kossuth accompanied by Gen. Cass had called to see him on the day before, but he was too unwell to see them.—[Hawk-Eye.

Austria.

VIENNA—Notes complaining of the dangerous support given politically in England, to Kossuth were presented to the English Foreign Office, by the Representatives of Russia.

Austria and the German Confederation.

On the 12th, a similar note was handed in to Lord Cowley, at Frankfort.

Latest from Europe.

FRANCE.—The President had distributed a large number of medals of honor among his partisans, and large sums of money among disabled soldiers.

Gen. Caviagnac had been released from prison, and was about to emigrate to Holland with his family.

Appearances are favorable to the re-election of Louis Napolean. It is expected that he will be returned by a large majority and it is said that he is draughting a new constitution for the Government of France. Paris is, of course, in a foment and no one seems to be able to predict what may happen from day to day.—[Dubuque Herald.

Wisdom Justified of Her Children.

In this article, we attempt to give "solid matter." No gas, no folly, and no designed weakness. Whatever any persons may think of us, mattereth little, so long as we feel ourself responsible for our acts, and accountable to the Great Judge of quick and dead in a day that is to come. We believe in God, the Eternal Father; and in his Son, Jesus Christ, the Savior of men. His, is the only name under Heaven in which, through which, or by which we can be saved. On that name we have hung our hopes for life, and nailed our banner to the Standard of the Cross. Blot that name out from among men, and let the hope perish that, for many years, we have indulged,—and we become like the storm-beaten tar, struggling amid the war of contending elements, with inevitable death before him. To prolong life under such circumstances, would be but to prolong misery and horror.

Touching the social relations of male and female,—the relation that man bears to his Maker, and to the spirit world, we have not thought very profitable for us to investigate. We have therefore, generally avoided, by our silence, the agitation of such matters: But the constant dingdong of some, and their great anxiety to be made wise, have induced us, on one occasion, to allow our folly to take part in the drama.

It is not always the most wise and profitable to give a thoughtless, inexperienced, and inconsiderate child, a true and undisguised account of its origin: But as time passes on, the mind is led, gradually, into a knowledge of this department of nature's laws: So also, there are many things connected with the origin of Christianity, and its early days, that may not be the most wise and profitable to investigate; but as the mind silently and secretly follows up the channel of cause and effect, philosophical truths are gathered from every branch of the tree of life. The laws of nature or of true philosophy, are no other than the laws of nature's God,—co-existent and co-eternal with himself. No sacred truth revealed from Heaven, can oppose any truth revealed in the broad Book of Nature.

Though some may consider us anti-Christian, immoral, and an outcast: yet our particular views on several subjects have not been made manifest through our columns. We have our own notions and opinions; and though we do not feel compelled to publish them always,—we sometimes answer a certain class according to their folly, lest they be wise in their own conceit; and while they "strain at a gnat," we sometimes show them that they have, indeed, "swallowed a cammel."

The great anxiety of our first parents to become wise in truths unlawful for them to understand, plunged them deep into the abyss of wretchedness and woe. And if some unlawful truths smoked out, shall tend to blind the eyes and darken the way to the Tree of Life, of him who claims the honor and credit of raising the smoke, he has only obtained what he sought. Heaven can as well guard the way of the tree of life against the unworthy by their raising dark clouds of offensive smoke, as by a flaming sword in an angel's hand. There is a scripture which says: "Let their eyes be darkened, that they cannot see, let their ears be heavy that they cannot hear, and their hearts hardened that they cannot understand!" The same cloud that shed a halo of light around the favored and devoted heads of God's chosen Sons in Egypt's crimson Sea, drew the sable curtains of midnight darkness around the vision of the Sons of night who had decreed to afflict God's chosen people, by reason of the myrky vapor that chilled and benumbed their finer sensibilities, and who had chosen darkness rather than light. Now for the Cloud! Was not the great and fundamental law of the perpetuity of our race to our first parents, "to multiply and replenish the earth?" Did Jesus Christ fulfil, magnify, and make that law honorable by living in disobedience to its requirements, or by obeying its sacred and holy injunctions? If Jesus Christ did not marry on account of that institution being debasing to his character, opposed to his immaculate purity, and dishonorable and sinful for him to indulge in; why should his professed servants marry, who say that they are commanded to be like him, and claim that he is set forth for their example that they should walk in his steps? If an inferior claims that it is lawful and right for him to marry, (though sanctified) why should he deny this privilege to his superior, or argue that it would be inconsistent with his purity and holy life to enter that solemn and time-honored institution? The Savior never claimed a degree of purity above "sanctification." If these holy men would be consistent in their position, they would go to the Roman Catholic Clergy and learn a lesson of conformity to their notions of the Savior's mode of life, confess their error in presuming to violate the Savior's example (who descended below all things) by living in a married state, by which they have become carnal, sensual and corrupt!

If it was not sinful for the Great and Eternal Father, who has not a body composed of the crude substance of flesh and blood, but of a more refined substance, to beget a Son in his own image and likeness through a virgin possessing a body of both flesh and blood,—is it any more strange or wonderful that his Son, possessing the natural elements of our bodies, should also yield obedience to the great law of Nature, and of Nature's God, "to multiply and replenish the earth?" If his followers are his seed, as has been alledged: May not his own children follow him and then be his seed in a two fold sense,—even like the natural descendant of Abraham who, by faith, is baptized into Christ and thus puts him on. He is Abraham's seed by nature, and is Abraham's seed by faith, and an heir according to the promise.

If the foregoing will suffice, we will drop the subject, and pursue the even tenor of our way: but if this shall fail to be satisfactory, we will not promise what the next may be. To the Saints who are under our charge and watch care, we would say: Let the course of your life be marked by an observance of the most rigid and scrupulous principles of virtue, integrity, truth, honor and loyalty to your God and Country, that any people cherish or entertain. Honor to whom honor, custom to whom custom, tribute to whom tribute; and observe every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake. Let every man and woman enjoy their own notions of religion, undisturbed and unmolested; Owe no man any thing but love and good will; and be sure that when you leave this country to go West, leave honorably, so that you can return again if you choose, or go to any other part of this world, or even to the world to come; that if your works follow you, you may not be ashamed.

Highly Important from Washington.

We have just read a private letter from Washington to a friend of ours in this town; an extract from which contains the following startling intelligence. "Please say to Elder Hyde that the Judges and Secretary in Private chat are making or trying to make capital of his burning the grass on the road. They say that Gen. Brown has informed them that Elder Hyde burned and caused to be burned all the grass, so that they, the officers and Babbitt would have none for their animals. They sent this word to the officers commanding at Fort Kearney and Laramie. I told him that it was untrue as far as it related the officers or himself."

The writer of this letter came through with us in company, and knows that it is false, and there are men now in this town who never were Mormons, that came through with us also; and they know that the statements are false. There were some twenty-five men of us in company, and it is a little strange that none of them but Gen. Brown, should know our diabolical purpose in setting the grass on fire. The only way that he came to find it out, we think, was, that we were opposed to his land and naval fire-works, and did not think it advisable for the Mormons at Salt Lake to give him several hundred thousand dollars to show them how to burn up an invading army in the Kanyons by his stream of liquid fire. This in our view is why he would misrepresent us; and because the Mormons would not countenance his fire work, is the reason why he is opposed to them.

In coming in across the Plains last fall, we were very cautious and particular about allowing the fire to get out from our camps until we arrived in the neighborhood of the "Clear Slough," about one hundred miles east of Fort Kearney. In that region we fired the grass, we confess; but not until the Indians had fired it, whom we met all along the way, going up into the Buffalo country. It was burning before us, and all around us; and we made this remark—that if the Indians were burning the grass in their own country, they could not object to our burning it. We did set the grass on fire for a little boyish sport, in several places: But was it to injure Mr. Babbitt or the officers or any one else? God forbid! That is no trait of our character,—neither was it ever, from the days of our childhood, to injure any person in that way; but from a lad we have ever had a strong propensity for innocent sport; and to break the monotony of the cold and dreary scenery over the Plains, we occasionally fired the grass for the sole pleasure and sport of seeing it burn—the Indians having set the example. We do not say that we did right; and we do not know that we did harm to any one: We know that no harm was intended.

Though we may have indulged in boyish folly; we have not received a watch in honorable security for a just debt, and then meanly and dishonorably given it up, nor pocketed the sum for which it was pledged.

Wanted Immediately.

At this office on subscription for the Guardian; two thousand bushels of corn; one thousand bushels of corn meal, clean and good—five hundred bushels of good sized potatoes; and three thousand dollars in cash.

Corn received at 20 cents per bushel—corn meal at 25 cents, and potatoes at 25 cents. Cash will be received at one hundred cents on the dollar if it is of the best kind. Also five hundred bushels of oats at 25 cents. Now hand in your dimes, potatoes, corn meal and oats; and if we don't keep you posted up upon all the great affairs of this nation and generation, we will get the Sentinel to join teams with us, and you must certainly feel safe when the "Guardian and Sentinel" are both on the alert in your behalf. Also one hundred tons of prairie hay.

Who Shall Draw the Highest Prize!

Miss "VIRGINIA," and "BY MYSELF," may be found on our first page. Their poetic effusions are worthy of notice. They are young school girls, and are contending for the prize. A piece of prose may also be found, in this number, the production of one of these fair competitors. The board of Judges will please pass their opinion upon the merits of these productions, and hand the same to us in writing which we will publish in our next. Then the little dames may call on us, and we will gentelly cash over to them their prize money according to the verdict rendered.

Falsehood.

What can more effectually destroy confidence, interrupt the peace and harmony of society, sour and poison the feelings, and rile up the passions, than falsehood? It is the poison of life—the bane of social happiness and enjoyment—the thief of innocence and purity—the wretched and guilty murderer of neighborhood tranquility, the midnight assassin of individual character, and the high-way robber of virtue and integrity. While falsehood renders its retailer odious in the eyes of the rigid,—it excites pity in the sympathetic without love, compassion in the generous without confidence, and chills the very avenues of social and friendly intercourse. Shun falsehood as you would the viper, the asp, or the scorpion. Though she may appear beautiful to the eye, yet the arrows of death are shot from her lips. Give her no place in thy heart, and she will never mis-guide thy tongue.

Indians and grog shops,
SMALL POX and Squaws,
Are the jewels of tip tops,
Who care not for laws.

Why are so many Indians on our side of the river? Because, we presume they get whisky somewhere; and we know not where it is, unless where they drum, dance, and probably do other things. When the Church Council was our only tribunal here, we had no grog shops—Indians were not allowed to stalk abroad on this side, and vice and confusion were comparatively unknown. By this, we do not wish to be understood that our Statute Laws or our legal tribunals are not good; but we mean to be understood that those who choose not to be wholly under the law of our Church Council, are not so zealous or conscientious about maintaining good order under the code, as we wish they were. The Indians have been rotten with the small pox, and will be very likely to sow the seeds of that foul disease among us, unless some measures, stronger than milk and water, are adopted to keep them away. Our views and feelings are known about them: But there are so many sympathizers and tender-hearted folks towards the "poor Indians," that they can feed them a little for the sake of buying some old robe that they have had the small pox on, or moccasins &c., affording them a fine opportunity to spy out their chances to steal horses and mules when they come to go on their hunt in the spring. They smell as though they had burrowed with the mice and pole cats as they pass one, forty yards to the windward. But their commodities appear to please some, however musty, strong, or rancid they may be.

As some fault has been found with us by the sympathizers on account of our views, we leave operative measures for others. B. D. Harris, Esq., and Mr. Rose, Sub-Indian Agent, for Utah, thought we were very cruel last Spring when some of the Indians were whipped out of town, having just before killed two or three head of cattle on the prairie, and were chased from their carcases into town. They felt as though it was their duty, as officers of the Government, to notice such things and to report them to the proper department. We gave them to understand, in rather a brief and emphatic tone, that the Government had sent them to Utah, and not to this place to regulate us. We told them that Maj. Barrow was the Agent here to attend to reporting us if we were unmercifully outragious towards the Indians. And we do know from experience that the only way they can be managed where there are no troops, is to whip them and send them home. We do not want to kill them unless we catch them in the act of committing an outrage. We have almost, invariably, acted according to the instructions of the Agents in charge here. We will here insert Maj. Barrow's letter to us, dated at the Agency, January, 24, 1852.

ORSON HYDE, ESQ.:

MY DEAR SIR:—I will be much obliged, if you will advise your people to "Hickory" every Indian, be he Chief or what not, they can find on that side of the river. While a traffic, carried on with impunity everywhere is allowed, it is beyond the power of any one to prevent them from crossing. Liquor is dealt out to them in such quantities as they may wish, and it is at the door of these offenders of Law and good order, that all the evil consequent upon such traffic lies.

Were I a citizen of Iowa, I would "trot such fellows through," though their wrath and animosity should fall upon me ten fold. Let me here do you the justice to say, that upon all occasions, whether as a Public Journalist or in your individual capacity, you have been ready to lend a helping hand to put down this dangerous and infamous practice. But while there are some who knowing their duty, dare maintain it, there are many others who sympathize so much, with the "Poor Indian" that their feelings of tenderness and charity, compel them to pat their backs, slick their hairs, and pass them very gently into their back doors. Too many such beings inhabit Pottawatamie County, particularly along the banks of the Missouri, to admit of any one controling the Indians.

Very truly your friend,
And Obedient Servant,
J. E. BARROW, Indian Agent.

Is there not moral force and stamina enough in the citizens of this town who expect to remain here, to call a public meeting, and adopt necessary measures to clear the country of the Indians, and to enforce the law against these grog shops, that are a curse to their proprietors and patrons? The Mormons will co-operate in all good measures. Do the owners of buildings where this traffic is carried on, know that their buildings are held responsible for the fine and penalty of this offence against the law. With the men we have no warfare: but we are at war with their traffic, and ever have been. Though, when the old law was about becoming obsolete, and the new Code coming in force, we advised that men should have a little time to arrange and close their business; and no "snap judgment" taken upon them: but those times are gone by.

Has any lawyer licenced grog shops to continue their business, and promised to defend and clear them if prosecuted, for the fee of what he wants to drink from now on? If so, we should be inclined to move that he remain a lawyer not much longer. We are only led to ask this question from the fact, that those lawyers who are not often seen at the grog shops, are by no means alluded to. If there are any such lawyers, (according to report) sworn to demean themselves uprightly, and to support the laws of the country, we should move that legal steps first be taken with them; and when they are disposed of, take the grog shops in hand next. If a grog shop is complained of, or informed against, we can guess who would be on the side of the defence, inspired with spirit akin to his cause.

What is our State's Attorney about? Poor fellow, he is sick and lame, but getting better. Look to these matters, and haul in the slack before the line is gone altogether.

In the eastern part of the State, grog shops are compelled to bow to the law; and every good citizen will say that they should be required to do it here also. When this is done, there will be fewer Indians, scattering the Small Pox through the Country.

Take Stock off the Rushes!

Warm weather is approaching. The Rush bottoms are breaking up, and stock will get mired if allowed to remain. It is time they were brought away for their own good. Now, owners may do just as they like. We have done our duty. The possession of your stock is your best security.

Northward, the Tide of Emigration Passes --The Ship Given Up--Steam Ferry Boat.

The attention of our enterprizing friends is respectfully directed to the advertisement of Messrs. Ewing & Harris, of Lexington, Missouri.

They offer a great bargain in the sale of their fine STEAM FERRY BOAT. It was designed to be used there for crossing the River. But in consequence of the emigration wisely tearing North, and crossing at this point, they have comparatively little use for their Boat where it now is. They, therefore, confess the corn, and want to sell their Boat. It is needed here, as the prospects are great for a great and powerful emigration. Should it be purchased and brought here, it will undoubtedly take the business. And when the ferrying season is over, it can be converted into a floating Steam Mill, and being on the River, wood will ever be handy and cheap. Such a floating Mill, moored at any convenient point, would almost build up a town on the River. Property that cost at least four thousand dollars, we presume may be bought now for half the money if application be made soon to Ewing & Harriss, at Lexington, Mo., or at this Office.

For the Frontier Guardian

Hope.

Hope is the light that cheers us on our onward course. Let the present appear ever so dark, she still points the forward way, and whispers peace. Without her, life itself would be a burden, even, in our happiest hour; but when sorrow comes it would be insupportable without hope to cheer us with her smiling face. Who can, while thinking of the power of hope, blame the poor heathen for worshiping Vanadis, the Goddess of hope? for he, in all the ignorance of his untutored mind, fancies her the guiding spirit of his thoughts. She is the prime mover of all our actions. Without the hope of hereafter, what incentive would there be to noble and virtuous conduct, particularly if it cross the present wish? Without hope, what would stir up the mind to thought and study? Nothing! Life, without hope, would be a dark abyss—an empty void, with no ray of light to dispel the utter darkness and gloom that shroud the heart. But how different when she is near! Then all is sunshine, peace, and harmony! but if a cloud, for an instant, pass over the face, she drives it away and shines the brighter for being a moment obscured. It is hope that makes the lively scholar lean over the dull book, committing page after page to memory, because of the hope that it will be useful in future life. Thus we can trace the nobler attributes of the soul, back to the gentle power of hope. She pervades the minds of the innocent, for they hope for the accomplishment of their plans and wishes. Without hope, there would be no education; for what would be the use, if we had no hope of its being a benefit? We should have nothing to elevate us above the brute creation were it not for her beautifying spirit. What can be a more gloomy sight than to see a person bereft of hope? 'Tis but seldom we see so sad a spectacle; but it sometimes crosses our path and we see one who hopes for no happiness in this world nor in the one to come. What influence but hope causes the writer to bring forth his productions under the cold eye of criticism? It is no other! For he could not bear their tearing to pieces his best works and giving them an altered form, were it not for the hope of causing him to improve himself and of benefitting others in that severe School where critics are the masters.

Vanadis, bright Goddess
Waves her imperial wing,
Traverses the broad world's expanse
And causes man to sing.
She is the first great cause
And the talismanic word,
By which the noblest, great and wisest
Of our thoughts are stirred.

BY MYSELF.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30th, 1851.

EDITOR OF THE GUARDIAN:

DEAR SIR:—Since my departure from my frontier home on a journey eastward, on business, I have passed through the central portions of Illinois, Michigan, and Ohio. In these States, as well as in the western part of New York, it has been my good fortune to meet many returned Californians, who, during the last two years have crossed the plains toward the mines, and a large portion of them having taken the northern route, starting from Kanesville; and it gave me great satisfaction, as I presume it will you, to hear that they uniformly agree in asserting that this route possesses many striking advantages over the southern route for emigrants bound either to the mines, or to Oregon. On comparing their notes of travel with multitudes whom they met in California, they are fully satisfied that they escaped many difficulties which befel the emigrants by the southern roads.

The principal advantages of this over the southern route are, better roads, a plenty of good grass, and frequent springs and streams of pure water for their cattle; whilst the climate, placed between the two extremes, was always genial, pleasant, and healthy, never was so warm as to reduce the traveler and his cattle by sultry heat, and always just cool enough to render the traveling agreeable. Many of these persons are making active preparations to return to California and Oregon during the approaching Spring by way of Kanesville, and I am satisfied from these and other indications that our already thriving village is to be the point of departure for a large Spring emigration, and is ultimately, and at no distant day, to become the most important of our western posts, and to increase rapidity in population, wealth and prosperity.

I notice by a late copy of our paper that large numbers of Mormons are intending to vacate their improved lands in the Spring, and remove to Salt Lake. The unsurpassed fertility of our soil, already so widely known among our eastern neighbors, the excellent facilities for commercial access to the Valley of the Mississippi, as well as the wide field for enterprise opened up for supplying the increasing emigration through our section, render it morally certain that these vacated lands will find ready purchasers, by actual settlers from among the enterprising farmers of the northern and eastern States.

Most Respectfully,
Your Ob't Servant,
MARTIN L. BENSON.

Our Candid Opinion.

It is our opinion that any minister or clergyman differing in his religious views from the Mormons, will do his cause more honor and himself also, to preach his own doctrine, than to interfere with the doctrine of the Mormons. Our foreman can handle type most admirably: but an inexperienced hand could hardly set up an article that could be read. A musician can charm the ear with his instruments; but how tedious to be kept awake by a new beginner at a neighboring window on a summer's night! If they have the true light, they will clear their garments by holding it up, and letting it shine. Before this agent, darkness is compelled to retire. Mormonism is forced through a rough, rugged, and mountainous generation; and if it has some crooks and windings, hard to follow by those who are not in the current; it, like the crystal mountain stream, grateful to the weary traveler, seeks its level—would go straight if mountains and hills would allow it; but forced to turn and shift its course, as the lamb is often compelled to do by the wolf, it pours its life giving tribute into the vast and mighty ocean. They who ride on the current of truth, have little difficulty in marking its course; while the stationary observer might conclude that it would surely flow in a certain direction; but the stream being shut from his view by the spurs and interlocking of mountain ranges and gorges, it is liable to flow in almost an opposite direction from what he calculated. Even so with the current of Mormonism to the standing observer. He knows not where or in what shape, he may see it next. But flow with it, and you understand it all the time. He that walketh in the light, hath no occasion of stumbling.

Great Fire in Philadelphia--Loss $2,000,000--Loss of Life!

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27th.

A destructive fire broke out at 2 o'clock this afternoon in Hart's building, corner of Chestnut and South streets. The whole building, together with several Book and Music stores, and Park's Restaurant, were destroyed. The flames extended to Shakspeare buildings from the opposite side of Sixth street, adjoining the Chestnut street Theatre, which were also destroyed.

About 4 o'clock the walls of Hart's building fell into the street, instantly killing two colored men, and injuring several firemen and policemen. It is feared that several other persons were killed.

The fine block on the west side of Sixth street, from Chestnut to Carpenter street, is a mass of ruins, besides the buildings above named. Johnson's Law Book Store, and several other valuable stores on the north side of Fifth street, and north west side of Chestnut street, were entirely burnt out.

The fire was got under at 9 o'clock, P. M. Police officer Johnson reported killed.

Loss estimated at $2.000,000.

Drs. Schenck and J. W. Johnson, Book-dealers, Blackstone, Getz & Buck, and J. W. More, Booksellers, are the principal losers.

Affairs in Utah.

In the House of Representatives, on the 6th inst.:

Mr. Bernhisel rose and said: I rise for the purpose of protesting against the publication, by the returning officers of the United States for the Territory of Utah, in Missouri papers, and now in the New York Herald, and before it is communicated to Congress, of a report extraordinary in its details, of high crimes and misdemeanors committed in that Territory, and calculated, if not intended, to prejudice and render odious a distant and dependent people, and to involve them in explicable difficulties with the General Government. I ask for them a suspension of public opinion, of executive and legislative action, until the truth can be elicited touching the grave charges contained in an ex parte report.

Mr. Carter desired to inquire of the gentleman from Utah whether he himself did not procure the publication which appeared in the New York Herald of yesterday morning, and whether it was not a garbled report?

Mr. Bernhisel replied that he neither furnished the article referred to, nor caused it to be furnished.

Mr. Carter said that his information was from the Department—not exactly from the Department; but his information was that the delegate from Utah was the only personage who had access to the report; and he had reason to suppose that the gentleman had caused the communication which appeared in the Herald to be sent to that paper. If such was the case, he (Mr. C.) should like to have an investigation of the matter.

GRAND GULF, MISS., Jan. 15.

About 10 o'clock this morning the steamer George Washington, on her way from Cincinnati to New Orleans, when a short dis- from here, exploded, after which she took fire and was entirely consumed. Capt. Irwin was badly scalded, and the first clerk, Carrol, killed. Many that were not killed by the explosion were afterwards burned. About 20 persons are missing. The books and papers were lost. She had two barges in tow, loaded with stock and freight. Both were burned.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.

At 6 o'clock this A. M. a fire broke out at No. 13, Bowery, occupied by Mr. Hines as a chair factory. Mr. Smith suffered a heavy loss but is partially insured. Mr. Hines is insured $2000.

Several other stores also burned—Total loss not less than $100,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.

Mr. Webster is preparing a response to a recent letter of Hulsemann, which was drawn forth by Mr. Webster's speech at the Kossuth dinner; its tenor has not transpired, but it is not impossible that the Austrian Charge may have his passports tendered him.

There is something extraordinary going on in the Navy Department; it is actively engaged in ordering vessels to prepare for sea, and collecting supplies and munitions of war; among other things the Mediterranean squadron is to be strengthened by two additional vessels.

Favors.

Hon. John M. Bernhisel will accept our thanks for public documents, and Hon. B. Henn for a copy of the "Daily Globe."

Attention.

Captains of emigrating companies, you are hereby notified to attend a regular monthly meeting at the Big Pigeon tabernacle, on the first Saturday and Sunday in March, to commence at 10 o'clock a. m., each day. Also a schedule of your proceedings is wanted, with the total amount added up, showing the situation of each company. A general attendance of the Saints is requested, come prepared to stay two days. As our hollidays are over and we have had a good season of rejoicing, let us now go up to Big Pigeon Tabernacle, and show to our Father in heaven, that we are willing to spend a few days in worshipping His Great and Holy Name.

Another Outrage upon the American Flag.

It will be seen by reference to the Venezuelan correspondence that it is not upon the Nicaraguan coast alone that our commerce needs protection, nor are the British colored functionaries the only ones who insult our flag. The second officer of an American vessel at Maracaibo, after being insulted and struck by a negro pilot, chastised and put him on shore; consequently, the other pilots refused to take the ship to sea. In this dilemma the captain undertook to navigate his craft himself, and for so doing is brought back to port by the authorities, and detained for weeks, with a valuable cargo to await the decision of the head of the government of Caracas, who, if we are not mis-informed, is also a half-breed. Whether he will be eventually released or not, depends we presume, entirely upon the good will and pleasure of the semi-barbarian potentate who has already driven into exile the patriotic Paez, and established in his own free and happy country a despotism which, in the exercise of its power at home and abroad, resembles more the defunct regency of Algiers than any other nuisance of the sort we can call to mind. This is not the first nor the second time that we have suffered insult and depredation of the same description from this petty tyrant; and we do trust, for the honor and credit of the country, it may be the last. We pay some nine millions a year for the support of a navy to protect our commerce; and yet with whole squadrons rotting in our navy yards, and hundreds of gallant officers begging and entreating for employment, our mercantile marine, and the flag which should cause it to be respected, are at the mercy of every contemptible soi disant power that can muster a company of half-naked negroes and arm them with muskets. Our fleets seem to be sent to sea for show, and not for use. They make an imposing display where there is no occasion for their services, and where they are wanted they are not. It is in consequence of this imbecile and inefficient policy on the part of our administration that our national character has suffered so severely and in so many ways during the past year.[—Union.

The Key Unturned.

We clip the following from one of our exchanges which shows clearly, the manner in which our illustrious President, Millard Fillmore, views the subject of neutrality:

I am happy, Governor Kossuth, to welcome you to this land of freedom; and it gives me pleasure to congratulate you upon your release from a long confinement in Turkey, and your safe arrival here. As an individual I sympathised deeply with you in your brave struggle for the independence and freedom of your native land. The American people can never be indifferent to such a contest, but our policy as a nation in this respect has been uniform from the commencement of our government; and my own views, as the Chief Executive Magistrate of this nation, are fully and freely expressed in my recent message to Congress, to which you have been pelased to allude. They are the same, wether speaking to Congress here or to the nation of Europe. Should your country be restored to independence and freedom, I should then wish you as the greatest blessing you could enjoy—a restoration to your native land; but should that never happen, I can only repeat my welcome to you and your companions here, and pray that God's blessing may rest upon you wherever your lot may be cast.

Revolution in Chili.

We have been kindly furnished private advices, in addition to the Chilian papers, to the day of sailing of the steamer, 25th October, by which we are enabled to give the following comprehensive summary of Chilian news:

A Battle Fought.

The Rebel army, 1,300 strong, commanded by Carrera and Arteagua, was met by the Government troops, 850 strong, at Petorca, about 40 leagues from Santiago, on the 14th inst. They fought for three hours by the Petorca clock: the result was the total defeat of the former, with a loss of 70 killed, 200 wounded, and 400 prisoners, including 36 officers. Carrera and Arteagua have not been taken; Government army lost 15 killed and 50 wounded. Four hundred of the troops have gone by sea to the South to join Bulnes' army, the remainder will sail on the 26th for Coquimbo. So that the affair in the North may be considered quelled. In the South, Gen. Cruz has an army of 400 regulars, and 2,500 militia, the latter badly clothed and armed. He has not yet budged from the province of Conception. Bulnes in a few days will be on the Frontier of that province, with 1,000 troops of the line, and 300 militia men, all well armed, clothed and paid. Bulnes appears to be determined to run no risks, and is acting cautiously, but he will no doubt soon put an end to the Revolution.

The following account is an extract from a letter written by an American citizen in Valparaiso to a firm in this city, expressing his views of the difficulties which exist there. The date of it is the 26th Oct., the day of the steamer sailing:

Our revolutionary difficulties are still going on, and it is anticipated that there will be a battle fought on the 27th or 28th inst., at Talca.

The late movement of the English Admiral, in taking the steamer Arauco (formerly the Valcan) from the insurgents, when she was flying the Chilian flag, and owned by parties in Talcahuano, is looked upon as an infringement of the English treaty with the United States. It is said that the English got $30,000 from the Montt party for this transaction.

Should Gen. Cruz be succesful and the revolution succeed, the English would meet with but little favor from this Government. —[N. Y. Sun.

Louis Napoleon, it is stated, has ordered the bank of France to suspend specie payments of any great run upon the bullion.

Steamboat Disasters.

By the arrival of the Hannibal yesterday, we learned that on Wednesday night, the splendid steamer Dunkirk, had run upon a log in Rush Bend, and sunk in deep water.

This vessel had only left here a few hours previous, and the rumor of her sinking caused a general consternation. Later advices informed us that she was broken in two and would prove a total wreck. Capt. McClean and several of her passengers, came up on the Hannibal.

As we have before stated, the Dunkirk left here on Wednesday, with a New Orleans trip. We subjoin a list of her cargo; 668 sacks corn, 2,300 sacks oats and bran, 200 bbls of apples, 100 boxes soap, 100 bbls beef, 1200 barrels flour, 65 tierces of hams, 100 bbls whisky, 110 kegs shot, 100 coils of rope and 65 head of cattle. The Dunkirk was built in Cincinnati, last October, and cost $35,000. Capt. McClean who owned one-half, states that risks had been taken to Cincinnati to the amount of $22,000. We learned last night that Capt. McClean had procured a boat to go to the relief of the Dunkirk.

Loss of the Consignee.—These accidents, of late, have occurred in such rapid succession that it is almost impossible to keep pace with them. Yesterday evening the respectable house of Runyan, Hillman & Co., received by the Morse line a dispatch from Cape Girardeau, announcing the sinking of the Consignee at Bainbridge, on Thursday night. From other advices we learned that the boat would probably prove a total loss.

The Consignee left port on Wednesday, with a light freight, and was bound for Nashville. On her upward trip, she had been considerably injured by the ice, and at the time of her sinking was not in first rate condition. The C. was a medium sized boat, and was built at Wheeling in the Fall of 1848, about 18 month ago. She was bought for the Cumberland River trade, and last season made regular trips to this City. She was commanded by Capt. Gooch, and was insured at Nashville.—[Union.

The European Revolutionists.

The N. Y. Morning Star has the following paragraph:

"The fulcrum of the leaver which is to upheave thrones has been established. It is said and we believe truly, that the Revolutionary fund already accumulated in England and France amounts to twenty million dollars. Mazzini it is said has five millions of dollars for Itally alone. The popular chiefs expelled from the various countries of Europe during the reactionary movement of 1849, are in full correspondence, it is said, and we may well believe the time is not distant, when the despotic governments of Europe will have enough to do at home, without volunteering to assist each other in the work of subjugation, in defiance of the armed intervention of England, France and the United States."

Kossuth in Hungary, Mazzini in Italy, and Kinkel in Germany—a noble Triumvirate—Before eventful 1852 closes, may we write them down as the Liberators of Europe! The month of May next is said to be the time fixed for the German revolution.

Worth Remembering.

Some of the intended visitors of California and the Isthmus may find these suggestions of the Panama Star worthy of attention:

We beseech our brethren of the press in the United States, to warn their readers never to venture from their homes on a journey to California, accross the Isthmus, without abundance of means for their journey, and something in addition in the case of sickness and other casualities. Neither pen nor tongue can tell what an accumulated amount of suffering, ending too frequently in death, has grown out of men's coming here without means to either go forward or return to their homes. The heart of every American citizen residing here is daily pained at the misery and degradation his fellow-countrymen are reduced to, because they have no means wherewith to sustain life; and the constant application for pecuniary assistance from such, has caused nearly all to harden themselves against every impulse of benevolence.

Prospective Famine.—A new and terrible foe to despotism has arisen in Germany. It is—Hunger! A famine is threatened, for the prices of grain are constantly on the increase. The Prussian Government has already caused purchases to be made in Southern Russia with the hope of warding off suffering.—[Iowa Reporter.

Important Foreign Intelligence.—In addition to the telegraph report of the news by the Franklin, we have received a despatch which states that the London Times represents the relations between Louis Napoleon and the british government to be unsatisfactory. The same is stated with regard to France and Austria, the latter power being described as looking upon President Napoleon's power as merely provisional, and preliminary to the restoration of legitimacy.

The subject of an alliance of England with America for the preservation of the cause of freedom against the encroachments of despotism is exciting lively interest throughout England.

The Emperor of Morocco has refused to treat with the Freneh citizens.

It will be seen that the Atlantic has arrived with dates to the 20th ultimo. Returns from France show that Louis Napoleon has been elected President by an immense majority.—[Wash. Repub.

California.

The latest accounts from San Diego indicate most decidedly, that the Indian disturbances are at an end, and Gov. McDougal had disbanded the volunteers which had been formed. The weather at San Francisco was delightful, and from the interior they speak of frequent and heavy rains, which have proved of great benefit to the vegetation, and have raised the river from 5 to 10 feet: sufficient rain however, had not fallen to effect the gold seekers at the dry diggings or the facilities they require for successful work. The papers contain contrary statements relative to the gold discoveries in Bear Valley. —[Brunswicker.

Great Fire in Buffalo.

Buffalo, Dec. 27.

The most severe fire we have experienced for years visited us last night. Fire broke out in the magnificent buildings on Main st., opposite the Mansion House, and spread as far as Spalding's Exchange Block, Erie Hall and Bank of Attica. Several spacious stores were entirely consumed. It extended down Commercial and Erie streets, burning several valuable buildings on each street. The coldness of the night and the scarcity of water rendered it impossible to subdue the flames.

It is impossible at present to estimate any thing like the immense loss. The offices of most of our leading lawyers were in the Exchange. The extensive Shoe store of Williams & Co., and of O. H. P. Williams, the large Tailor shop of L. B. Hibbard, the Confectionary of F. Heth & Co., and some ten or twelve other large stores were entirely destroyed. The flames are now got so far under as to be prevented from spreading.

During the time the above fire was raging, an alarm was given up town. It proceeded from Swan street, where private dwellings were discovered on fire. The firemen could not divide their forces, and three handsome dwellings were consumed.

Failures in New York.—The New York Tribune says:

"We regret to hear of the suspension of the highly respectable House of Thatcher, Tucker & Co., domestic goods commission merchants. There are also two other failures, but not of sufficient importance to name."—[Times.

The Emperor of Russia has been obliged to pass a law to prevent his subjects from mutilating themselves to avoid military service. Sixteen hundred persons had mutilated themselves, to avoid enrolment, between January 1850, and July 1851.

The New York Post thinks that the result of Napoleon's usurpation will be either his flight or the loss of his head.

STEAM FERRY BOAT FOR SALE.

THE undersigned offer for sale their Steam Ferry Boat, now lying at the Lexington Wharf.

Said Boat is in good repair and condition, and has an Engine of great strength and power. We offer the Boat at about half of the original cost of such boats, for the reason that the business here will not justify running a Steam Boat.

For terms apply to the undersigned, or to the Editor of the Frontier Guardian.

EWING & HARRIS.

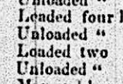
TO THE TRAVELING PUBLIC.



THE undersigned have purchased Smither's Ferry, on the Nodaway River, at Hollister's Mills, on the road leading from St. Joseph and Savannah to Council Bluffs, Kanesville, Linden, Austin, and Plattesville; this being the nearest and best road to said places or towns. They have fitted their boat with oars, in case of high water, and good ropes across the river; have good attentive hands to manage the boats, and have put the ferriage down as low as possible, as you will see by the following list of charges:

Loaded wagon and two yoke of oxen	40 cts.
Unloaded " " " " "	25 "
Loaded four horse wagon	40 "
Unloaded " "	25 "
Loaded two " "	25 "
Unloaded " "	20 "
Man and horse	10 "
Oxen per yoke	5 "
Horses and Cows, each	3 "
Sheep and hogs	3 "

Only treble those rates will be charged when the water is from bluff to bluff. They will also pay strict attention to having the said road kept in as good repair as possible, through Andrew and Holt Counties, and they hope, by strict attention to said Ferry, to merit a share of the public patronage.

St. Joseph, Missouri.

E. H. HAYCRAFT, having purchased the interest of Dr. J. B. HOWARD in the Drug Store of Haycraft & Howard, still continue the Drug business at the old stand where he will be much pleased to see all the former customers of the house.

He wishes it to be distinctly understood that he will sell as cheap as good articles in his line can be sold in Upper Missouri; and if an article is not as is represented it may be returned.

As all of his sales are made for cash in hand he can afford to sell very low, and he invites the attention of his customers to this particular fact.

He is the wholesale agent for JOHN BULL'S and S. P. TOWNSEND's SARSAPARILLA. Receiving his supplies directly from the Proprietor's, and can furnish them at St. Louis Wholesale prices, thus saving the expense of freight, and risk in transportation.

The celebrated Mexican Mustang Liniment is also offered by the dozen or gross at the wholesale rates.

The Frontier Guardian.

POETRY.

THE FRONTIER GUARDIAN.

BY NORTH PIGEON JOE.

There is no paper in the land
That ever yet has come to hand
That takes as just and bold a stand,
As the noble Frontier Guardian.

Truth's the motto she doth hold
And the same to me she doth unfold;
Richer far than Western gold,
Is the noble Frontier Guardian.

In every part of this wide world
Her noble banner is unfurled,
And every Saint throughout the world,
Should praise the Frontier Guardian.

Orson Hyde stands at the helm
The cause of error to o'erwhelm
And clear away its nasty phlegm,
All through the Frontier Guardian.

Night and day he's known to labor
All for the good of his friend and neighbor
That he to them might prove a Savior,
All through the Frontier Guardian.

And if on earth there is a sheet
That with all others doth compete
In giving men the truth complete,
It is the Frontier Guardian.

Come then ye Saints both great and small
And gather up before next Fall
And take it with you one and all,
The noble Frontier Guardian.

And every one that expects to start
And in the emigration take a part,
Should stow away all in their carts,
The noble Frontier Guardian.

And now these lines I send to you
As a token in the Covenant new
And as a tribute justly due,
The noble Frontier Guardian.

And for the present I'll say farewell,
Yet perhaps some other day I'll tell
The reason other papers can't excel,
The noble Frontier Guardian.

YOU AND I.

BY CHARLES MACKEY.

Who would scorn his humble fellow
For the coat he wears?
For the poverty he suffers?
For his daily cares?
Who would pass him in the footway
With averted eye?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

Who, when vice or crime repentant,
With a grief sincere
Asked for pardon, would refuse it—
More than heaven severe?
Who to erring woman's sorrow
Would with taunts reply?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

Who would say that all who differ
From his sect must be
Wicked sinners, heaven rejected,
Sunk in Error's sea,
And consign them to perdition
With a holy sigh?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

Who would say that six days cheating,
In the shop of mart,
Might be rubbed by Sunday's praying
From the tainted heart.
If the Sunday face were solemn,
And the credit high?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

Who would say that Vice is Virtue
In a hall of State?
Or that rouges are not dishonest
If they dine off plate?
Who would say Success and Merit
Ne'er part company?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

Who would give a cause his efforts
When that cause is strong,
But desert it on its failure,
Whether right or wrong?
Ever siding with the upmost,
Letting downmost lie?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

Who would lend his arm to strengthen
Warfare with the right?
Who would give his pen to blacken
Freedom's page of light?
Who would lend his tongue to utter
Praise of tyranny?
Would you, brother? No—you would not.
If you would—not I.

A Man of Business.

At the Greene County, New York, Agricultural Fair, an address was made by Col. Zadoc Pratt, from which we take the following passage:

And now I will show you the advantage those dreary hemlocks have been to the farmers of our mountain towns. Since I first engaged in farming it has been my lot to employ over fifteen thousand years of other men's labor; an army of thirty thousand men have I employed, and I have paid those men for their labor alone, over two millions five hundred thousand dollars. I have cleared over ten thousand acres of land, used over two hundred thousand cords of hemlock bark, and paid over half a million of dollars for it. Used and worn out five hundred horses, and one thousand yoke of oxen. Used two hundred thousand bushels of oats, one hundred and twenty thousand tons of hay, thirty thousand barrels of beef and pork, and nearly one hundred thousand barrels of flour, and potatoes without number or measure. I have tanned one million two hundred and fifty sides of leather; my usual imbarsement is over fifty thousand dollars per day, and I have used in my business over ten millions. Every laborer received his money, yea every man his penny, in peace; and to the credit of this community be it said, that I never had a side of leather stolen, and never was chosen defendent in law on account of my business transactions, during my residence among you. The great object of my living is to be useful. Live with your neighbor, and not on him. Allow me, gentlemen and ladies, to conclude by congratulating you upon the rich blessings of health, power, and prosperity, which surround you, and may succeeding generations do as much as you have done towards national wealth and industry, which are the safeguards to our independence.

The Coming European Revolution—Kossuth's next Movements.

A London letter states that England is dull indeed, and all Europe appears perfectly quiet. But trouble is daily anticipated in France, and revolutionary movements are threatened in other countries. The crowned heads of Europe appear to be making active preparations for a long and severe political storm. Austria and Prussia are endeavoring to negociate large loans, whilst the Czar of Russia is urging the completion of railways, and thousands of carriages for the conveyance of his troops. Every movement looks ominous. The bloody scenes of '48, it is believed, are about to be re-enacted. The London letter thus proceeds:

"France, as before, will commence the tragedy; Italy will follow, and the people of the different States comprising the Germanic Confederation, are expected to watch their opportunity. It is known that a conspiracy exists in Russia, and the volcanic fire once kindled in France, who can predict when and where it will be quenched! Happily, America cannot be disturbed by any of these predicted events, although her regular trade and commerce may suffer somewhat. The liberty of Peoples will be the universal watchword, and the anticipated strife will undoubtedly be a terrible one; but it will probably be the last great struggle of peoples for independence. Every successive week discloses the means and the men by which the work will be carried on. The liberation of Kossuth has hastened the day for commencing that work. Kossuth is expected to return to England in two or three months from this date, and proceed to belgium, from whence he will watch the course of events in Austria, Hungary and France. He is well aware that his presence in Europe will exercise an all-powerful influence upon the cause of liberty."[—Times.

C., the President was requested to communicate all the information in his possession calculated to show the actual condition of things in Utah, especially to enable the House to ascertain whether the execution of the laws has been violated or obstructed, or whether there has been a misapplication of the public funds, or whether the personal rights of American citizens have been interfered with in any manner.

Inquiry Relative to the Seizure of American Vessels by Spanish Authority.

On motion of Mr. Smart (Dem.) of Maine, the President was requested to communicate any information he may have received respecting the seizure and confiscation of the barks Georgian, of Maine, and Sarah Lord, by Spanish authority, and inform the House what measures have been taken for indemnification.

Information Wanted Regarding the Reported Intervention, by England and France, in Cuban Affairs—The West India Squadron.

On motion of Mr Meade, (Dem.) of Virginia, the President was requested to communicate any information, if in his power, as the negociations between Spain, France and England, in relation to a treaty for the protection of the Island of Cuba; also, what is the strength of the squadron in the West Indies; and whether additional appropriations are necessary to increase our force on that station.—[Washington, Dec. 15, 1851—House of Representatives.

Conspiracy in Holstein—Arrest of M. Kossuth's Agent.

A letter from Hamburg, of the 23d, in the Independence, of Belgium, says:

A grave event has taken place among the Austrian corps d'armee in Holstein. Many of the regiments composing it consists in great part of Hungarians, and among them are many young men of noble families, who are compelled by the Austrian Government to serve as simple soldiers. In spite of the disasters drawn down on unfortunate Hungary by the revolution, these soldiers cannot repress the hatred which animates, or their desire for a new revolution. The presence in England of the ex-dictator, Kossuth, and his violent diatribes against the Austrian Government and dynasty, have greatly contributed of late to excite the sentiments of hatred of the Hungarian soldiers, and an armed revolt, of which the consequences would have been incalculable in the the north, has been on the point of breaking out among them; but has been prevented by the active surveillance of the superior officers of the Austrian batalions.

An agent of Kossuth, and of the revolutionary propaganda of London, the Hungarian Count Potocki, who commanded a regiment at Comorn, during the revolution, was arrested the day before yesterday, by the military authorites of Rensburg. He had arrived from London, by way of Paris, under a false name.

In his possession were found proclamations inciting the soldiers to revolt, and printed copies of the last public speeches in England by the ex-dictator. It was generally stated in the town, that many officers, (the number is said to be nineteen,) and a great number of non-commissioned officers and soldiers, have also been arrested at Rensburg, for having been accomplices in the projected revolt. These arrests have been principally effected in the Schwartzenburgh regiment, which is almost entirely composed of Hungarians, and which is at present in garrison in the fortress of Rensburg. It has been ascertained that the agent of Kossuth, aided by another Hungarian, (Ruschak,) and who has also been arrested, has succeeded in organizing the revolt. In a strategic point of view, the spot was well chosen. In posessing themselves of the fortress, the conspirators calculated that they would receive the support of a number of the dismissed officers and soldiers of the army of Holstein.

A new insurrection in the two Dutchies would have opened a vast field to the revolutionary exploits meditated by the European propaganda at London. During the last three days, the electric telegraph has been exclusively occupied in transmitting to Vienna the despatches of the Austrian Commander-in-Chief; even those of the stock exchange could not be sent. On receipt of this deplorable news at Vienna, General de Ramberg, and aid-de-camp of the Emperor, was immediately sent off to examine the affair, and he has already arrived at Altona.

Vulgarity.

We would guard the young against the use of every word that is not perfectly proper. Use no profane expressions—allude to no sentence that would put the blush to the most sensitive. You know not the tendency of habitually using indecent and profane language. It may never be obliterated from your hearts. When you grow up you will find at tongues' end some expressions which you would not use for any money. It was one you learned when you was quite young. By being careful you will save yourself a great deal of mortification and sorrow. Good men have been taken sick and become delirious. In these moments they have used the most vile and indecent language imaginable. When informed of it, after a restoration to health, they had no idea of the pain they had given to their friends, and stated that they had learned and repeated these expressions in childhood, and though years had passed since they had spoken a bad word, the early impressions had been indellibly stamped upon the heart. Think of this ye who are tempted to use improper language, and never disgrace yourselves.—[London Lit. Gaz.

Anecdote of Lady Washington.

In conversation, not long since, with an aged lady of Morris County, I obtained an anecdote concerning Lady Washington, so entertaining and admirable, that I am induced to publish it.

There was residing in Morris County, a Mrs. Troupe, the widow of a half-pay British Captain. She was a frequent visitor at the house of Mrs Troupe, and on one of these occasions, before she had passed the usual compliments, she exclaimed:

"Well what do you think Mrs. Troupe? I have been to see Lady Washington."

"Have you indeed!" said her friend. "Tell me all about how you found her ladyship, how she appeared, and what she said."

"Well I will honestly tell you," replied Mrs. Troupe, "that I never was ashamed in all the days of my life. You see Madam——— and Madam———, and Madam ——— and myself, thought we would visit Lady Washington, and that we must put on our best bibs and bands. So we dressed ourselves in our most elegant ruffles and silks, and were introduced to her ladyship, and don't you think we found her knitting and with a speckled (check) apron on! She received us very graciously and easily, but after the compliments were over, she resumed her knitting. There we were, without a stitch of work, and sitting in state, but General Washington's Lady, with her own hands, was knitting stocking for her husband and herself. And that was not all. In the course of the afternoon she took occasion to say, in a manner that we could not at all be offended at, that at this time it was very important that American ladies should be patterns of industry to their country women, because the seperation from the mother country will dry up the sources whence many of our comforts have been derived. We must become independent, by our determination to do without what we cannot make for ourselves. While our husband and brothers are examples of patriotism we should be patterns of industry."

Degrees of Happiness.

If you wish to be happy for a day, get well shaved; if for a week, get invited to a wedding; if for a month, buy a good nag; if for a half year, buy a handsome house; if for a year, marry a handsome wife; if for two years, take hold orders; but if you would always be happy, gay and cheerful, practise temperance and pay your newspaper bill.

From California the mining accounts continue interesting and highly favorable. Sheriff Buchanan had been shot at Sonora, by a party of Mexican marauders. The Vigilance committees were active in arrests. The Sheriff died of his wounds. Several other murders had been committed in the neighborhood of Marysville and Sacramento by Mexicans.—[Brunswicker.

Our Foreign Relations seem to be assuming rather a squally aspect. We have the Prometheus affair on hand to settle with Great Britain; the Thrasher affair with Cuba; the Tehuantepec affair with Mexico; and now we are called upon to "frighten the Czar out of his boots" by a Platonic intervention (not an armed one—oh, no!) in behalf of Hungary. It is fortunate that we have men like Fillmore and Webster at the head of affairs at this time.—[Boston Trans.

Poetical Comparison.

"There is no truth in men," said a lady in company, "They are like musical instruments, which sound a variety of tones." "In other words madam," said a wit who chanced to be, "you believe that all men are lyres."

To Cure a Felon.

Take one table-spoonful of red lead, and one table-spoonful of Castile soap; mix them with as much lye as will make it soft enough to spread like a salve, and apply it on the first appearance of the felon, and it will cure it in ten or twelve hours.

Kossuth Answered!

It will be seen by the telegraphic report of the proceedings of the House of Representatives, that Kossuth's appeal has been answered. That body has by a deliberate and decided vote, rejected the proposition of Kossuth, for an interference on the part of the Government of this Country, in the affairs of Europe—put in a form, too, likely to make it as palatable as possible to those who had to vote upon it because no Government in Europe is more hated by the people of the United States than that of Russia. Kossuth was on the ground, and has his answer. His "mission" to this Country is at an end, unless he turns to the "practical results" of which he has so often spoken.—[Republican.

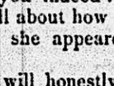
COUNCIL BLUFFS AGENCY FERRY.



THIS FERRY has now been in successful operation for two years, and given universal satilfaction to the emigrants and traveling public in general. It is the best crossing on the Missouri river. Proof—Not a dollar's worth of property has been lost at this Ferry, during the last two year's heavy emigration. It is the nearest route to California, Oregon and Salt Lake.

Proof—The first overland emigrants that arrrived at Sacramento, this season, made the trip in fifty-five days from Council Bluffs. It is the healthiest route. Proof—Not a single case of Cholera has occurred on the north side of the Platte, whilst on the south side, this dreadful disease had spread gloom and desolation beyond the worst newspaper accounts that have been published. Some six hundred according to the best information we can obtain have died on that truly fatal route. Caused by the impurities in the water

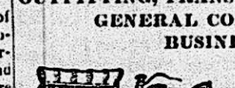
GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iown.



THE undersigned has been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating public, as a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

Kanesville, June 13th, 1851

From the Deseret News.

PATRIARCHAL.

To the Saints Scattered Throughout the World, Greeting:

BELOVED BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—The Spirit of God moves upon me to write an epistle, and give you some fatherly counsel at this time I pray God, my eternal Father, to enlighten my mind, and give unto me words and principles which will be unto you as balm to a wound, or water to a thirsty man.

It is now upwards of 21 years since the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, with six members, most of whom are numbered with the dead.

Soon after its organization I heard the Gospel through my nephew Joseph Smith, Jr., and obeyed the commandments of the Lord by entering in at the door, which is baptism.

Since that period, many scenes have passed, in which I have participated; some of which caused me to rejoice, and many to bow me down with sorrow.

To take up the subject of the travels, persecutions and the sufferings of the Saints, since I first became acquainted with the work, would fill volumes; and I find, that although my spirit is willing that I should enter into these things, and add my testimony to the many who have already preached and published it to the world, yet the flesh is weak, and my aged fingers cramp with the pen; suffice it to say, what has been published by the elders, is true; and the rest is written in the books which shall be opened in the day when all men will be rewarded according to their works, and all secrets shall be made known on the house tops.

I have witnessed the steady progress of the work, combating against ignorance, superstition and priest-craft. Like leaven it has spread itself until it is heard in the East and the West, the North and the South, trampling under foot as it were all opposition, and showing unto Saint and sinner that the Great God is at the helm.

Twenty years ago it was a mustard seed; now a mighty forest, where the birds of the air can rest under.

We were then mobbed and plundered of everything and left without a home. Thanks be to God, we have now a resting place for our feet.

We can here worship Him under our own "vine and fig tree," and none make us afraid: and under such favorable circumstances as we are now placed, if we do not enjoy the spirit of God, it is because we are not obedient to his commandments; and I can bear my testimony, that the Saints never enjoyed more of the Spirit than they do at this time; and I feel confident that if they will adhere to counsel, we will receive more and more, day by day, until we come within the sphere to walk with angels, and be their constant companions; and when we want to learn aught from God, they will teach us, and heaven will be as near to us as Boston is to New York by telegraph.

To the Saints in these Vallies I have a word of counsel:

If you have the interest of the work at heart, be always ready to obey counsel. If the President wishes to settle the vallies, build temples, preach the Gospel, or any other thing that is required of you, be ready as minute men, with all that you have and possess. Let no excuse be found in your mouths; but arise and say, I will do thy work, O God, and you will see his salvation made manifest in the preservation of his Saints.

If the Presidency and twelve who are now living had not been servants to the cause when Joseph lived, they would not have been worthy to fill the exalted stations which they now occupy; and always remember, "that he who is the greatest among you must be the servant of all."

Bring up your children in the way they should go that they may be ornaments to the society and a blessing unto you in your old age: and remember that God will not hold you guiltless if you should neglect to attend to this matter. Remember also to teach them to pray; and cause your sons to take part in the family prayer; and beware what company they keep, for "evil communications corrupt good manners."

Let not your daughters mix with the sons of the stranger, whom you know nothing about, and who are not of the house of Israel; but gather your children together, and teach them the principles of truth and righteousness; and learn them to obey the laws of God, and the day will come, that they will arise and bless you.

Teach unto them every truth which God has revealed. Instil into their young minds every principle that will make them a noble race; and remove from their paths everything that is contrary to God and his commandments. Beware that they do not imbibe the superstitions of the Gentiles, and keep them where they cannot have recourse to their doctrines; you will then have a race of children who will arise in the might of Israel, and will break the shackles of superstition, and be fit beings to carry on the work which their fathers commenced; and the spirit of God will assist you in doing these things, provided you put forth all your energies with your might.

To the Saints abroad I wish to say, hasten to the vallies of the everlasting hills. Come where you can learn from the fountain head. Gather where your children can mix with ours, and where you will enjoy the sweet communion which is felt with us, and that I may lay my hands upon you and give you a Patriarchal blessing before I go hence.

Bring with you your machinery, your gold, and your silver, your brass, and your copper, with all the seeds and precious things of the earth; and last, not least, the poor of God's household,—to beautify the place and make it a fit sanctuary for the Lord to dwell in.

Let the rich remember that the poor must be gathered; and as the rich can at any time come to Zion, the poor have to come when the way opens for them; and it is a duty devolving on the rich to bring them along.

Pray to God to turn the hearts of the Gentiles that they may convert their riches to the upbuilding of his kingdom, and that kings and queens may become nursing parents, that Zion may flourish, and her temples be reared to his holy name, that we may do the work devolving upon us in redeeming the dead.

Lift up and strengthen the hands of the elders who are among you. Let your prayers ascend to the God of Sabbaoth for their success, and that they may never be confounded; and in return they will bless, counsel, and pray for you, and the prayer of the righteous availeth much.

Children be subject to your parents; wives to your husbands; elders to your presidents, each obeying as they expect obedience from those whom they are placed to govern; always remembering, it is better to govern by love than by oppression.

Avoid law-suits. Pay your tithing; remember your covenants in the House of the Lord. Let the Perpetual Fund prosper, and the poor rejoice. Pray for the redemption of Zion, for the heads of the Church, for the gathering of the Saints, for the elders who are abroad preaching, for their families who are left at home, for the Saints scattered abroad throughout the world, for the rolling on of the work, for the frustration of the designs of our enemies, and for health, peace and prosperity to dwell in every habitation of the Saints of God. By doing so, blessings will shower on your heads, your minds will expand; the Spirit of God will rest upon you, and your years will be many upon the earth.

Let every Elder of Israel put on the garments of righteousness, teaching by precept and example, the true principles which exalt the mind, expand the understanding, and make man a fit companion for his creator; and never dishonor the high and holy calling which has been placed upon him, by teaching or suffering to be taught in his house or anywhere that he has influence or power to control, doctrines which are not of God.

Let the true principles which God has revealed in these last days be taught in their simple purity, bearing with it its own worth, having the Spirit of God to back it, and I know that every true Saint will welcome it with open arms. Avoid the company or the house of those who hold the doctrines of God in derision, for God dwells not there; the blood will not be found on the lintels of their door posts, in the day when the destroyer passes by.

To the elders who are out preaching, I wish to say, cease not your cry. Warn the nations of the wrath of God on the wicked. Preach faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of sins, the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the gathering of the Saints, bearing your testimony without fear, and the Lord will bless your labors with many sheaves, which will be an honor to you in the great day of accounts. Your families shall not want, your limbs shall not be wearied, if you are faithful in all things, and your tongues shall not fail to declare truth both new and old; and the angels of God shall guard your footsteps, and his Spirit will be with you to enlighten your way, and be both mouth, matter, and wisdom unto you; and when you return to your homes you will meet with smiling faces who will greet you with a blessing for the good you have done in other lands.

I must conclude, for I feel the infirmities of age creeping on, and knowing not when the Lord shall require me hence, I wish to take this opportunity of adding my mite to the testimony of the thousands who are scattered throughout the Globe, and of those who are gone beyond the vail, and who sealed theirs with their blood.

In Kirtland, Ohio, four brothers sat in the Patriarchal seat in the Temple of God, and I only of that number am left to tell the tale; and as I am now past the time allotted to man to live, it is reasonable that I also will be gathered unto my fathers in the time appointed of God. I therefore bear my testimony, which I wish translated into every language, read to every Saint, and printed where e'er the type is used, that the world may see and hear what I have to say; for if I was young I would visit them, when they should hear from my lips that God has again spoken from the heavens; that he has again condescended to send his angels to visit fallen man, and point out the way whereby he can be saved. He appointed Joseph Smith a prophet, and revealed unto him his commandments.

I testify to all men in words of soberness that the Book of Mormon is true; that Joseph Smith, Jr., translated it from plates by the Urim and Thummim, and by the power of God.

I testify that Joseph Smith was a prophet, seer, revelator, and a man of God; and what was revealed through him will prove life and salvation to those who believe and obey, or death and condemnation to those who count them as nought, and harden their hearts against the truths he preached and practised.

I knew him when at his mother's breast; I watched and counselled his youth; but when God spoke and taught him, I bowed to his superior knowledge; and although he was a boy, and I an old man, and his uncle, yet I was not ashamed to learn true principles from him, and like Paul at the feet of Gamaliel, drank in the truths which flowed from the prophet's lips.

I was in jail with him and his brother Hyrum a few hours before they were killed; and I can testify before God, that they died innocent of any crime, and that they sealed their testimony with their blood.

I testify to all men, that I know, that the angel has appeared which John the revelator saw, who had the everlasting Gospel to preach to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come.

And I call on all men, priests and people, kings, potentates, and rulers, to cease their strife, come and obey the Gospel, gather with Israel, obey the commandments of God, that you and your dead may be saved and brought up in the first resurrection.

And I say to the Saints, that by the power of the Holy Priesthood vested in me, as Patriarch, I bless you; and I say unto you, be faithful, and you shall be blessed in your basket and your store; you shall have all the blessings which were promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; and the Lord will preserve you as in the hollow of his hand; and no power shall stay the work, for everything that shall be brought against it will fail.

The way shall be opened for every Saint to come to Zion. Health, peace, joy, prosperity, and the Spirit of God shall dwell in your habitations, and the angels of God shall watch over and counsel you all your days; your minds shall expand to realize every principle of truth and righteousness, and you shall build temples and go through the ordinances for your dead; your names shall be held in everlasting remembrance among the people of God, and your children shall arise and call you blessed. The riches of the Gentiles shall be converted to establish the Kingdom of God; every prayer of the righteous shall be heard and answered by our Father in Heaven, and every blessing that can be heaped on man will be heaped upon those who keep his commandments, and I pray God my eternal Father, to hear this the prayer and blessing of thy servant, and and answer it upon the heads of my brethren; which I ask in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen. JOHN SMITH,

Patriarch to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

From the Deseret News.

Judge Snow's Opinion in Regard to Utah Affairs.

Two Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States within and for the Territory of Utah, and the Secretary of the Territory, having left for the States, it becomes me to examine carefully the acts and doings of the Governor in relation to the getting up of the real or supposed Legislative Assembly which passed ahe act approved Oct. 4, 1851, requiring me to hold a court on the first Monday of Oct., 1851, before I attempt to discharge the duties required by the act.

Courts, ex officio, take notice of all public laws and public documents issued by the chief magistrates, pursuant to law. It is therefore my duty to take notice of so many of the acts and doings of the Governor as relate to getting up and calling together the Legislative Assembly. If these proceedings are authorized by law, then they are not void, but legal; if they are not authorized by law, then they are not legal, but void; and the acts passed by the Legislative Assembly are also void. If these proceedings are erroneous merely, then the acts passed by that body are legal, and the errors, if any, must be corrected by that branch of the Government whose right it is to correct them. If they are not erroneous, then my duty is clear.

To come to a correct conclusion on this subject, it will be convenient, if not necessary, to refer to some parts of the history of the Territory.

On the 24th of July, 1847, when this entire basin was Mexican domain, subject to the military rule of the United States, which had, by conquest, been established, a few American citizens came here and established a settlement. How far this military rule effected this settlement, I have not seen fit to enquire; but it is presumed it did not seriously, as the American army was stationed some several hundred miles distant.

This settlement continued to prosper until February 2d, 1848, when this military rule such as it was, was terminated by the treaty of Guadalope Hidalgo; in which the entire basin was ceded to the United States. It is a rule of international law, that when one goveonment cedes territory to another, the laws in force in the ceded country, continue to be in force until changed by the new government.

By this rule, if there were any laws of the Mexican States in force here on the 2nd of Feb., 1848, they would continue in force until changed. Were there any laws of the Mexican States in force here? This queation is more easily asked than answered. I am ignorant of any. When we consider that this vast country, lying between the Missouri river and the eastern boundary of California and Oregon extending north and south indefinitely, has, until quite recently, been thought to be a vast desert, unfit to sustain civilized man; and when we consider, that this settlment is now near or quite eight hundred miles from any other civilized settlement, and that this whole region, until quite recently, has been inhabited by savages, with here and there a trader and trapper, it may not be far from the truth to conclude, that there was no law of a Mexican State in force here at the signing of the Treaty of Guadalope Hidalgo.

By this Treaty, the Mexican government yielded to the United States whatever supervisory right it had over the Indians and country; and the United States obtained the right of soil subject to the Indian title; also the right to exercise its supervisory control over the Indians and other inhabitants; and the "right to make all needful rules and regulations respecting" this part of the domain; but by it, the Constitution and laws of the United States were not extended over this Territory. The right to extend or make a law, is one thing; and the extending or making the law, is another.

The conclusion to which I have arrived, is, that during the period between Feb. 2d, 1848, and perhaps before that time, and Sept. 9, 1850, there was no civil law in force here, except such as had been enacted by the inhabitants of this valley, and such limited supervisory rules of Congress as it had made in regard to the census and protecting its officers.

Every act of man is lawful which is not against public policy, nor against any existing law, nor against individual rights. All just civil powers emanate from the people. Every aggregate body of men dwelling where there is no civil law in force, may make such laws as in their opinion will secure to them their lives, liberty, and happiness. Having a right to form a civil government subject to the right of Congress "to make all needful rules and regulations respecting" this part of its public domain, and to its national control, and being desirous of establishing a law suited to their own wants; the people of this valley in 1849 formed a constitution, as the basis of their civil institutions, providing for an executive, a legislative, and judiciary. This being done they sent a delegate to Congress, asking admission, as a State, into the Union. Pursuant to this constitution, the legislature convened and passed sundry laws, among which was one relating to the judiciary, and another regulating elections.

Both of these acts were in force here on the 9th day of September, 1850, the day the act of Congress took effect, establishing a Territorial Government for Utah.

By the 17th section of the act of Congress the constitution and laws of the U. S. were extended over this basin, which superceded the provisional laws, so far as their provisions were inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the United States. The provisional constitution and laws gave place to this act, and the costitution and laws of the United States This act also provided for an executive, legislative, and judiciary. In the 11th section, it is provided, that the President shall appoint, &c., certain of its officers, among which are the Governor, the Justices, the Secretary, Marshal, and District Attorney.

It also named the officers before whom the Governor and other officers appointed by the President might take the oath of office, among whom we find "the District Judge or some Justice of the Peace in the limits of said Territory duly authorized to administer oaths and affirmations by the laws then (September 9, 1850.) in force therein."

This, to a limited extent, recognized the legal force of the provisional laws.

To organize under this act, two things were necessary. First, the appointment of the officers by the President; second, the oath of office to be taken by the appointees.

September 28, 1850, the officers were appointed by the President. Any one of whom, might, the next day, had he been in a condition so to do, have taken the oath of office and entered on his duties.

Feb. 3d, 1851, the Governor took his oath of office. At any time after this, whether the other officers were in the line of duty or not, he could do any act required of him, which did not require the co-operation of the officers. The Governor, for many good reasons, was charged with the duty of getting up and calling together the Legislative Assembly. The 4th and 12th sections show what his duties were in this matter. They were, first, to take the census or enumeration of the inhabitants of the Territory, previous to the first election. Second, to make an apportionment of the Council and Representatives among the several counties or districts "as nearly equal as practicable, giving to each section representation in the ratio of its population as nearly equal as may be" Third, to declare the number of Councillors and Representatives each district or county was entitled to send. Fourth, to fix the time of election. Fifth, to fix the places of election. Sixth, to declare the manner of conducting the election. Seventh, to determine who had been elected. Eighth, to fix the time of the first meeting of the Legislative Assembly. Ninth, to fix the place of its first meeting.

Under certain contingencies which have not in this case happened, he had other duties to perform; but as they have not occurred, these duties are not mentioned.

I will here remark, that though in all these cases, he was to perform the duties, yet in each one he had a discretionary power given him. When an officer of the government, whether he be a high or a low one, has a discretionary power given him in the discharge of any duty, no other officer or branch of government has power to control him in the exercise of that discretion.

Inasmuch as exceptions have been taken to the proceedings of the Governor relating to the census, I will here refer the manner in which that duty was discharged.

By the 1st section of the act of Congress approved May 23d, 1850, relating to taking the census of the United States, it is provided that "if there be any district or territory of the United States in which there is no Marshal of the United States, the President shall appoint some suitable person to discharge the the duties assigned by this act to the Marshals." The duties of the Marshals were in substence to take the census. By the 8th section of the same act the Secretary of the Interior was charged with the duty of seeing that the several Marshals discharged their duties faithfully. In fact, he was the officer, under the President, to see the act in all its parts, duly executed; and of course to appoint some suitable person to take the census here, as this was a section of country of the United States in which there was no Marshal. This act required the several Marshals to have their duties fully performed on or before the first day of Nov. then next ensuing. It was however soon ascertained, that the Marshals could not perform their duties under this law, within the time therein limited. Congress therefore by an act approved August 30, 1850, ten days before there was any Territory of Utah, extended the time for taking the census therein. It is to be remembered, that these three acts were passed at one session of Congress, and therefore they are to be construed so as to carry into effect their objects without requiring a work of supererogation. The object of the first two acts was to take the census throughout the United States. The object of taktaking the census as provided in the Utah Bill, was to inform the Governor of the number of inhabitants, Indians excepted, in the several counties and districts, so as to enable him to fix the ratio of representation among the several counties, &c., giving to each, as nearly as may be, equal representation in the Legislative Assembly at its first session. Any official information of the number of inhabitants in each county or district, answered the spirit of the act. If he after taking the oath of office, and before making the apportionment, took the census in person or caused it to be done, he fulfilled the letter of the law. He who does a thing, causes it to be done; and he who causes a thing to be done, may be said to do the thing. Now the President, by the Secretary of the Interior, pursuant to the provisions of the law approved May 23d, 1850, appointed Governor Young a special agent to take census of Utah; the duties of which he performed, after he had taken the oath of office as Governor and previous to making the apportionment of the Council and Representatives among the several counties and districts.

On March 28, 1851, Governor Young as such authorized Thomas Bullock to take the census, pursuant to the bill creating the Territory of Utah; which duties were also performed before the appointment was made as appears by the papers on file in the Governor's office.

So Governor Young did take the census, both as Governor and as a special agent appointed pursuant to the law of Congress. I conclude therefore, that in this respect he fulfilled both the spirit ar letter of the act. Had he not taken the census as prescribed in the act, nor in any other manner, I should not be prepared to hold the election void for that defect; though he would not have discharged his duties in this particular.

He was to make an apportionment of the Council and Representatives among the several counties and districts, also to fix the time and places of election, declare the number each county and district would be entitled to send, and direct the manner of conducting the election.

A little reflection will soon convince us, that in all these duties, there was a large discretionary power given him. As to the time of election, he might name what day he pleased, but he could only fix one day for the election, and that was to be the same throughout the Territory; so the time was submitted to his discretion.

The number of places for the election, and where these places should be, was also submitted to his discretion.

The number of Council and Representatives for each county and district, was also submitted to his discretion.

The number of Council and Representive districts, was likewise submitted to his discretion; provided he did not make more than thirteen for Council, nor twenty-six for Representatives.

The same holds true in regard to the manner of conducting the election. He might legally set forth entire new rules for that purpose, or he might avail himself of such rules as were familiar to the inhbitants. Again, he had the choice of means. He might select any rule to accomplish these things, known to civilized life, keeping within their customs and usages.

I will now see what means he did use, and how he discharged these duties. July 1, 1851, he issued a Proclamation under his hand officially though not under the seal of the Territory, in which he made an apportionment of representation among the several counties, &c.; stated the number each was to send, and fixed the time of election; but he did not in the body of it fix the places of election nor state in what manner it should be conducted, though he used the following language on this part of the subject, after stating that he had fixed an apportionment, &c.: "and direct that an election be held in the respective precincts throughout the Territory on the first Monday in August next, in accordance with the existing laws of the provisional government of the State of Deseret regulating elections, passed by the General Assembly Nov. 12, 1849, page 9." It is contended that this is void for two reasons; if so, then there has not been an election, and consequently there has not any Legislative Assembly met.

One reason assigned for its being void is, it had not the seal of the Territory affixed thereto.

The act creating the Territory, does not state how the Governor should discharge these duties, nor how he should execute such an strument; therefore, it does not in terms require it to be authenticated by the seal of the Territory. It is however a time-honored custom to authenticate such an instrument with the impress of the Great Seal. When this is done, it is conclusive evidence that the instrument, if authorized by law, is genuine; it is placed there as an evidence of its genuineness. An instrument may be authorized by law and be genuine, and yet no bear upon its face conclusive evidence of its genuineness.

It is the constant practice of the Governors of the States and of the President of the United States, so far as their acts have come under my notice, to do official business both with and without authenticating their acts with the impress of the Great Seal. If the law does not require an instrument or public document to be under seal, then the super-addition of a seal does not give it any additional validity.

I conclude, inasmuch as the Governor had the choise of means and discretionary power as to the manner of discharging these duties, and the act did not require him to authenticate his proceedings with the impress of the seal, the Proclamation is not void for the want of the seal. As a matter of fact within my knowledge, there was no seal of Territory within its limits, when that document was issued.

Another reason alleged for its being void, is, that in the body of this proclamation, he did not fix the places of election, nor state the manner of conducting it, that the Deseret law was superceded by the act of Congress creating this Territory, and therefore the election could not be held according to its provisions.

Now I do not so understand the law, or perhaps I should say, if such be the law; it does not follow, that the Proclomation and Election are void. True, if there be no place or places for the voters to assemble and cast their ballots, all would be confusion; and for that reason, the election might be void. True, if there be no manner of conducting the election, all would be confusion and irregularity; and for that reason the election might be void. True, the Act of Congress creating the Territory and extending the constitution and laws of the United States over it, did supercede the provisional laws so far as their provisions were inconsistent with each other. True, the election law of Deseret did not provide for the election of a Delegate to Congress, nor for the election of the members of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah; but only for the election of the State, County, and Precinct officers of Deseret, and the members of its Legislature.

But, though all this be true, and though if the act of Congres had superceded every provision of the Deseret laws, and entirely disannulled every one of them, still it does not follow that the election is void, for the reason, that the Act of Congress gave full power to the Governor to fix the places of election, and direct the manner of conducting it. If he fixed the places of election, he did it, not by virtue of the Deseret laws, but by virtue of the law of Congress. If he directed the manner of conducting the election, he did it, not by virtue of the Deseret law, but by virtue of the law of the United States.

He had a right to name the places of election, and state fully who should be the judges and clerk at each place, how they should discharge their duties and make return to him; or he had a right to avail himself of the places fixed by the Deseret law, and of the judges and clerks of the election established according to its provisions, and direct the elections to be conducted in the same manner that their own act had provided. Now the view I take of this matter, is this: the Governor, by directing the election to be held according to the Deseret act referring to it, did the same in contemplation of law as if he had said to the electors, meet on the day named, that is, on the first Monday in August, at the places provided by the act referred to, or at your usual places of holding elections in each precinct, and there elect the members, &c. Let the judges and clerks of the usual elections be judges and clerks of this election. Let them certify the result in the usual manner; or what is the same thing, in the manner specified in the Deseret law. Let the sheriffs, clerks of courts, justices of the peace, each in their turn, do their duties in this election the same as in other elections. In so doing he did the same as any or all the Governors of States do, when they issue writs of or proclamations for elections: Provided, the Deseret law is sufficiently certain as to the places of holding and manner of conducting the elections. And yet the election when so held, would not be held by virtue of the Deseret act, but by the law of Congress creating the Territory. For it was by the law of Congress, that the Governor was authorized to do that business.

This leads us to examine the Deseret laws to see whether or not they have provided for the places of elections and the manner of conducting them. On looking into these acts I find many provisions which have no bearing on this subject; I shall therefore confine myself mainly to such as have a bearing on these questions. In them I find a legislative, a judiciary and an executive department. I find an act to establish a judiciary and another to regulate elections. I find counties laid off and divided into precincts; cities incorporated; and roads laid off, &c., &c. In all these things, the acts are not essentially different from the like proceedings in the States.

The election law provides for the election of most of the State and County officers; by it each precinct is an election district. The judges of the county courts are at its March term to name a house or place in each precinct at which the election shall be held; also to appoint two judges and one clerk of elections in each precinct. These judges and clerks are to take an oath to discharge their duties faithfully. The law also provides that the electors in any precinct not provided for, may meet and conduct their election in their own way. Sheriffs, clerks of courts, and justices of the peace, each have their duties to perform in preparing and circulating poll books and counting the returns in the county, certifying the result of the votes in the county to the Secretary of State, which were to be counted in the presence of the Governor, &c. The election was to be by ballot. Now as to the manner of conducting the elections under this law I have not found any serious objections; the only thing apparently wrong is that it does not fix the places of elections, though it provides a method by which the places are to be fixed. Now if the judges of the county courts did their duties at the March term, and it is a presumption of law that they did until the contrary appears, then the places of holding the elections were fixed by them. Giving to these courts the benefit of the legal presumption the same as to all other like courts, that they discharged their duties unless the contrary be shown; we find no illegality or uncertainty of the place of holding the elections. It does not appear that they did not do their duties; so legally I must presume they did. Besides, I have been informed by some of these judges their duties in this respect were performed.

I therefore conclude the proclamation was not void for uncertainty in not more minutely fixing the places of elections, nor for directing it to be held according to the Deseret election law.

It has been alleged, that aliens voted at the election, and were clerks and judges of the same; and for this reason it was void.

Now, whether aliens voted or not, I do not know; nor have I any official information whether any or all the clerks or judges of the election were aliens. These are questions of fact which require proof to be made to the proper branch of the government, so that the error, if any, may be corrected. But suppose it be true that aliens voted, does this render the election void? The answer is, it may, and it may not. It is to be remembered, that in this election there were not any opposing candidates in any of the districts; therefore if one legal vote was given for each member, though all others were illegal, the member would be legally elected.

Suppose some of the clerks and judges of the election were aliens. Does this render the election void? It appears to me rather strong doctrine to hold that a people or body of legal voters are to lose their voice in the Legislative Assembly for the reason that some of the judges or clerks were not competent to hold office. I do not think it necessary to decide whether or not a judge or a clerk of one election only, is an officer within the meaning of the 5th section of the act creating the Territory of Utah. If any member was illegally returned or was not competent to fill the station; the branch of the Legislative Assembly to which such members was elected, had full power to hear the matter, determine the facts, and refuse him a seat.

In so doing, any errors in the voters or judges or clerks of elections, would be examined; and if they were such as render the election of any member illegal, he ought not and as I presume would not be permitted a seat. As a matter of fact it is known to me that one member was elected to the House of Representatives who was in this manner refused a seat.

It is also contended, that inasmuch as this proclamation did not prescribe the qualifications of electors, nor the persons entitled to be elected; it was for this reason void.

Now I do not so understand the law. The Act creating the Government of Utah did not require the Governor to set forth either of these things. It defined both. Both are made clear by the law which every one is presumed to know; and for this reason it was not necessary to set them forth in the proclamation.

It is also contended that officers not authorized by the act, to be elected, were voted for and elected; and for this reason, the election was void.

I believe these facts are true, but the legal conclusion drawn from them I think is erroneous. It appears to me that voting for and electing a class of officers which the Governor was authorized to appoint, was at most only surplusage, which does not vitiate. Besides, the Deseret law required them to be elected, which probably was the reason of the mistake. The act further required the Governor to declare who had been elected; also to fix the time and place of the first meeting of the Legislative Assembly. It is contended this duty has not been discharged; if this be correct then no Legislative Assembly has been legally called together.

I will examine and see what the facts are in regard to this. A short time before the meeting of the Legislative Assembly the Governor issued a proclamation bearing date on the 18th day of September, 1851, in which he named the persons who, he therein declared had been elected, and fixed the time of meeting on the 22d of the same month at the Council House in Great Salt Lake City. This proclamation was printed and circulated, but how extensive its circulation I know not, neither do I think it material to inquire.

This, it has been and still is urged, is fatally different from any proclamation on the file in the office of the Secretary.

The Secretary having left for the States, and having taken with him the funds of the Government, and having left his papers where they are not within my reach, I have no means of knowing wherein this differs, if it differs at all, from the one file in his office, if he has one; except what may be inferred from a letter written by him to the Hon. Willard Richards and W. W. Phelps, bearing date on the 25th of September, 1851. From this I infer that on the 19th of September, the day after the date of the proclamation, it was taken to the Secretary, to be by him sealed with the seal of the Territory; to which he affixed the seal.

The printed one has no place of the seal. If this inference be correct, then the proclamation had the seal of the Territory; but the one printed did not show that fact, though it did show on its face, that the Secretary attested it. If it had the seal of the Territory, it was good; if it had not the seal, it was also good; as the Governors of States and Territories, and the President of the United States, are in the constant habit of doing business officially both with and without attesting the same with the Great Seal.

In 1850-51 President Fillmore issued three proclamations, one without, and two with, the attestation of the Great Seal. See statutes at large, Second Session Thirty-First Congress, Appendix No. I, II and III.

In 1847 President Polk issued two proclamations, both without the attestation of the Great Seal. See statutes at large; First Session Thirtieth Congress, Appendix No. I and II.

I have examined the proclamations of the Presidents for more than thirty years past, and find more issued without being authenticated by the Great Seal, than with. See Appendices to Little & Brown's Statutes at large.

In getting up and calling together the Legislative Assembly, the Secretary had nothing to do, except the recording of the proceedings of the Governor. This duty the Governor had to perform. In doing which the Secretary had no right to interfere any more than any private citizen. The offices of Governor and Secretary are seperate and distinct; and each incumbent can do lawful acts without the concurrence of the other. The legality of the Governor's proceedings does not depend on the consent of the Secretary, nor on the fact whether he discharges his duty or not. If therefore this proclamation was legal when issued, and I think it was, the subsequent addition of the Seal of the Territory by the Secretary did it neither good nor harm. If it was legal when issued, it continued to be legal whether it was recorced or not; the recording of it not being necessary to its validity, but being done to preserve the evidence of the fact.

Another objection to this proclamation is, that it was not reasonable as to time.

The law required the Governor to fix the time and place of the first meeting of the Assembly, but the time and place, also the manner in which notice was to be given to the members, and the length of time which should elapse between the notice and meeting, were all submitted to his discretion.

The Governor on the 27th of September, 1851, after the Secretary had concluded to leave, addressed a line to the Judges of the Supreme Court of this Territory, respecting his duties and the duties of Mr. Harris. All the Judges answered this letter, and used among other things, the following language:

"When an officer is invested with a discretionary power, or to execise his judgment in the performance of a duty, there is no power to compel him to obey any mandate interfering with that discretion." With this I am quite satisfied, and think it applies to the Governor as well as to the Secretary.

I have now examined every objection urged against the proceedings of the Governor in relation to the getting up and calling together the Assembly, and find his proceedings to be strictly legal. Finding them legal, I believe it to the right of the President, the right of the United States, and the inhabitants of this Territory to have me take my seat and hold my first Court as required by the act of the Legislative Assembly of Utah; and believing so, I do not hesitate to enter on my duties. Valedictory.

The Office of the Frontier Guardian, being sold, the time has come for us to resign our charge, and to vacate the Editorial Chair in favor of other, and we trust, more able and efficient hands. The next issue from this establishment will be under the guidance and management of Jacob Dawson, Esq., an Attorney and Counsellor at Law, from Fremont County, who was formerly a member of the Pittsburgh Bar, and connected with the Office of the Pittsburgh Gazette. This gentleman is not a Mormon, but apparently one of those liberal minded, unassuming men, whose well known qualifications for the business cannot fail to render him an acceptable citizen—a useful member of society, an ornament to the profession, and an honor to the Editorial Chair. Having therefore seen friend Dawson fully installed in office, seated upon the tripod, and wielding the goose-quill Scepter, we feel like making our bow and withdrawing from the Sanctum, bequeathing our mantle and best wishes upon our worthy successor, after having managed and conducted the Guardian three years and one month. But this office, having enlisted our deepest interests and good will, cannot fail to command our respect and attention while we remain in the country; and when nothing of more interest can be found to fill the columns of the paper, we may scribble a little now and then for the Guardian and Sentinel, to benefit, arrange, and order our emigration, —and other matters that may be interesting.

We claim no particular merit as an Editor, yet humble as our exertions have been, we have recorded some sayings and chronicled some events that will be more fully appreciated at a future day. Time is rapidly hurrying us onward to the verge of mortality— to the ocean of eternity! And when we consider that "by our words we shall be justified or condemned," our conscience does not accuse us. Still, we may have erred and spoken unadvisedly in many cases. But we have done our best, and if we have offended any without cause, we are heartily sorry for it, and trust that the sin of ignorance may be winked at.

An Editor's labors are subject to pass the ordeal of a thousand critics, not only as to his style and diction; but the sentiments and principles that he sets forth and advocates, as well as his taste in borrowing and selecting matter from foreign sources. Like the elements of animal life that are ever in motion, and Editor's pen often moves individuals, and sometimes whole communities. They are occasionally moved by a pleasing and gratifying influence, and then again excited to resentment and indignation by sayings adverse to what they consider their interests or reputation. Action and re-action are the great principles that constitute the ebbing and flowing of the tide of nature in every department. All is right. Mind acts upon mind, and matter upon matter. Light cleaveth unto light, truth unto truth, and they know their children and honor them. The children of this world love their home and seek no other. The children of light know the uncertainty of a home in this world, and therefore seek one in the world to come. Could the consummation of our earthly wishes now be granted us without offending our Creator, or prejudicing our eternal interest and happiness, we would say: Let us be gathered with our fathers, and retire from life's exciting scenes where "the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest," while no shadow or cloud eclipses or obstructs our hopes of a peaceful and blessed hereafter. Nevertheless, not our will; but thine Oh Father, be done! Let our strength be according to our day, and we ask no more.

To our brethren of the Press, we feel to tender our sincere thanks for favors by the way of weekly exchanges for our semi-monthly. We have been kindly and respectfully treated by the Press in general. The St. Louis Republican has taken a correct view of Mormon affairs in the main; and the Union has also been mild, conciliatory and friendly disposed. In short, with two exceptions, we have no particular fault to find with any of our cotemporaries. The St. Joseph Gazette, and Iowa Capitol Reporter are the two exceptions. Their Editors may be good men, but they have rather an odd way of showing it. We have had a little sparring with Br. Holly, of the Sentinel, and although he declines endorsing our views, we do not feel disposed to cast him out of our books.

If any class of men in this wide world deserve the gratitude of the masses of community, it is the Editorial Corps. No profession or calling subjects its agents to responsibilities so great—to criticisms so cold and severe—to labors of mind and body so arduous—to anxieties so keen, and to energies so untiring as that of an Editor of a public Journal: Yet like a country or village School-master who rears the standard of education in the Juvenile mind, he is too often rewarded with inattention, ingratitude,—and sometimes with curses for his labors of love, and toil to promote mental, moral, and physical improvement.

The political atmosphere is charged with electricity over many nations. Their sky begins to be overcast with strange and angry clouds, showing that the God of War is manœuvering and drilling his forces, preparatory to that day when the Sun shall refuse to shine—the Moon turn to blood, and the constellations of the Heavens thrown into confusion and disorder, while hail and fire mingled with blood, witness that the seven destroying angels, holding their commission from the Almighty and having the trump of woe to sound, have commenced the work of desolation on the earth. We are called a "Prophet Editor" a "Phrophet Brother," &c., by some of our Editorial friends; and they will not fault us if we conscientiously tell them to prepare for stormy times, not only abroad, but at home also. You cannot appreciate our feelings—you cannot see or feel as we do, because you doubt the truths that Heaven has revealed in these last days. But with the feelings of a Brother we tell you that God has spoken to his creature man in our day, and has declared that plague, war, and desolation shall be visited upon the nations, that peradventure the people may learn righteousness: And if he has spoken through organs that have neither beauty or comliness, do not hastily reject the word. Or if he has employed the weak and base things of the world as his organs, consider well the facts and truths that are communicated. When a man pays you his subscription money, you do not refuse it because you think the hand dirty that tenders it. The money is what you are interested in. It is not the appearance of the hand that presents it. Stumble not, therefore, at the appearance of the messenger; but consider the message, remembering that the most delicious fruits—the choicest food, and the purest water are presented, by natures hand, to your lips, from the apparent dirty and filthy earth.

We retire from the Press for the present: but we bequeath upon it our blessing and good-will; and likewise upon all those who conduct it with upright motives, and with a desire that sterling truth may be exalted in the earth, and wave her imperial scepter over the benighted millions that are now comparatively strangers to her charms. The Press is the gift of Heaven to man; and in our country it is FREE! May its freedom never be restricted or abridged! And none but bigots and tyrants can possess a heart to bridle its tongue. A virtuous and an intelligent Printer is a polished arrow in the quiver of truth. He possesses an art, honored of God—loved and cherished by all the wise and good on earth. He is a nobleman, a prince, and often a Savior to his friends and country. The pen and the press, controled by wise heads and liberal and generous hearts, are the great bulwark of liberty and Independence, and the safe-guard of our free and Heaven-born institutions. May they never be unequally yoked together; and may the Press be free on Columbia's soil,

"While the earth bears a plant
Or the ocean rolls a wave."

We ask, at the close of our valedictory, that our friends will give heed to our former counsel,—We ask also a liberal support for the Guardian and Sentinel, that our successor may be encouraged in his undertaking, assuring him that our Flag never was struck to an enemy—that we never began a war, and were never driven from the field. We have fought some severe battles in which more ink than blood was shed "And the rocket's red glare, bombs bursting in air, Gave proof through the night that OUR FLAG WAS STILL THERE."

If our country or country's laws have any demands on us, we reside in Kanesville, Pottawatamie County, Iowa; and probably may be found here for the greater part of the time until the latter end of May next. If we have done any thing worthy of death or of bonds, we refuse not to abide the consequences or penalty. Our future course will most likely be just about as it has been, let us be where we may. If we deviate at all, we hope we may avoid all our former errors, and walk in the uninterrupted sun-shine of truth. May God bless his Church and people, and overrule the acts of our nation in a way to secure to herself and to the Church the greatest possible good,—and thus we ever expect to pray,

Salvation, the way to obtain it, and the press should ever be alike free to all. Withhold the liberty and freedom of any one of these from any people, and it is a just cause of war. Provided that people use not these liberties to the injury of others.

Thankful to our friends for the many favors of which they have made us the recipient, we tender to them our cordial good-will, and retire for the present, from the Editorial galaxy.

COMMON SENSE will teach any man, if he will be governed by it, that for the honor of a good cause, he should sacrifice his own individual desires and inclinations to a certain extent, avoiding the appearance of evil, and securing to himself a name that can never perish. The wise should profit by a timely word.

WANTED IMMEDIATELY, at this office, five hundred bushels of clean plump oats, free from must, for which 25 cents cash down will be given per bushel. Also cash paid for good potatoes and onions.

PROSPECTUS

FOR PUBLISHING THE FRONTIER GUARDIAN

AND IOWA SENTINEL,

Weekly.

The subscribers, having purchased the Office of the Frontier Guardian, in Kanesville, Iowa, propose publishing a weekly newspaper, under the above head; to commence the First of March, 1852. The GUARDIAN AND SENTINEL will be devoted to Politics, Literature, Arts, Sciences, and to the General news of the day. It will take no part in religious controversies or disputes; but will treat all sects and creeds with due respect and civility.

In politics, it will be essentially WHIG; but its columns will be open to free discussion for all parties. All communications will be inserted that are respectful, and that tend to the public good.

Terms—Two Dollars a Year in Advance.

It will be Edited by JACOB DAWSON, who has had some experience in conducting a journal; and hopes, by strict application to business, to merit public confidence, and to receive a liberal share of the patronage of his fellow citizens.

JACOB DAWSON & CO.

To the Friends and Patrons of the Frontier Guardian.

We have not time, at present to say much to you in regard to our position, in assuming the Editorial chair in the office of the Guardian, and the retiring of its able (former) Editor, Elder ORSON HYDE; but we will endeavor to give you an outline of what we intend to do, and what we mean by the different points hinted at, in our Prospectus, in the next issue; which will be on Thursday, the 4th day of March, under the head of THE FRONTIER GUARDIAN AND IOWA SENTINEL, and will be issued weekly, instead of Semi-monthly, and those who have paid in advance for the Guardian, will be supplied with the same number of papers as if the change had not taken place; but they will get their numbers in just half the time as if it had continued Semi-Monthly.

As Elder Hyde has delivered his farewell address, made his bow, taken up his hat, and is about to leave us in full possession of the Sanctorum, we will thank him very kindly for his courtesy to us, and for his favorable allusion to us in his remarks to you, and will endeavor to demean ourself in such a manner, as in some degree to merit your confidence and his. Now we will bid him a good morning, and invite him to call often, and see how we prosper. As he will still feel interested in the concern, our columns being open to him for any communication tending to arrange and facilitate the emigration of his people and brethren to the West. With these few remarks we close at present.

JACOB DAWSON.

Fruit Seeds and Pits.

It is now ascertained, beyond a doubt, that fruit trees can be successfully cultivated in the Valley of the Great Salt Lake. We have seen ripe peaches there, and have handled them. We have also seen the sturdy little trees, bending under the weight of their delicious fruit in that lonely and secluded Valley.

Therefore, it is the earnest wish of the people of that section, that their friends in the "States," who contemplate removing there this Spring, take with them plenty of apple seeds, peach stones and grape seeds; and all other useful fruit seeds that can be obtained. We endorse their request; and say, that no family ought to go to the Valley without supplying themselves, if possible, with a good stock of fruit seeds; particularly apple, peach, plum and grape, (tame or cultivated.)

Wm. C. Staines, of Salt Lake City, is a great horticulturist,—and will be glad to impart any information to new settlers upon fruit growing in that climate, and will allow them a fair compensation for any of the above named seeds. Take apple seeds and peach stones in particular. Do not go without such seeds, especially if you live where you can beg or buy them, or save them from the apples you eat and use.

Judge Snow on Utah Affairs.

We give, in to-day's paper, the legal opinion of Judge Snow upon the course pursued by Governor Brigham Young, in the discharge of his official duties, as Governor of the Territory of Utah. It is copied from the "Deseret News," and will be read with interest by every one that may see it. It is an able document, and cannot fail to arrest the attention of the public. We are proud to own such a document emanating from a Mormon Judge. It shows a well trained and well balanced mind. The reasoning is purely logical, illustrations lucid, and conclusions irrestible, upon all points that he touches. Had the other officers remained at their posts with Judge Snow, and endured a little longer, it is our belief they would have done greater credit to themselves, greater good to the Territory, and reflected more honor upon the appointing power in the city of Washington.

Kanesville.

It is most ardently hoped and wished by, not only the citizens of this town, but by those of the entire country; and in short, by the great bulk and mass of the people in Western Iowa, of all political and religious creeds, and by those of no creed at all, that Congress will make a donation of ONE MILE SQUARE of land, covering the present site of our town for the benefit of the same, according to Preamble and Memorial, forwarded by the citizens here to our Representative in Congress, Hon. Bernhart Henn, who it seems, is active in enquiring into Indian depredations committed on this Western Frontier of our State; and who seems to be interested for Western Iowa. "Be not weary in well doing."

Our citizens cherish the most lively hopes that the entire delegation from Iowa, will use their utmost exertions to procure the passage of a bill, securing said grant of land which is asked and prayed for by the petioners. This is not a Whig or Democratic measure. It is neither Mormon nor Anti-Mormon; but it is a measure devoutly desired by the mass to see perfected; and we say it is RIGHT AND JUST; and due to the citizens of this Frontier. Our delegation will lose no influence by securing the passage of such a bill, at the present session of Congress.

Corn.

Our farmers may rest assured that corn will command this Spring, a fair and living price if they are not too much in a hurry about selling it, at the ruinous rates that are now offered.

Why is an Editor like a silly dog? Because he barks for every body, and is often rewarded with "get out you villian."

Where is Our Eastern Mail.

We have seen a gentleman direct from Fort Desmoine who says that our Mail is lying at the latter place, about four bushels. It has failed entirely for the last two trips. We hear that the reason of this delay is, the Ferry Boat at Desmoine is not running; and though the carriage and team are on this side, the driver will not start till he gets a team from the other side that pleases him better. Our informant tells us that he swam his horse without trouble. How easy it would be to cross the Mail bags in a skiff, swim the horses and hitch up if there was a proper disposition to discharge their duty.

Thus, Pottawatamie, Mills, and Fremont counties must be deprived of their mail matter for two or three weeks, because a driver did not like to drive the team that was already on this side the river. Is not this some in the West? No, not much! We get but little.

Next, perhaps, we shall be deprived of our mail, because a horses shoe is loose, or a linch pin gone from the carriage, or the driver could not get his drum, or the carriage want greasing; or some other insurmountable obstacle. Wonderful causes of delay! Will not those who have the power to regulate these things, notice such promptness and apply a remedy?

Baurak-Ale and Beneemy, are names given to Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith, in one chapter of the sacred records of our Church. We were present when that portion of our records was made, and so it was said and understood at the time: and now to see certain upstart impostors assume those names to cover their wickedness and to obtain an influence by something mysterious which their own names would deprive them of, reminds us of the Monkey who stole the General's coat and tried to take command of the army. Lucifer might steal and wear the mantle of Gabriel, and it might make him "nigh unto an angel of light,—yet a devil still. In times of trial, there are always some who desire an easier and more convenient doctrine,—a doctrine more consonant with their ease and earthly comforts: These, God hath said he would accommodate by sending them strong delusion that they might believe a lie and be damned who believed not the truth. Jesus said, "Blessed is he whosoever is not offended in me."

Thus, for the accommodation of the unbelieving and luke warm, a Strang, a modern Baneemy, a Baurak-Ale, &c. &c., are sent of God with strong delusion, like the lying spirit was sent of God into the hearts of Ahab's prophets. In the time of harvest, God will gather the good seed, and the tares also. The good seed he takes to himself and gives to the devil the tares. It is but right that every claimant should have his own; and no honest man can object to it. If there was a rich gold mine in the Valley, Strang and Baneemy would go into the shade, as they will any how. The God of this world may blind his dupes, but cannot blind the children of light. All is going right. We will acknowledge the hand of God in all things.

Banking.

Why will the State of Iowa practice what her laws prohibit? Because she is forced by stern necessity to do it. By issuing bills or warrants of "PROMISE TO PAY." She proves to every body the utter fallacy of this exploded party dogma,—exploded in the very treasury of the State, in the very face and eyes of her highest officials. Every county almost is forced to do the same. Why will she deny this privilege and right to the business portion of her citizens? Why worship a "Golden Calf," that can neither see, hear, feel, know, or relieve your wants? This policy forces her citizens to buy bills of exchange in the shape of unauthorized shin plasters, at from one to two per cent premium. Foreign bills are thus thrown into circulation in our State, and become the circulating currency, based upon individual responsibility only. To-day, a man may have $5,000 of this unauthorized trash,—and to-morrow it may not be worth stubble. This is the deranged and precarious condition into which Democratic measures have plunged the finances of the State. Illinois, though a Democratic State, has come to her senses; and by a union of the Whigs and business Democrats, she has passed a general banking law. She has seen her error and renounced it. Why will not Iowa see? If she does not pretty soon, Democracy will loos its grasp on the reins of the the civil government of our rich and fertile State. The increase of business, and the wants and necessities of the people will lead them to speak in thunder tones at the ballot box, and burst asunder the narrow limits and bonds of that misguided and ungenerous policy that would take her children's bread, and give it to strangers.

Vaccine Matter.

At the time when there were two or three cases of Small Pox in our County, Doctor Luke Johnson volunteered, at the request of the citizens, to procure the genuine vaccine matter. He inoculated a cow with the Small Pox virus. In this, he met with some opposition from those who claimed to know that such a course was erroneous. He persevered however, and was successful in obtaining the genuine matter, which has been abundantly proven by happy experiment in the arms of hundreds. He keeps the genuine matter constantly on hand taken directly from the cow; and the public may rely upon the safety and efficacy of his vaccinations. None should neglect this antidote against the loathsome Small Pox. Orders for the matter from a distance can now be filled.

Lamentable Accident.

On the 8th inst., an inquest was held, by Coroner Ellsworth, at Council Point, in this County, on the body of Mr. Joel M. Weldon, who was found rolled up in a blanket upon a burning Coal pit which he was engaged in tending. He probably lay down on the pit because it was warm, and went to sleep, and was smothered and suffocated, his feet and head being badly burned. It was in the night. A verdict was rendered accordingly.

Mr. Weldon was an excellent citizen and, we believe, a good man. He has left a wife and many friends to mourn his loss.

Recommendation.

The civil officers of our County who contemplate removing West this Spring, should make such timely arrangments about vacancies that are likely to occur, as may be necessary to insure an unbroken chain in the political government of the county. There is no objection against any one now holding office, remaining in his official station, that we have heard of, provided he is going to remain. But in case of removal, it is but just and honorable to make all necessary and timely arrangements to preserve our legal organization unbroken and unimpaired.

VOLUME IV. THE FRONTIER GUARDIAN--FEBRUARY 20, 1852. NUMBER 2.

The Frontier Guardian.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1852.

STARTLING TELEGRAPHIC REPORT

FIVE DAYS FROM NEW YORK TO THIS OFFICE, AND TWENTY DAYS FROM LIVERPOOL.

We are indebted to the courtesy of Major J. E. Barrow, for forwarding us the report from St. Joseph, Missouri:

"The Liverpool telegragh from London gives a report of a threatened invasion of England, by Louis Napoleon. The report was currently believed in London.

The Government has ordered 30,000 stand of arms from Birmingham, and 25,000 troops to London.

Orders have been sent to all the principal commanders of ships, to return to England with all dispatch."

Austria and Russia have probably formed a secret alliance with Louis Napoleon. If this be true, the United States can only look upon England as her ally in the van.

Zeal for Law and Order.

We are pleased to see certain members of the bar so loyal and patriotic to sustain the laws of Iowa, as they have shown themselves at a recent public meeting, and also in a handbill respecting the treatment of the Indians. After this, we shall expect to see no one of them withdraw or absent himself from an important committee appointed by the citizens to draft resolutions upon the subject of law and order, as on a former occasion. The strict observance of the law is what every good citizen should regard. The declaration is made, that if any man hickories an Indian in this town according to Major Barrow's letter, the law against assault and battery shall be enforced against him. We are led to inquire whether such a declaration is the result of a purely patriotic impulse to have the code of Iowa duly enforced? Charity would say, yes! But we will give you a key by which you may know for certain. There are certain places in this town where liquor is retailed by the drink. Will any dispute this? If so, will they not put us to the test to prove it? We call these places "grog shops," where the root of most of our troubles exists. The legislature of our State have marked this traffic, an offence against the laws, of a greater magnitude than that of an assault and battery under ordinary circumstances. Now, when these legal gentlemen will enforce the law against this unlawful traffic in ardent spirits, the proof of which can be readily obtained, we will call them gentlemen, and not object to any one of them receiving an appointment to the office of Judge, in case of a vacancy, which is likely to occur. But if they do not enforce the law against these groceries, then let them be silent about Maj. Barrow's letter concerning hickorying the Indians. For an unlawful traffic with the Indians in liquor, &c., is one of the principal causes that renders the hickory necessary. If any depredation is committed by the Indians on this side, then Major Barrow is censured for not keeping his Indians at home. If the unlawful traffic on this side with the Indians vexes the Major, and provokes him to recommend strong and salutary measures,—though not, perhaps, according to the letter of the statue, the poor Major is then bamboozled and raked down

The truth of the whole matter is just about here. Stop the liquor trade on this side, and the fallow ground is broken up. If men of talents would direct their energies right here at home against the liquor traffic, they would contribute more to the public good, than by making a government officer an offender for a word, who seeks by all reasonable means, in the absence of an armed force, to keep the Indians in their own territory. We do not know who has sold or given liquor to the Indians on this side; but several of them have been drunk, and we conclude that Mr. Somebody has furnished them liquor.

"The Church is feverish and disordered when zeal runs high and charity low."

Guardian Office.

Back Numbers of the Guardian, Books of Doctrine and Covenants, Hymn Books, Mormon guides across the plains, School Books, Slate and lead pencils, Writing Paper, Olive Oil, Dried Apples, Sugar, Tea and Coffee, for sale at this Office.

Road.

One Tierce of Crockery Ware in store belonging to William Cutler—deceased, in the Valley of the Salt Lake. His friends can have it by calling at this Office and paying charges; or it will be sold at public sale.

The Council of administration at Fort Kearney O. R., has appointed W. R. English, Esq., of Austin, Fremont County, Iowa, Sutler, in place of R. and W. Campbell, of St. Louis, Missouri, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.

Rich.

It is too rich to suppress,—therefore we publish the quotation. The St. Louis Republican thinks that the returning officers from Utah in their Official Report, have offered no new reasons or facts for deserting their posts. While we are willing to give that Journal credit for general correctness, we think the following from their Official Report, an addition to their former reports; and indeed, the hinge on which they turned from their posts of duty in that distant land.

"We deem it our duty to state in this official communication, that polygamy, or plurality of wives, is openly avowed and practised in the Territory, under the sanction and in obedience to the direct commands of the Church. So universal is this practice, that very few, if any, leading men in that community can be found who have not more than one wife each, which creates a monopoly, and which was peculiarly hard upon the officers sent to reside there."

The reader will observe the word "Monopoly" in the above extract. If the officers had said that the practice of polygamy among the Mormons rendered their stay in that Territory unpleasant, and obnoxious to themselves, it would have betrayed no improper sentiment. But when they talk about this "monopoly" making it "peculiarly hard" for them, the subject changes its complexion. So they left, came home, and cry "sour grapes" in Washington, because others monopolized them all, and they, (poor fellows) got none.

The foregoing quotation and comments, we are satisfied, give a faithful illustration of the peculiar character of one of the officers with whom we had the best opportunity of forming an acquaintance. Of the character of the other officers, in this respect, we claim no particular knowledge, except what we infer from the facts set forth over their own signatures.

Letter to Orson Hyde.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY.
November 29th, 1851.

DEAR BROTHER:—A line from Br. S. W. Richards informs us of your loss of mules on your return. It seems indeed that the Indians have a particular spite against you. Since you left this place, myself in company with Br's Kimball, Professors Pratt and Carrington, George A. Smith, Judge Snow, and several others accompanied the Committee to Parowan Valley, who were appointed to locate the Seat of Government for this Territory. We found a beautiful site on a Creek, heretofore known as Chalk Creek, the Indian name of which is Nuquin. You will learn the particulars of the trip, as also more extended particulars from the Deseret News, the improved appearance of which in amount of matter and size cannot fail to recommend itself to the patronage of all the Saints.

Since our return my health has not been as good as could be wished, although I have been about the most of the time. The times are continuing rather dull for the merchants and traders, but we find plenty to do. The Tabernacle is progressing, and will if the present fine weather continues, soon be secured and ready for use although we do not expect to fully finish it before Spring.

Our other buildings are principally covered, and all the works seem to be progressing as well as could be expected at this inclement season of the year.

The Indians are generally peacably inclined at the present time, and in fact all seems quiet and peaceful throughout all the settlements in the vallies of the mountains.

The settlements are now becoming quite extended. The two settlements made this Fall in Juab, on Salt Creek, and Millard County, on Nuquin, render it quite safe to travel with but a small escort from here to Parowan, in Iron County. There is also an extension of that settlement South about twenty-five miles, on what has been known on the Big Muddy, now called Coal Creek, being the Creek, in the Kanyon of which Coal is found. Br. Carruthers has been appointed to preside at that place, and about seventy men have located there. Br. Bladen and others who understand the manufacturing of Iron, are in the Company, and we indulge the hope of soon having the pleasure of announcing the IRON MANUFACTORY, in successful operation. We can now travel to that place by making about thirty-five miles a day, without camping away from settlements, more than two or three nights, a distance of two hundred and eighty-five miles. We have made arrangements with the brethren of San Pete, to furnish on the ground early in the Spring, in Fillmore City, all the Joiner work ready prepared for the State House, one wing of which we contemplate having in readiness for the next winter's Legislature.

I observe an article in your paper concerning a letter published in the St. Louis Intelligencer. I do not know that it is worth while to pay any attention to such nonsense, the name of the man who wrote the letter is Major Singer. He was embroiled in difficulty all winter with a man whose name I do not remember, though not a Mormon, and finally got into law suits, which rather terminated against him and applied to me to assist him. I used all the influence for him that I could to induce the officers to give their costs so that his property should not be sacrificed that he might not be prevented from pursuing his journey. They did so, and he together with all the rest, went on together as I am informed.

Bishop Clark could give you all the particulars if it shall become necessary to inquire any further into the matter, as it all occurred in his vicinity, and if I mistake not partially before him.

Presuming that you are very busy preparing to emigrate hither in the Spring, and hoping to see you here with your establishment in successful operation at an early day.

I close by subscribing myself,

Your Friend and Brother,
In the Gospel of Peace.
BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Utah and Congress.

In the House of Representatives on the 10th ult. the following proceedings were had:

By unanimous consent, a message from the President, transmitting a report to the State Department, upon the condition of things in Utah, from the returned United States territorial officers, were presented to the House.

Mr. Polk conceived this to be an important matter. He moved its reference to the committee on territories, and that it be printed.

Mr. Bernhisel, taking the floor, moved that this report be referred to the committee on the judiciary, and that it be printed, and addressed the House, holding that the report was a gross libel upon Governor Young, and the Mormons from end to end. He designed at the proper time to move for the appointment of a commissioner to repair to Utah to take testimony, the result of which, he knew, would be to prove the gross falsehood of the representations of the returning United States officers of the territories.

Messrs. Stuart and Clingman (members of that committee) argued to show that this report should appropriately go to the committee on territories.

Mr. Clingman then moved the previous question, but withdrew it at the request of Mr. Giddings, who sustained the motion of Mr. Bernhisel, for the reference to the committee on the judiciary.

Mr. McDannahan advocated the reference to the committee on territories.

Mr. Bernhisel withdrew the motion to refer to the committe on the judiciary.

A motion to adjourn being made here, it was not agreed to.

The reading of the report being called for, it was not ordered by the House; and it was next referred to the committee on territories, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Bernhisel desired leave to move a resolution giving the committee on Territories power to send for persons and papers in considering this report; also for the appointment of a commissioner by the Speaker to proceed to Utah to take testimony in the case, and to authorise the delegate to employ counsel for the Mormons in the case at the public charge.

But, many members objecting, leave to introduce this resolution was not granted.

On the Death of a Young Brother.

BY MISS LAURA M. HYDE.

Softly fall the dews of evening
O'er that loved one's early grave,—
Yet to think of him is pleasing
For our Jesus died to save.

Forest trees o'er him are waving
Fleecy boughs in verdure drest;
And the little streamlet's laving
The sweet water lillie's crest.

These mark the spot where we weeping
Laid him down to sleep in dust;
And it seem'd our hearts were breaking,
But in God we put our trust.

Though we hope he is enjoying,
Pleasures with the kindred blest;
Still a sister's heart is yearning
For the one her love caressed.

In the grave we left him lying,
And we wait with anxious eyes,
'Till the trump of God is sounding,
When that lov'd one will arise.

Query!

If Governor Young of Utah, is so disloyal to the Government of the United States, and its officers as some would have him to be; why should he name the Seat of Government, FILLMORE City, and the County, MILLARD County? We answer, it is because that the Governor cherishes the most amicable feelings toward the present Excutive! Read the following from the Deseret News, of November 29th, 1851.

President's Visit South.

On the 21st of Oct., ult., Presidents Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, and elder George A. Smith, the Board of Commissioners for locating the Seat of Government for Utah, his honor Judge Snow, Gen. D. H. Wells, Major Rose, Sub Indian Agent, and several other citizens, left G. S. L. City, on a southerly tour, for Pauvan Valley.

Passing through Utah and Juab vallies, by the lower ford of the Sevier, and across Lake Valley, in 151 miles they reached Chalk Creek, in Pauvan Valley October 28th.

October 29th, the site for the Seat of Government was determined, about one mile east of the ford, at the west slope of the table lands, lying on each side of Chalk Creek, and the survey thereof began; this City is called Fillmore, and the County Millard. The few Indians who appeared at the City, professed very great friendship, and promised good behavior to Bishop Call and company, who were on the ground, ready to build a fort forthwith, a work preparatory to fencing fields, and building up the City.

The Governor and company returned by way of San Pete Valley, where Judge Snow organized the Court of the 2d Judicial District, at the City of Manti, the County of San Pete, and reached G. S. L. City on the 7th inst.

The health of the whole party was good, the weather delightful, the vallies lovely; and the company were received in all the settlements with the highest marks of consideration and gladness; and the unity, contentment, and prosperity of the settlements visited, are truly wonderful to any person who was acquainted with this country only four years ago. The report of the Commissioners, and history of the country on the route, we anticipate for next.

Who is the worst person in town? He or she who has much evil to say of many! and little good of any.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.—Hon. John M. Bernhisel, of Utah—Hon. B. Henn, of Iowa, and Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, of Illinois, will accept our thanks for public favors.

Railroad.

We are decidedly in favor of the Great Central Route for the construction of a Railroad from Lafayette, Indiana, by the way of Peoria and Burlington, to the Missouri river, near Kanesville. This is the Great Central Route, and we are in or it We have signed the Memorial, Award.

"My Native Land" by "MYSELF," draws the highest prize. If "VIRGINIA," on "Evening Thoughts and the Dying Scholar" had not been incorrect in measure, she might have bourne off the Palm. Her productions are sweet and chaste. "Random Thoughts on Day and Night," by "KANESVILLINA," the best prose. "BY MYSELF" on "Hope," incorrect. "Hope" is not "the prime mover of all our actions," but Faith is. Faith is the incentive, and Hope the prospective. Still, it is a well written piece, "MYSELF and KANESVILLINA" are the same person. She can therefore only draw one prize.

Ourself may therefore expect to receive a visit from "MYSELF," and ourself will pay to "MYSELF," Three Dollars, and ourself will pay to Miss "VIRGINIA," Two Dollars. The sum and substance of the award by the respective Judges. Please call and receive your prize money.

The election in Great Salt Lake county, on Saturday, November 15th, resulted in the choice of Edward Hunter and Orson Pratt, as Counsellors, and John Brown Representative, to the Legislative Assembly.—(Deseret News.

International Monthly Magazine.

The January number of this valuable Periodical is before us; it contains a brief review of historical facts, that we think cannot fail to amuse the reader.

The views of the Editor relative to the Bloomer Costume, are rather too hasty and severe, although reasonable. Many of the fair, out of respect to American genius and go-aheaditiveness have put on the garb, more out respect to country, than to the notoriety gained by its appearance; while at the same time its adaptation to female modesty has not been fully considered by them. Therefore we excuse the virtuous and good ladies from the following odium: "That a really respectable woman has never yet assumed the Bloomer Costume." And hereafter we hope she never will.

TO ALL WHO WANT THEIR SHEEP HERDED AND DRIVEN TO THE VALLEY.

HAVING secured the services of English Shepherds of great experience, who are well supplied with thoroughly trained Shepherd dogs. I am prepared to contract for the herding and driving of ONE THOUSAND or TWELVE HUNDRED sheep to the Valley of the Great Salt Lake this season; and flatter myself that, with the above facilities, I shall be enabled to give entire satisfaction to all who will entrust their sheep to my care. My terms for driving are, the ONE HALF OF THE NUMBER DELIVERED IN THE VALLEY. I expect to be ready to start by the 20th day of May, and will receive flocks of sheep, and receipt for them any time between the first day of May, and the time of starting. Shearing should be done at as late a period previous to the time of starting as possible; or else the "needle" growing upon the Sandy plains, will adhere to the wool and seriously injure, if not destroy the sheep. For those whose early departure shall prevent them shearing their own flocks; I will wash, shear, and dispose of the wool for the one half, and will pay the proceeds of their shars, to their order here or in the Valley, as they may wish.

If I should be from home when flocks are brought for delelivery, Elder Duncan Campbell, will act as my Agent in receiving and receipting for them. Each flock must be marked PECULIARLY with some substance that will not rub off.

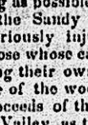
FRUIT, CHOICE FRUIT.



THE Subscriber living in Carterville, near Kanesville, has on hand a large number of cuttings of the finest varieties of the Grape; also a fine lot of Black, White, and Red Currant bushes of one year's growth. The Grape cuttings were taken from the choicest samples of the Muskat, Muskatine, and Black Hamburg vines growing in England. The Black Currants were taken from bushes bearing berries as large as cherries, and the White and Red Currants are of the best varieties.

These cuttings were sent from England in the year 1851, as an experiment, with the hope of introducing the choice fruits, for which England is so famous, into the settlements of the Saints in the Far West. Those going to the Valley in 1852, will do well to each carry a few with them, which can be done by putting them in pots with rich mould.

The above are on sale, and all who desire to supply themselves with choice fruits will do well to call soon.

ELI B. KELSEY.

N. B. I have also about thirty choice Peach trees of two years growth, which I will sell seperately, or in connection with the property, upon which I now reside, consisting of a two acre lot, with two good log houses, log stable, cattle shed &c., on it.

Important to the Saints.

Read the following and be governed thereby!

THINGS WANTED.—A few tons of nails, of various sizes, from window blind brads to twelve pennies; not a pound to be had in this city, for gold, that we know of.

Five hundred envelopes wanted at our office, for posting official documents. If there are any in this city, we wish our friends would inform us where.

CONSOLATION.—For the consolation of those who are living out of doors for want of nails to build houses, we would observe that a company has recently gone to Iron county, for the purpose of erecting a furnace; and if they are successful, as we confidently anticipate they will be, not many years 1 no! months will not pass before they will have iron in our market; then if a machine can be procured we can make our own nails, with which to build our houses. But a pound of nails is so much heavier than a pound of feathers, silks, ar even broadcloth, that no one can afford to transport them for less than fifty per cent additional cost upon cartage, and impossible to be had at that extra. Therefore, those who may be immigrating to this place within a year or two, had better bring nails, if they want a ready sale for their goods; and as to envelopes, we understand a paper mill has commenced, or is about commencing to be built on Cottonwood, and those brethren in the vicinity of the mill will do well to put in their labor tithing, and help build said mill as fast as possible, so that we can have envelopes of our own. home. domestic manufacture. But what shall we do for rags! Let all the people of Deseret save their rags, every one of their rags; and pretty soon they will be better than gold, for they will buy nails and envelopes, but gold will buy neither at present.

GENERAL OUTFITTING AGENCY.

For Emigrants to Oregon, California, and Utah.

At Kanesville, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE undersigned having been engaged in the Mercantile and Outfitting business, at the above place, for nearly three years, has been induced to offer his services to the emigrating publicas a general Commission Agent in the outfitting business. He will fill all orders for cattle, horses, wagons, and carriages, harnesses and saddles, grain, provisions, groceries, medicines, merchandize, and necessaries of all kind required by emigrants to the west.

His long and thorough knowledge of business in that department, together with the practical knowledge of every thing required by emigrants, (having twice crossed the plains,) he considers to have valuable and sufficient qualifications for the business; and he can assure those interested that they can purchase any necessary outfitting articles, (cattle and horses excepted,) and wagons in particular, better suited to the journey than at any other point, counting transportation.

Grain and provisions can doubtless be purchased on better terms at an early date, than they could be obtained for in the Spring.

POETRY.

The Slanderer.

BY MRS. A. M. HEMENWAY.

Go, search creation's wide domain,
From south to northern pole;
No being half so mean is found,
That e'er possessed a soul.

From house to house these demons go,
Their neighbor's faults proclaim;
With falsehood dark and deep they strive,
To blast the fairest name.

These treacherous foes are often seen
In sanctimonious guise;
While on their vile deceitful tongues,
The deadly venom lies.

E'en friendship's charm by them is riven—
The friends on whom we trust,
Oft blinded by their slanderous tales,
Are scattered like the dust.

Perchance we meet—they know us not,
Their smile has passed away;
The heart that once with kindness beat
Is chilled in cold dismay.

'Tis then a deep and painful thrill
Steals through the wounded breast,
That seems to crush each noble thought
That e'er the heart possessed.

No poisonous winds that swept the plain,
Can with their tongue compare;
For oft they pierce the silent tomb,
To wreak their vengeance there.

The bitter wrong may lie concealed,
May now securely sleep;
Yet slander, though it slumbers long,
Its sure reward shall reap.

MISCELLANY.

Hints for Social Life—Suicide.

Dr. W. H. Cook contends, not only that suicide is one of the most fearful crimes in the calendar, but that any course of action that injures the system or shortens life is a form of suicide, and will be rewarded as such at the last great judgement, particularly when those who have been following such a course, have been warned of its fatal tendency. He then specifies the following as among the habits of the age, by which health is impaired and premature death is secured:

Wearing thin shoes on a damp night and in rainy weather.

Building on the "air-tight principle."

Leading a life of enfeebling, stupid laziness, and keeping the mind in a round of unnatural excitement by reading novels.

Going to balls through all sorts of weather in the thinnest possible dress.

Dancing in crowded rooms till in a complete perspiration, and then going home thro' the damp air.

Sleeping on feather beds in seven-by-nine bed-rooms.

Surfeiting on hot and high stimulating dishes.

Beginning in childhood on tea, and going on from one step of stimulation to another, through coffee, chewing, smoking and drinking.

Marrying in haste, getting an incongenial companion, and living the rest of life in mental dissatisfaction.

Living encased in dirt because too lazy to bathe the body.

Eating without taking time to masticate the food.

Allowing the love of gain so to absorb our minds, as not to leave us time to attend to health.

Following an unhealthy occupation because money can be made by it.

Tempting the appetite with niceties when the stomach says, No.

Contriving to keep in a continual worry about something or nothing.

Retiring at midnight and rising at noon.

Gormandizing between meals.

Neglecting to take proper care of yourself when a simple disease first appears.—[Iowa Star.

Five Hundred Persons Destroyed by a Water Spout.

On Saturday intelligence was received at Lloyd's, London, under date Malta, Monday, the 8th ultimo, of a most awful occurrence, at the Island off Sicily, which had been swept by two enormous water-spouts accompanied by a terrific hurricane. Those who witnessed the phenomena described the water-spouts as two immense spherical bodies of water reaching from the clouds, their cones nearly touching the earth, and, as far as could be judged, at a quarter of a mile apart, traveling with immense velocity. They passed over the island near Marsala. In their progress houses were unroofed, trees uprooted, men and women, horses, cattle and sheep raised up, drawn into their vortex, and borne on to destruction; during their passage rain descended in cataracts, accompanied with hail stones of enormous size, and masses of ice. Going over Castellamarre, near Stabia, it destroyed half the town, and washed two hundred of the inhabitants into the sea, who all perished. Upward of five hundred persons have been destroyed by this terrible visitation, an immense amount of property, the country being laid waste for miles. The shipping in the harbor suffered severely, many vessels being destroyed, and their crews drowned. After the occurrence, numbers of dead human bodies were picked up, all frightfully mutilated and swollen.—[St. Louis Times.

Use of Good Men in Bad Times.

It is very necessary that good men should live in very bad times, not only to reprieve a wicked world, that God may not utterly destroy it as he once did in the days of Noah, when all flesh had corrupted its way; but also to season human conversation, to give check to wickedness, and to revive the practice of virtue by some great and bright examples, and to redress those violences and injuries which are done under the sun; at least to struggle and contend with a corrupt age, which will put some stop to the growing evil, and scatter such seeds of virtue as will spring up in time. It is an argument of God's care of the world, that antidotes grow in the neighborhood of poisons; that the most degenerate ages have some excellent men, who seem to be made on purpose for such a time, to stem the torrent, and to give some ease to the miseries of mankind. —[Dean Sherlock.

Interesting Hebrew Relic.

By the politeness of Col. Lea, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, we have been shown a relic of great rarity and interest, left for a few days at the Bureau. It was brought from the Pottawatamie Reservation, on the Kansas river, by Dr. Lykins, who has been residing there nearly twenty years out of thirty he has spent on the frontier. It consists of four small rolls or strips of parchment, closely packed in the small compartments of a little box or locket of about an inch cubical content. On these parchments are written, in a style of unsurpassed excellence, and far more beautiful than print, portions of the Pentateuch, to be worn as frontlets, and intended as stimulants to the memory and moral sense.

Dr. Lykins obtained it from Pategwe, a Pottawatamie, who got it from his grandmother, a very old woman. It has been in this particular family about fifty years. They had originally two of them; but on one occasion, as the party in possession were crossing a rapid in some river in the lake country of the North, the other was irrecoverably lost. The one lost was believed by the Indians to contain an account of the creation of the world. That brought by Dr. Lykins has been kept for a long period in the medicine bag of the tribe, used as a charm, and never allowed to suffer any exposure, until, by strong entreaty, and the great influence he had with Topinepee, the principal Pottawatamie chief, he was permitted to bring it on to Washington, but under a firm pledge to restore it on his return. It has hitherto been most carefully kept from the rapacious vision of the white man. Pategwe had it in his possession many years before his curiosity prompted him to cut the stitches of the cover and disclose the contents. But this coming to the knowledge of old Billy Caldwell, chief of the Council Bluff branch of the tribe, he strenuously advised Pategwe to shut it up and keep it close, and say nothing about having it. Dr. Lykins came to a knowledge of the circumstance of its possession from a half-breed.

The wonder is, how this singular article came into their possession. When asked how long they can trace back its history, they reply they cannot tell the time when they had it not. The question occurs here, does not this circumstance give some color to the idea, long and extensively entertained, that the Indians of our continent are more or less Jewish in their origin?—[Nat. Intelligencer.

Palace of the Popes.

The ancient palaces of the Popes, and the most magnificent in the world stands on the right hand of the Tiber, at Rome. The palace takes its name from the hill on which it stands, derived from one of those ancient impositions known as oracular deities, called by the Romans "Jupiter Vaticanus." Who began this building is not known, but it was occupied by Charlemagne, more than a thousand years ago, and has been increased by successful Popes, until it has reached its present immense extent. The number of rooms in the Vatican exceeds 4420, and its treasures in marbles, bronzes, frescoes, statutes, paintings and gems, are unequalled in the world, and its library is the richest in Europe. The length of the museum of statutes alone is computed to be a mile.

Home and Women.

Our homes—what is their corner-stone but the virtue of women? And on what does social well-being rest, but on our homes? Must we not trace all other blessings of civilized life to the door of our private dwellings? Are not our hearth-stones—guarded by the holy forms of conjugal, filial, and pure love, (the corner-stones of church and state,)—more sacred than either—more necessary than both? Let our temples crumble, and our academies decay—let every public edifice, our halls of justice—and our capitols of state, be levelled with the dust—but spare our homes. Man did not invent, and he cannot improve or abrogate them. A private shelter to cover in two hearts dearer to each other than all the world—high walls to seclude the profane eyes of every human being—seclusion for children to feel that mother is a peculiar name—this is home, and here is the birth-place of every virtuous impulse, of every sacred thought. Here the church and the state must come for their origin and support. Oh, spare our homes! The love we experience there, gives us our faith in an Infinite Goodness; the purity and disinterested tenderness of home is our foretaste and our earnest of a better world. In the relations there established and fostered, do we find through life the chief solace and joy of existence. What friends deserve the name compared with those whom a birth right gave us! One mother is worth a thousand friends—one sister, dearer and truer than twenty intimate companions. We who have played on the same hearth under the light of smiles—who date back to the same season of innocence and hope—in whose veins runs the same blood—do we not find that years only make more sacred and important the tie that binds us? Coldness may spring up—distance may seperate—different spheres may divide; but those who can love anything, who continue to love at all, must find that the friends who God himself gave are wholly unlike any we can choose for ourselves, and that the yearning for these is the strongest spark in our expiring affection.—[Organ and Reveille.

STEAM FERRY BOAT FOR SALE.

THE undersigned offer for sale their Steam Ferry Boat, now lying at the Lexington Wharf.

Said Boat is in good repair and condition, and has an Engine of great strength and power. We offer the Boat at about half of the original cost of such boats, for the reason that the business here will not justify running a Steam Boat.

For terms apply to the undersigned, or to the Editor of the Frontier Guardian.

TO THE TRAVELING PUBLIC.

THE undersigned have purchased Smither's Ferry, on the Nodaway River, at Hollister's Mills, on the road leading from St. Joseph and Savannah to Council Bluffs, Kanesville, Linden, Austin, and Plattesville; this being the nearest and best road to said places or towns. They have fitted their boat with oars, in case of high water, and good ropes across the river; have good attentive hands to manage the boats, and have put the ferriage down as low as possible, as you will see by the following list of charges:

Loaded wagon and two yoke of oxen	40 cts.
Unloaded " " " " "	25 "
Loaded four horse wagon	40 "
Unloaded " "	25 "
Loaded two " "	25 "
Unloaded " "	20 "
Man and horse	10 "
Oxen per yoke	5 "
Horses and Cows, each	3 "
Sheep and hogs	3 "

Only treble those rates will be charged when the water is from bluff to bluff. They will also pay strict attention to having the said road kept in as good repair as possible, through Andrew and Holt Counties, and they hope, by strict attention to said Ferry, to merit a share of the public patronage.

MAMMOTH BLUE MORTAR

St. Joseph, Missouri.

E. H. HAYCRAFT, having purchased the interest of Dr. J. B. HOWARD in the Drug Store of Haycraft & Howard, still continue the Drug business at the old stand where he will be much pleased to see all the former customers of the house.

He wishes it to be distinctly understood that he will sell as cheap as good articles in his line can be sold in Upper Missouri; and if an article is not as is represented it may be returned.

As all of his sales are made for cash in hand he can afford to sell very low, and he invites the attention of his customers to this particular fact.

He is the wholesale agent for JOHN BULL'S and S. P. TOWNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA. Receiving his supplies directly from the Proprietor's, andcan furnish them at St. Louis Wholesale prices, thus saving the expense of freight, and risk in transportation.

The celebrated Mexican Mustang Liniment is also offered by the dozen or gross at the wholesale rates.
